PLAINFIELD REPUBLICANS MET CHOICE OF OF THEIR PARTY FOR GOVERNOR OF JERSEY.

Was the Chief Speaker at a Mass-Meeting Held in Reform Hall Last Evening.

LEFT TO SPEAK AT MEETINGS IN ELIZABETH.

U. S. SENATOR KEAN ACCOMPANIED HIM AND ALSO MADE A SHORT SPEECH.

Col. Mason W. Tyler Presided at the Meeting and Roundly Denounced the Democratic Party—Edmund Wilson, of Red Bank, Was the Other Speaker of the Evening.

Following the general custom the Republicans of this city, through their city committee, planned to generate enthusiasm in the present campaign by holding a mass meeting at which the gubernatorial candidate, Franklin Murphy, and the county and city candidates might meet face to face with the voters. This affair took place last evening, when a goodly number of citizens gathered at Reform Hall to listen to the issues of the campaign discussed by able party representatives.

There is undoubtedly more political excitement in the local campaign than that of the State at large, but notwithstanding that fact many were anxious to see the standard bearer of the dominant party. The flying trip made by the gubernatorial party is fast drawing to a close and Mr. Murphy's engagements are particularly numerous. It was expected that the party would arrive on the train reaching here at 5 27 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but it got here on the train due at Plainfield at 6.30 o'clock, having come from Elizabeth.

The contingent included Mr. Murphy and his son, Franklin Murphy, Jr., Congressman Parker, of Newark, U. S. Senator John Kean, of Elizabeth, and also three newspaper men, Mr. Snyder, Jersey editor of the New York Tribune, Mr. Allen, of the Newark News, and a representative of the Newark Advertiser. These men were met at the station by Former Mayor Alex. Gilbert.

Upon their arrival the visitors were driven to Mr. Gilbert's residence where they were dined. Up to this time there was no enthusiasm demonstrated. It was shortly before the appointed time for the meeting when the party was escorted to the hall. Plans had been made to have a short street parade between Mr. Gilbert's residence and the meeting place, but this was abandoned on account of lack of time. When the party entered the hall it was met by the band and a number of active politicians

On the platform with the gubernatorial party were the members of the city committee, the local candidates and the officers of the meeting as well as the vice-presidents, who were F. H. Andrews, Ralph I. Tolles, Robert L. Lee, J. Evarts Tracy, W. H. Schoonmaker, L. V. F. Randolph and George Noonan. When the room was quite well filled Mayor O. L. Jenkins, chairman of the city committee, called the meeting to order and introduced, as permanent chairman, his opponent in the recent mayoralty contest, Colonel Mason W. Tyler.

On assuming the chair Col. Mason W. Tyler said: "Fellow citizens: You have honored me by asking me to preside. I could not claim the privilege, because I have not followed the rules of your order, and hence I appreciate the honor all the more. This is a distinguished occasion. We are not used to having an United States Senator, and it is unprecedented for us to have a next governor with us on an occasion like this. In this campaign there are no National issues. It is not a question of National politics, but simply a matter of home administration. It is simply a question whether you desire the future administration of the State to be Democratic or Republican. There was a time when the Democratic party was known for its economical administrations, but now you will have to hunt long and far before you will find any good in that party.

"The Democratic party is a synonym for all moral and political rottenness. It fostered the slave trade; advocated repudiation, stood for the greenback heresy and the free silver issue. In New Jersey it dragged the State to the race track legislation, and today the party with its ally, Tammany Hall, in New York, is in the business of promoting crime and pandering to vice. How any person within 100 miles of New York can have the face to vote the Democratic ticket is more than I can understand. In this campaign our candidate is a patriot who strongly resembles the late President. He has been a great business man, and no one will deny that Franklin Murphy on this score will stand any amount of examination. I take great pleasure in introducing to you the next governor, Franklin Murphy."

The gubernatorial candidate in his address sketched the political condition in ancient days and compared it with the situation today and contrasted the history of Republicanism with that of Democracy. He said: "Mr. Chairman and fellow citizens of Plainfield: I am very glad to be with you a few moments near the end of an active and important campaign. Your chairman said that it is difficult to understand how a man could vote the Democratic ticket. I know why some will and why some others will not. This question of party politics is one which in its foundation is hard to understand, because both the Republican and the Democratic party desire the best men, the most capable men and the ablest men in office; men whose honesty is unquestioned; men who understand the wishes of the people, and men who know how far to go to move upward the interest of the State to a higher level.

"If you go back to the beginning it was simply the government of the few for the many, and all the many wanted was food, clothing and shelter. As time went on the mental and moral development of the people quickened and they were lifted up. Now we have what the world has never seen before, a government where the ballot box is equal for all. That government is best which takes the best care of the individual and that is found in this country. Just as long as governments exist political questions will vex the people. There will come a time when morals are better and advantages are better, but there will never come a time when political questions will not beset the people.

"You will say this is far away from the questions of the campaign. There never was a Nation which did more for the people than this Nation, and there never was a party which did more for this Nation than the Republican party. Comparing the parties with each other, what the Republican party has accomplished has been so far in advance of what the Democrats have done that the Democrats could not be reached by a long-distance telephone. It is a National campaign, because there can be no election in New Jersey without the result affecting the entire Nation.

"Another reason why just at this time we should continue the party in power is that because we have in Washington an ideal President, who represents pure American manhood, and you and I want to hold up his hands. The issues are peculiarly State questions. We ask for your endorsement. The Democratic party has never dared to come to you and say that it will give a better government than we. They come to you with CITY NURSE'S WORK.

Reviewed at Meeting of Committee Under the Supervision of Which She Works.

A meeting of the nurse's committee of the City Union of the King's Daughters was held yesterday morning in the Y. M. C. A. parlor and was well attended.

The report of Miss Anderson, the city nurse, was read. It showed that she had made 178 visits during the month of October. There are four chronic cases which will require the attention of the nurse during the coming winter. From present appearances the committee has a busy season ahead of it, but all are prepared to do their utmost to faithfully discharge their arduous duties.

Miss Anderson has been granted a fortnight's vacation. During her absence the work has devolved upon Miss Delaney, the predecessor of Miss Anderson as city nurse.

TRIED HALLOWE'EN STUNTS.

PLEASANT SOCIAL AT PARK AVE. BAPTIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

Endeavorers Played Games Appropriate to the Occasion—Some of the Games.

The Hallowe'en social given last evening in the Park Avenue Baptist church by the Christian Endeavor Society was a complete success and was largely attended by members and friends. The evening was passed in playing games.

One of the games that proved interesting was the hiding of three pennies in a cup of flour. Each person took turns cutting off a slice of the flour, the one finding the pennies being obliged to take the coin out with their teeth. In the game "Going to Jerusalem," Nelson VanWinkle was the successful one, securing the ticket. In "ducking for apples," two sides broke even.

The stunt of the evening was called the "Mystic Maze." The entire audience formed into one long line. The lights were then turned out, and the line was made to pass through several darkened rooms representing caves. On the way they passed the "Mystic Shrine," where the "Queen of Fortunes," impersonated by Miss Bessie Giles, gowned in white, handed to each a slip of paper containing their fortune.

At the conclusion of the games, refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed. The social committee having the affair in charge consisted of Miss Elizabeth Runyon, Miss Bessie Giles, Miss Helen Cuming, Ernest Whitney and Miss Annie Wyckoff.

Played Seasonable Games.

In honor of her son, George Meyer, Mrs. Charles F. Meyer, Sr., of South Second street, tendered a party last evening to twenty-five young people. A delightful time was had by all in ducking for apples and playing the other games which are a feature of Hallowe'en. The affair terminated with the serving of refreshments at a late hour.

Only One Board Walk Left.

W. B. Codlagton and Charles Hand are preparing to lay stone flagging in front of their properties on Elmwood place. This will displace about all but one of the board walks formerly on that street. The one board walk remaining is in bad condition and liable to cause serious injury to people who go that way after dark.

Honest Dealing Does It.

M. Weinberger, manager of the New York Clothing Company store at 214 West Front street, says that the company has had the largest sale of clothing and furnishings this fall, than ever before. Honest dealing and big value for your money is the secret of success at this store.

Severely Burned.

Louise Danz, the four-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary Danz, of Watchung avenue, who was so severely burned a few days ago, is in a serious condition. She is threatened with pneumonia, Dr. Arthur H. Dundon, of Somerset street, is the attending physician.

COMPANION OF MISS STONE IN CAPTIVITY.

Interesting Sketch by Rev. C. L. Goodrich in Current Issue of The Congregationalist.

IN HANDS OF THE BRIGANDS.

STORY OF THE CAREER OF MME. TSILKA, A GREEK.

Facts of The Life of One of The Women Captured by Turkish Brigands And Reported to Have Died.

In the current issue of the Congregationalist there is a very interesting article, entitled "Miss Stone's Companion in Captivity," from the pen of Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church in this city. It gives some interesting facts concerning one of the women captured by the Turkish brigands and who is reported to have since died. The article is herewith reproduced through the courtesy of the Congregationalist. It is as follows:

Miss Stone's name has been on every one's lips of late. The interest in her and desire for her release have been intense. But comparatively little thought has been given to her companion, Mme. Tsilka, because she is not an American and few in America know who she is. Those who do know her, however, feel that she is one in whom Christians of America may well take a deep interest, and that her presence with Miss Stone makes double reason for speedy raising of the ransom.

But a little more than a year ago she went from this country, to which she had come to fit herself for unselfish labors among her own people. Some who have not recognized her in the reports, under the name of Mme. Tsilka, will know her under her maiden name, Katerine Demetrius Stephanood.

She is the daughter of a Greek priest of Bansko, Macedonia. Her father had such pride in his child that he wished to make her distinguished by doing something for her which other fathers did not do for their daughters. So he sent her to school. But the school was for boys; no girls were expected. The boys made sport of her, the teacher was rude to her—the result was that one day she fled from the school in tears, feeling that she could never go back. But she wished to learn. She knew that in another quarter of the town there was a school whose teacher had been taught in an American mission. Converts of the missions were despised by the members of the Greek church. Children were forbidden to go near them. But this child found her way thither and stood hesitating without.

The teacher came out to her with a smile and led her in. There she met only kindness. "It seemed like heaven" to the child. The end of the session came all too soon. That night she dared not confess what she had done. The next day saw her again in the place she had enjoyed so much. But confession had to be made at last, and then her parents, greatly incensed, forbade her to visit the school again. "If I cannot go to that school I will die," was the surprising answer. The next morning she would not rise, she would not eat, not a mouthful did she taste that day or the next. With singular determination in a child of eight—shall we not call it a providentially directed obstinacy, to open the way to a larger life?—she would not take one morsel of food till her parents were constrained to let her have her way. Soon the teacher wished to know the girl's parents. He called to see them, to the girl's consternation and her father's great displeasure. But with Christian tact he won their good will, and she was allowed to continue her studies unmolested.

When she was thirteen years of age her father arranged for her marriage. The groom had been selected, the ceremony was to take place, but the bride disappeared. With enlightenment beyond her parents and the customs of her land, and with remarkable courage and firmness, she refused to enter into the marriage arrangements. Instead, re-enforced by her teacher's influence, she gained permission to leave home to attend a school of higher grade. Later she graduated from the American Board school at Samokov. And by that time she had won more than intellectual culture—she had won her mother, her brothers and her father to Christ.

But she was still unsatisfied. She felt that she was not yet fitted for the

In addition to members of the club there were friends present, making 100 in all. In the fore part of the evening good old Scotch singing was the feature, everyone taking part. There were a number of excellent violin solos given by Wm. Wilson, after which dancing was commenced and continued until midnight. At that time a bounteous supper was served, composed of Scotch dishes and delicacies.

DENIES STORY.

Assessor French Says He Did Not Promise to Deliver Sixty Republican Votes For McMurtry.

Assessor Elston M. French is indignant over the statement made by Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., at the Republican mass-meeting in the borough Tuesday evening to the effect that the Assessor had promised to deliver sixty Republican votes for Calvin D. McMurtry, the Democratic nominee for sheriff.

Mr. French says: "While I am heartily in favor of the candidacy of Mr. McMurtry, knowing his ability to attend to the duties of the office and believing him to be a better man than the Republican candidate, I never made any statement to the effect that I would deliver sixty Republican votes or any other number of votes. I do not claim to be a politician and am not in the business of delivering votes.

"A few days ago Senator Reed asked me if the statement attributed to me is correct and I emphatically denied it, and do not see why he has seen fit to spread this false report, in the face of my denial of the accusation."

BOROUGH REGISTRY.

The Total Number of Voters Registered Is 1271.

There are exactly 1271 names on the registry lists of the borough. In the First district the result of the canvas from house to house, produced 632 eligible voters, and ten more were added Tuesday. In the Second district there are 639 names on the registry list and of this total number ten were added at the last sitting of the board.

In the barn at the country place of Mrs. Henry E. Hall, of Fanwood, a delightful Hallowe'en party was given last evening. Guests from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Plainfield enjoyed a real country dance, for which Frazee's orchestra furnished the music. The interior of the barn was gayly decorated with Chinese lanterns and bunting. Refreshments were served after midnight.

Dime Social at Oak Tree.

A dime social was given at the home of Jesse Dayton, of Oak Tree, last evening, for the benefit of Marconnier chapel. Among the events taking place during the evening was a cake-eating contest, in which the honors were carried off by Burt Dayton who consumed twenty-eight pieces in as many minutes. The proceeds of the affair will amount to a considerable sum.

DEMOCRACY HAS ITS TURN THIS EVENING.

Arrangements Are Complete for the Mass-Meeting at Reform Hall.

SENATOR HUDSPETH COMING

COUNTY CANDIDATES WILL ALSO BE PRESENT TO SPEAK.

John H. Hillman Will Preside and There Will be Thirty Vice-President.—James E. Martine Cannot be Present.

Not to be outdone by their Republican brethren in the bid for votes, the local Democrats have made arrangements to give, this evening, the one and only mass-meeting during the present campaign which will be held in this city. It will take place in Reform Hall, the scene of last evening's Republican demonstration. The preliminaries have all been completed and nothing now remains but the enthusiastic crowd.

While there will be no lack of speech-making, interest centers in State Senator Robert S. Hudspeth, of Jersey City, who will be the principal speaker, and the county candidates for assembly, Charles L. Moffett, of this city, Charles Sulzer, of Elizabeth, and George H. Vandeveer, of Rahway. Of the assembly candidates, Sulzer is considered to be the most eloquent speaker and though but a young man never fails to keep his hearers interested.

Sulzer and Vanderveer with a number of county notables will arrive in this city this afternoon and will be entertained at dinner in the Hotel Kensington. Mr. Hudspeth will not reach here until later in the evening.

LaVere's band has been engaged to furnish music for the occasion and, previous to the meeting, will escort the speakers from the Kensington to the hall. The proceedings will commence at 8 o'clock, but the doors will be opened an hour sooner. Accommodations have been made for all the women who wish to attend, and comfortable seats will be given them by the ushers.

John H. Hillman will preside as president and introduce the speakers, and thirty vice-presidents will occupy seats on the platform. Among them will be Clarence B. Teal, John F. McIntyre, J. A. Staats, Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., W. T. Banks, Hon. Joseph W. Yates, Edward C. Conklin, Gen. William H. Sterling, DeWitt C. Ivins, J. P. Homan, Rev. J. P. Taylor, A. H. Atterbury, Isaac M. Field, Charles C. Burnett, Harry W. Marshall, James Clark, John F. Casey, Cornelius Leveridge, John O. Stevens, Elmore D. Moffett and John Cory. Joseph C. Blimm, Lewis G. Timpson and Edward T. VanBuren, will act as secretaries.

It was the intention of the committee to have James E. Martine present, but a previous engagement to make an address at Vailsburg will prevent the audience from hearing the "silver tongued orator."

TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS.

Change in Arrangements of Through Trolley Line.

By a change in trolley signals and the giving the westbound trolley cars the right of way on the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company line between this city and Elizabeth, there is less liability of accidents. Hereafter the red light will be used to hold cars both at the North avenue terminus and at other points along the line. When this light appears cars will be held until it disappears. Thus it will be known when the line is clear along the single track road.

Made Merry.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Gray, of West Third street, entertained thirty friends at their home last evening at an old fashioned Hallowe'en party. Everyone present joined in making merry with games, singing Scottish songs and listening to selections from Burn's poems. Dancing was afterwards taken up, music for which was furnished by Mrs. Clarence Mundy. Supper was served at a late hour.

WRITE YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS PLAINLY.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Astamalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

Rev. Dr. Morris Wechsler,
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS'. MEDICINE CO.,
Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with Asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

Very truly yours,

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., February 1, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.
Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 130th street, New York, I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the first of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her Asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease.
Yours respectfully, O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO. February 5, 1901.
Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies, but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle, and I am ever grateful. I have family of four children, and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit. Home address, 205 Rivington street. S. RAPHAEL,

WANTS PRESIDENCY.

Bartolome Maso Surprises Cubans With Manifesto.

MAKES A BROAD BID FOR VOTES.

Self Announced Candidate Says Absolute Independence Cannot Be Established Owing to Foreign Demands.

HAVANA, Nov. 1.—General Bartolome Maso has surprised Senor Tomas Estrada Palma and the latter's supporters by coming out with a manifesto declaring himself a candidate for the presidency of Cuba. He makes a strong bid for the Autonomist, Spanish and negro votes.

After declaring that he has been "induced to enter the field of presidential candidature in order to preserve the nationalism and patriotism of the country," he says it is necessary to associate with the new republic the Autonomist party, "whose knowledge of the needs of the country is undeniable and whose work for Cuba's welfare under Spanish rule was such as to establish its leaders as men of sound judgment."

"The military government," he continues, "has ignored this element, not considering it necessary. It is also desirable to associate in the work of forming the republic the colored race, which is an essential factor in our social existence and has proved an orderly element, even amid great suffering. We cannot abandon these heroes now by denying them participation in our political personality.

"We must have with us, too, the Spaniards, who are the nerve of our existence. The future of Cuba cannot be to them a matter of indifference.

"The Cubans today are a popular people. We have lost a lot of time during the intervention. The element around the military governor has forgotten the duty of reconstruction. Where much might easily have been accomplished nothing has been done."

Referring to the Platt amendment, General Maso observes:

"It is obvious that absolute independence of government is not to be established, for the unavoidable demands of foreign policy must be satisfied."

A Boer Colony In Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Wy., Nov. 1.—A number of Hague bankers and other wealthy men of Holland are making arrangements to establish a colony of Boers and Holland Dutch in Wyoming. A tract of 300,000 acres has been secured in the valley of the Green river in Sweetwater county, southern Wyoming. Surveys have been made for a gigantic canal and irrigation system, and construction is to be commenced at once. The prospective settlers are now being brought over to do the work. Tests have been made which show that the soil is especially well adapted for beet sugar culture, and a large beet sugar factory will be established in the colony.

Canalboats Going to Manila.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Four steam canalboats and fifteen consorts which have been plying between New York and Cleveland via the Erie canal and Lake Erie have been permanently withdrawn from the trade. They will be cut up and shipped to Hongkong. There they will be put together and proceed to Manila to do a general lighterage and interisland business. These boats have been purchased by the Philippines Transportation and Construction company, a corporation just organized under the laws of New Jersey. The work of cutting them up has been begun.

Jury Could Not Agree.

LITTLE VALLEY, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Emmett Wheeler, the Erie railway detective who on May 16 shot and killed George Sharpe, an eighteen-year-old Elmira boy at Salamanca, has been on trial here in the county court since Monday. The jury was discharged, it failing to agree after being out twenty-four hours. Wheeler was indicted for manslaughter in the second degree. He claims the shooting was an accident and that he intended only to frighten Sharpe and his companions, who had been stealing a ride on a freight train.

Naval Movements.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The navy department has received cablegrams advising it of the arrival of Rear Admiral Remey aboard his flagship, the Brooklyn, at Hakodadi, Japan, from Vladivostok, Russia; the arrival of Rear Admiral Kempff aboard his flagship, the Kentucky, at Shaikwan, and the departure of Rear Admiral Cromwell aboard his flagship, the Chicago, from Leghorn for Naples.

Bomb Prematurely Exploded.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Three persons were injured and fifty or more windows were broken last night at Forty-fourth street and Lexington avenue by the premature explosion of a dynamite fireworks bomb. It was just a moment or two before a big Tammany Hall ratification meeting commenced in the Grand Central Palace, and the streets were crowded.

Bubonic Plague In Glasgow.

GLASGOW, Nov. 1.—The bubonic plague has reappeared here during the week. Four suspected cases were removed from the Central Station hotel, belonging to the Caledonian railway, and one died yesterday. The hotel has been closed, and all guests have been warned to leave by noon today.

A VICIOUS ATTACK.

Samar Insurgents Kill Two Ninth Infantry Men.

CEBU'S PACIFICATION IS COMPLETED.

General Hughes Reports Surrender of Four Hundred and Fifty Men and Sixty Officers, With Arms and Ammunition.

MANILA, Nov. 1.—Advices just received here from Catbalogan, island of Samar, say that twelve men of Company G of the Ninth infantry under command of Sergeant Williford who had been sent from Basey to San Antonio to investigate and report in regard to the number of bolomen in the vicinity were viciously attacked by 140 insurgents, who rushed on them with great violence, killing two of the soldiers and wounding two others. Williford remained cool and collected during the attack, and the survivors say he acted splendidly. Fourteen of the insurgents were killed. Captain Bookmiller of Company G recommends Williford for a medal of honor and Privates Swanton and Vero for certificates of merit.

General Hughes reports the complete surrender of the insurgents in the island of Cebu, consisting of 450 men and 60 officers, with 150 rifles and 8 brass fieldpieces.

The pouring of troops into the island of Samar is believed to have had a good effect on the Cebu insurgents, who had been wavering for some time. The malcontents kept up the conflict by saying that a majority of the American troops had left the Philippines.

Look Out For an Anarchist.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Commissioner Powderly of the immigration bureau has sent notices to all immigration officers to be on the lookout for a man known as Jaffel, an anarchist, otherwise known as "Jeffel the Red," who is supposed to be on his way to the United States. If he is found on any of the incoming steamers, he will be detained, and if a precedent established four years ago in the case of a well known anarchist who attempted to enter the country is observed Jaffel will be returned to the country whence he came. The information that Jaffel is coming to the United States reached the state department from the Italian government, and it is believed that he is about to sail from Antwerp.

How Swift Covered His Stealings.

Lowell, Mass., Nov. 1.—The plan of Louis H. Swift, the missing bookkeeper of the Merchants' National bank, to cover the peculations of either himself or Albert G. Smith, the defaulting teller, or of both of them in conjunction is believed to have been found. All the depositors' accounts have been found to be correct. The shortage was concealed on the books of Swift by giving false totals on what are known as the long columns. These columns run in five figures over the entire length of a page more than two feet long, and the correct adding of them would be such a task to anybody but an expert in figures that there was little danger of anybody attempting it.

Pennsylvania Railroad Improvement.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 1.—The first step toward the beginning of the work upon the long contemplated improvements by the Pennsylvania railroad in the city of Washington has been taken. The Pennsylvania has asked for bids for the masonry piers and abutments for the new bridge across the Potomac river, which is a part of the improvement scheme. There will be eleven piers and one draw span pier, separated a distance of from 170 feet to 216 feet. All of the piers will be built upon pile foundations with the exception of the draw span and two resting piers, which will be built upon pneumatic foundations. Bids must be in by Nov. 15.

Contempt Proceedings For Hearst.

CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Judge Elbridge Hancey of the circuit court issued an order last evening summoning before him at 10 o'clock next Monday morning the owner of the Chicago American, Mr. William Hearst, and six employees of the paper to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. The publications on which this action was taken were news items, editorials and cartoons reflecting on the motives of the judge in a recent decision in which the People's Gaslight and Coke company of this city was interested.

Boston Brokers In Custody.

BOSTON, Nov. 1.—Two members of the firm of J. M. Fisher & Co., brokers, of State street, after whom the United States officers had been searching as a preliminary to official inquiry into the business they had been conducting through the mails, have surrendered themselves to the authorities. They are J. M. Fisher and Fred E. Betts, and against both warrants have been held since Monday. The firm's offices reopened yesterday morning for business.

Memorial to Von Ketteler.

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Emperor William has telegraphed the German Protestant community in Shanghai that he will give an altar and windows to the new church there in memory of Baron von Ketteler, the murdered German minister to China. This gift, his majesty said in the dispatch, would serve as an injunction to be true to Christianity and faithful to the fatherland unto death.

No Strike at Fall River.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 1.—There will be no strike for more wages in the print cloth mills next Monday, and for the present the wage question here is settled.

A STRONG SHOWING.

United States Treasurer Roberts Reports Year's Transactions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Hon. Ellis H. Roberts, treasurer of the United States, in his report of the transactions of his office during the last fiscal year says that the treasury was never stronger than at the close of that period. The operations, which were of the first order both in variety and magnitude, resulted in noteworthy changes in the paper currency as well as a steady and healthful growth of gold in the treasury and in the general stock.

The net ordinary revenues for the year were $587,685,337, an increase of $20,444,485 over those of 1900, which were the next highest recorded. The increase came from each of the heads of resource, but chiefly from internal revenue. On the side of the expenditures the total of $509,967,353 has been exceeded only four times, in 1863, 1864, 1865 and 1899. The surplus of $77,717,984 was slightly under $2,000,000 less than in 1900. Inclusive of the transactions affecting the public debt, the aggregate receipts were $1,146,489,306 and the aggregate disbursements $1,077,063,052.

For the first quarter of 1902, although the act of March 2, 1901, was operative, reducing the revenue, the receipts were only $3,417,960 less than for the like period of 1901, while the expenditures for the same months were reduced by almost exactly $20,000,000.

The reserve of $150,000,000 in gold required by the financial law of 1900 has been kept intact by the daily substitution of gold coin and bullion out of the general fund for the notes redeemed. These redemptions, which amounted to $24,697,858 for the year, do not indicate any preference for gold over paper, but simply the desire for large denominations, which are most conveniently supplied in gold certificates. After making certain deductions for items not available in general payments the free cash was $156,911,664, which was distributed among the ten offices of the treasury and the twelve offices of the mint, including $101,416,973 in the national bank depositories. In the first quarter of 1902 the deposits in national banks increased $7,097,485, while the available cash balance was reduced by $8,913,244.

HAS THE TURK YIELDED?

French Squadron Reported to Have Returned to Toulon.

PARIS, Nov. 1.—Late last night the following dispatch was received from Toulon:

"The complete Mediterranean squadron returned to Toulon this evening and anchored in the roadstead."

This would include Admiral Caillard's division, whose departure has thus been either countermanded or postponed. If the dispatch be correct, it would imply that the government has received news from Constantinople which has not yet been divulged and which has induced a change of plan.

It was reported that Admiral Caillard had been ordered to cruise within reach of a dispatch boat for possible further instructions, and it is significant that the torpedo boat destroyer Hallebarde left Toulon at full speed during the afternoon to rejoin the squadron.

The decision to make a naval demonstration against Turkey was taken at a meeting of the cabinet Tuesday, at which M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, explained the sultan's procrastination regarding the French demands.

Admiral Caillard's squadron consists of the armored cruisers Amiral Pothuau, Chanzy and Latouche-Treville, the second class cruisers Du Chayla and Cassard and the third class cruiser Galilee. The crews aggregate 2,286 men, but the vessels will also carry landing parties.

The President's Callers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Ex-Governor Jones, who recently was appointed United States district judge for the middle district of Alabama, accompanied by his son and daughter and Judge James Boyd of the western district court of North Carolina, called on the president yesterday. It was the first time the president had met his appointee, and they had a personal chat for half an hour. Archbishops Ireland of St. Paul and Riordan of San Francisco also paid their respects to the president at the White House.

An International Rowing Contest.

DUBLIN, Nov. 1.—Baron O'Brien, lord chief justice of Ireland, who was greatly interested in the recent rowing contest at Killarney between the crews of the Pennsylvania and Dublin universities, has announced his intention to offer a cup for an international rowing competition in connection with the Cork exhibition next year. It is expected that the United States, France, Germany and Holland will send crews.

Contract For a Big Bridge.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 1.—The American Bridge company has secured the contract for the steel work on the Wabash railroad's cantilever to be erected over the Monongahela river at this point. The bridge will be 1,498 feet long, the second largest in the world, and the bridge company's contract aggregates nearly $700,000.

PORT TOWNSHEND, Wash., Nov. 1.—The steamship Roanoke has arrived from Nome, bringing 600 passengers. The Roanoke is the last of the Nome passenger fleet. She reports all the shipping in the north practically at an end at Nome and St. Michael's.

Cresceus Fails Again.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 1.—Cresceus, driven by George H. Ketcham, failed to break his own record of 2:02¼, going the mile in 2:05½. Cresceus, however, lowered the state record one and a half seconds.

PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

Members of the Press to Be Admitted to the Sessions.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 1.—The pan-American conference has received from the Spanish colony at Buenos Ayres a cablegram congratulating it on the sentiments favorable to Spain expressed by General Rafael Reyes, delegate of Colombia, at the municipal banquet.

The session which finally resulted in the admission of the members of the press to the sessions of the pan-American congress was very interesting. The first proposition submitted was that of Peru, whose delegates asked that as many of the press representatives as the hall would hold be admitted, their number being left to the discretion of the president of the congress. This proposition was rejected by the votes of Chile, Colombia, Uruguay, the United States, Mexico, Brazil, Haiti, Guatemala, Honduras, Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, twelve votes against seven.

The next proposition, presented by Chile, differing slightly from that of Peru, was taken up. It had been expected that Peru and its allies would vote against Chile's proposition, which, united to the votes of the delegates hostile to the admission of the press in any form, would have defeated it, thus excluding newspaper representatives from the sessions, but Senor Alzamora, for Peru, supported Chile's proposal, and it was adopted.

A POLICY OF EXTERMINATION.

John Morley, Criticises the British Government Severely.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—John Morley, M. P., addressing his constituents at Arbroath, said:

"The government is aggravating the essential mischief of the situation in South Africa by its management of the concentration camps. The death rate of children, measure it as you will, is hideous, excessive and appalling. The policy of devastation has been admitted to be a mistake.

"I wonder what Lord Palmerston would have said of a government justifying itself by saying that Russia in Poland and Austria in Bosnia had done something like the same. The war has entirely changed in character and is drifting into a war of extermination of a people fighting for their own land.

"The policy of unconditional surrender and submission means extermination and annihilation. The present attitude of the government is one of sullen desperation. There is nothing worse than mettle in a blind horse.

"The king will perhaps at no distant date have to seek other ministers with a better insight and a more pliant mind in face of the dangerous and complex situation which confronts the country."

Lipton Welcomed Home.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—Immediately after his arrival in London Sir Thomas Lipton drove out to his suburban residenge, Osidge, at Southgate. An assemblage of friends and neighbors met him about two miles from the house with a band, unharnessed the horses and drew the carriage home. Responding to an address of welcome presented on behalf of the village of Southgate, he said he had hoped to drink from the cup in Southgate, but it had stuck in spite of the jerk he had given it. "I mean to lift it yet," he said in concluding his speech of thanks.

New Jersey Prosperous.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 1.—The state fiscal year has just closed, and State Comptroller Hancock reported to the governor a cash balance in the state treasury of $2,351,683.17, an increase over last year of $346,461.01. This, the comptroller advises the governor, is the largest balance at the close of any year in the state's history, and the comptroller suggests that the governor will be warranted in recommending to the next legislature a further payment of 50 per cent of the state school tax.

Embassador White Sails.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Andrew D. White, embassador to Germany, sailed yesterday on board the Deutschland after a fortnight spent in this country on private business. Before sailing Embassador White paid a tribute to the German emperor, saying: "The Americans do not know the emperor. Those of us who know him know that he is a statesman. His control over men shows his great force and ability."

Government's Balance Sheet.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1. — The monthly statement of the government receipts and expenditures issued today shows that for the month of October, 1901, the total receipts were $49,831,952 and the expenditures $40,645,835, which leaves a surplus for the month of $9,186,117. The receipts were nearly $2,000,000 less than for October, 1900, and the expenditures nearly $7,300,000 less.

SCHLEY IS DISPUTED

Captain Chadwick Refutes the Admiral's Statement.

FIVE GIVE TESTIMONY IN REBUTTAL.

A Ruling of the Court Results In Relieving Several Witnesses—Captain Borden the Last For the Defense.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—In the Schley court of inquiry yesterday a number of witnesses were introduced by Judge Advocate Lemly to testify in rebuttal of the evidence given in Admiral Schley's behalf. The court decided early in the day that no witnesses could be introduced at this stage of the proceeding to give testimony on immaterial points. This announcement was made in connection with an effort to prove a conversation on board the Massachusetts in which Lieutenant Sears, who was Admiral Schley's flag lieutenant, was reported to have said:

"For God's sake, don't discourage him!" meaning Commodore Schley. "It is all that we have been able to do to work him up to this."

It had the effect of relieving Lieutenant Commander Grant, Lieutenant Commander Potts and other officers of the Massachusetts who had been called to testify concerning this conversation with Mr. Sears, which is said to have occurred on the Massachusetts just before the reconnoissance of May 31.

The witnesses called in rebuttal were Captain Charles D. Sigsbee, Captain Francis E. Chadwick, Captain Joseph G. Eaton, Lieutenant John H. Roys and Chief Quartermaster Nell Anderson, all of whom testified to incidents connected with the campaign of 1898.

Captain Chadwick in his statement said that the precautionary dispatches from the navy department in regard to attacking the Spanish shore batteries had not been communicated to Commodore Schley. This statement is regarded as of great importance by Admiral Schley's opponents, as it distinctly contradicts the admiral's own statements.

Captain Sigsbee testified concerning his interview on the Brooklyn with Commodore Schley. Captain Eaton was the commander of the dispatch boat Resolute during the war, and his testimony related largely to events which occurred just before and just after the battle on July 3. Lieutenant Roys served on board the Eagle, and his statement bore upon the Eagle's meeting with the Brooklyn when the latter was en route to Cienfuegos and again while the flagship lay off that port. He stated that Lieutenant Commander Southerland had asked not to be sent to Port Antonio for coal and had asked to be allowed to coal from the Merrimac. Mr. Anderson was chief quartermaster of the Brooklyn during the Spanish war and was at the wheel during the battle of July 3. He said that Commodore Schley had given the order of "hard aport," but that when the order was given the vessel was then hard aport.

Before these witnesses were introduced for the department the court heard Captain T. S. Borden of the marine corps, who served on the Brooklyn, in Admiral Schley's behalf. He was the last of the admiral's witnesses, and he testified that the admiral had borne himself honorably during the battle of July 3.

King Edward's Health.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—That responsible journal, The Medical Press and Circular, calls for an official announcement as to the truth or falsity of the rumors in regard to King Edward's health. The journal goes on to give particulars in regard to these reports. It says, "It is stated that papillomatous growths have on three occasions been removed from the king's left vocal cord and that as immediate operation of another nature has since been rendered necessary." The Lancet says: "There is every ground for believing that the rumors in regard to the king's health are entirely untrue. His health is good, and he has undergone no operation whatever."

Elephant Injures Keeper.

BUFFALO, Nov. 1.—Jumbo II., said to be the largest elephant in captivity, became furious in his quarters at the exposition grounds and nearly killed his keeper, Henry Mullen. The animal always is kept tightly chained, and while Mullen was at work in the elephant's stall the beast seized him in his trunk and hurled him to the floor. The elephant tried vainly to trample on the keeper, but the chains hung tight, although some of the stakes were broken to which they were fastened.

Dr. Mary Walker Shut Out.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Dr. Mary Walker was excluded from membership in the Woman's Suffrage association at the convention session. She offered her fee, but it was returned to her, and she was ejected from the building. The ground for refusal was her attack in circulars on Miss Anthony in which she declared that a sixteenth amendment was not necessary.

Miners Fatally Burned.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 1.—An explosion of gas in the Parrish mine fatally burned Michael Serofski and Walter Oskavage, miners, and seriously injured Gilbert Young, a driver boy. The explosion occurred in a breast, and the mine was badly damaged.

Iowa Bank Robbed.

ORISPE, Ia., Nov. 1.—The Bank of Orispe was robbed early yesterday morning by safe blowers. The robbers secured about $1,500, of which $450 was cash, the rest being in negotiable paper.

Franklin Murphy's Visit.

Franklin Murphy, the Republican candidate for governor, is the type of a man who makes a favorable impression on the people of Plainfield. There is no question but he did when he appeared before a number of them at Reform Hall. His personal appearance was in favor of him and the short speech which followed did not serve to change the verdict. Altogether his visit to Plainfield may be considered a success from a political standpoint.

The object of having Franklin Murphy in Plainfield was to stir up a little enthusiasm over the State campaign and incidentally to win a few votes for the Republican ticket. The chief trouble, which the local Republican leaders have to contend against, is lethargy. In a city where the vote is so overwhelmingly one-sided, there is not the interest and enthusiasm which always results from a close contest. In order, however, to keep the Republican majority up to its standard, the Republican city committee arranged for one rally designed to stir up the forgetful ones and make it easier for the workers at the polls.

New Jersey is indeed fortunate to have two such men as Franklin Murphy and James M. Seymour as the candidates for governor. Plainfield has now had the opportunity to see and hear Mr. Murphy. There is little prospect, however, that this city will catch a glimpse of his rival for gubernatorial honors. The Democratic managers certainly would have done well had they arranged his schedule so that he might have spoken in this city.

Tonight the Democrats hold a mass meeting in the same hall where the Republican hosts gathered last evening. While Mr. Seymour will not be there the county candidates will, and State Senator Hudspeth is booked to make a speech. There will be an exposition of the State issues from the Democratic standpoint, and that party will, in turn, attempt to diffuse a little enthusiasm in the ranks of its workers.

The need of a theatre in Plainfield was made strikingly evident at the Republican mass-meeting, last evening. While the gatherings of that party are usually the occasion for crowded houses and the display of much enthusiasm, it can honestly be said that last evening's meeting fell way below the standard. The hall was not even crowded. This may be accounted for partially by the lack of local interest in the gubernatorial campaign, but chiefly by the fact that the limited accommodations of the hall were so well-known that many stayed away preferring to give up the opportunity to hear Mr. Murphy rather than have to battle for a seat.

Plainfield has had a great deal of free advertising this summer and fall. There has not been a time heretofore when there have been so many visitors in Plainfield. They could not have come at a better time. The conditions were almost ideal. And everyone of them has gone to his or her home with words of high praise on the lips for this beautiful and homelike city. Now the memory of it all will serve to give Plainfield many a word of commendation all over the country.

In less than a month and a half after the death of President McKinley, his assassin has met his death in the electric chair. There was no delay in meting out justice to that offender. But a thousand deaths cannot bring back to life the good and righteous ruler. The only hope is that it will serve to prevent a similar crime in the future.

The complete exoneration of Dr. Tubbs, of Westfield, from the charges brought against him in connection with the Curtis case, must be a source of much satisfaction to Dr. Tubbs and his friends. It only goes to show how easy it is to drag a professional man into a case of this nature without just cause.

It is fair when a family of three people is compelled to pay a larger water bill than the family of thirteen, which lives next door? Ask the officials of the Plainfield Water Supply Company why they do not put in meters.

Elizabeth rather had a day of it yesterday. First the firemen were the centre of attraction and then the politicians assumed the chief roles. There appeared enough enthusiasm to go all the way round.

If any of the Democratic city ticket is elected this year it will be the Republicans who will be responsible. Although there are signs that do not exactly suggest harmony.

Many of the local dealers in fifty-trip tickets have given up the practice. Their usual patrons now demand that the railroad company give them some substitute.

Judging from the reports from the county seat, campaign enthusiasm is on the boom in that city.

LOCAL REPUBLICANS MET LAST EVENING.

promises; we with a record. If you believe the Republican party is entitled to your suffrage by its past record, I hope you will shape your plans accordingly."

There was considerable applause when Mr. Murphy took his seat. United States Senator Kean was introduced and he made a neat little speech of short duration. In the course of his remarks, Senator Kean said: "I ask you to vote the Republican ticket in this election and to do it for yourself, for your State and for your country. The condition of the country was never more prosperous. We had prosperity under Harrison and again under McKinley and we have it under Roosevelt. By your votes you can retain it. There is no President to elect and there is little to excite interest in the campaign, but it is an important election because the governor appoints the important State officers and you want honest men to administer the affairs of the State."

It was 8:25 o'clock when Senator Kean concluded his remarks, and the gubernatorial party at once retired in order to take the 8:38 o'clock train for Elizabeth, where another meeting was scheduled.

The closing address was made by Edmond S. Wilson, of Red Bank, who styled himself "a high private in the ranks." He eulogized the character and ability of Franklin Murphy. The nominee, he said, began his career "with only a kettle in which to boil his varnish as an asset, and he has been successful." Continuing, he declared "there is something significant between Mr. Murphy and his opponent. Ask a Democrat how much he had to do with the nomination of Seymour and he will say, if honest, no more than Aguinaldo with his purple coat. Allan McDermott and Bob Davis held a star-chamber session and determined upon the man and Allan McDermott popped him out as the product of the machine. Murphy was nominated by loyal men from every precinct in the State who unanimously called him into service. Murphy's call was a call of the people and he is pledged to no machine. The men who have called Seymour into service have written the story of shame in New Jersey's history."

Mr. Wilson reviewed the history of Democratic State administrations from a Republican standpoint and then passed on to national politics, delivering a severe arraignment of Bryan and from that to the present condition of the country, which, he alleged, is most prosperous. In closing, the speaker declared that McKinley had left his principles to the Republicans as a priceless legacy and that the party should aid the present national executive by voting for Mr. Murphy.

During the intermission between the addresses LaVere's Band played excellent selections.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. 'Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

MIDDLESEX COUNTY JAIL.

PLANS ARE COMPLETED FOR THE PROPOSED NEW BUILDING.

Will Really be Remodeling of the Old Structure on Entirely New Lines.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Nov. 1—Plans have practically been completed by Architect Parsell for the remodeling of the county jail at a cost of $40,000, and they are now awaiting the approval of the county buildings committee of the Board of Freeholders. Mr. Parsell spent considerable time investigating jails throughout the State, and his drawings embody all the good points which came under his observation. As far can be learned the plans have been approved by all who examined them.

The work of remodelling the present structure will be carried on without disturbing the inmates. The new building will be erected around the old jail and then united at the top without removing the prisoners. There will be an addition made to the men's side of the jail extending over the space in the rear of the Sheriff's office and the side on Kirkpatrick street will be changed somewhat.

Complete separate compartments will be made for the reception of men, women and boys, while one department will be reserved for detained witnesses. There will also be rooms for the Sheriff's family and private offices where lawyers may consult their clients.

A number of other important details have not as yet been fully considered but the plans will be entirely complete within a week. Nothing will then remain but the prompt action of the proper committee.

Teachers' Meeting.

The monthly business meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday school will be held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Frank Vail, 1002 Putnam avenue. WHITE RIBBONERS WANT VOTES

HELD A RALLY OVER IN THE BOROUGH LAST EVENING.

Chief Spellbinder Was Rev. James Parker, of Jersey City—Earnest Plea For the Ticket.

While the Republican spellbinders on the city side of the brook were instructing the voters how to stand by the party at the polls Tuesday, the Prohibitionists held forth last evening, although in lesser number, in the borough. A vacant store in the Simonson block was well filled with white-ribbon followers and others.

The speaker of the evening was Rev. James Parker, of Jersey City, an earnest Prohibitionist who has assisted in waging war on the rum traffic for years. He gave an excellent speech of an hour's duration in which he viewed the liquor question from all sides, financially, industrially, legally and morally. He brought out strongly the fact that intemperance and anarchy go hand in hand. No saloon, he said, obeys the laws framed for its regulation and it is in them that anarchy is bred faster than New Jersey swamps give life to mosquitoes. Czolgosz, the assassin of McKinley, received his teachings in the rear room of his father's saloon in Cleveland.

In conclusion Mr. Parker asked that all present vote the Prohibition ticket and not be afraid of throwing away their ballots. The only man who throws away his vote he declared was the man whose ballot is not endorsed by Jesus Christ.

Among the other speakers were John Herrman, of the borough, candidate for sheriff of Somerset county on the Prohibition ticket, and Rev. A. A. Phelps, president of the Plainfield Prohibition League. Both gave brief remarks and emphasized those of Mr. Parker.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 3—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—God's leading in our lives.—Ps. xxiii.

No words of the psalmist have had such a universal appreciation and influence as those contained in the Twenty-third Psalm. Their beauty and strength have been the delight of childhood, the admiration of manhood and the support of old age. Nowhere is the fact of God's leading in our lives more beautifully set forth than in the figure in this psalm of the shepherd leading the sheep into green pastures and beside the still waters.

The psalm suggests a number of facts concerning God's leading in our lives.

1. God leads us. This is the doctrine of this psalm. God does not drive us, but leads us. The eastern shepherd went before his sheep and led them. So the Lord as our shepherd leads us. What a comforting truth! The Lord is our shepherd and leads us. Our lives are not aimless and purposeless. God is in them and directs them.

2. God leads us daily. Daily the shepherd watched over his sheep and led them to the green pastures and by the cooling streams. Daily the Lord leads us. Day by day He gives us our daily bread. Constantly His providential care is over us. In the Shepherd's daily, hourly care of His sheep we may hear a voice saying unto us, "Every day will I bless thee."

3. God leads us individually. The singular personal pronoun is used throughout this psalm, and it gives it increased meaning and preciousness to read it, laying emphasis on the personal pronouns. "My," "I" and "Me" are everywhere used. "The Lord is 'my' shepherd, 'I' shall not want. He maketh 'me' to lie down in green pastures." God knows us and leads us as individuals, regardless of the multitudes of others in the world.

Thou art as much His care
As if nor man nor angel
Lived in earth or heaven.

4. God leads us at all times. In storm and sunshine the shepherd cares for the sheep; in storm or sunshine, in adversity or prosperity, in life or death, the Lord leads us on. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me, Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me!"

5. God's leading in our lives gives us calm and peace in all the conditions of our lives. Since the Lord leads us, we "shall not want" and need "fear no evil." This psalm breathes a spirit of calm and assured trust in God which should possess all who have accepted the leading of God in their lives.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xii, 41, 42; xiii, 20-22; Ps. xxv, 8-10; xxxi, 1-5; Neh. ix, 19; Isa. xl, 25-31; lviii, 11, 12; Math; xxviii, 19, 20; Luke i, 76-79; John xiv, 1-7.

The Gain of Suffering.

The apostle in writing of the Captain of Our Salvation said that He was made perfect through sufferings. He was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. His life was one of toil, poverty, privation. Notwithstanding it all, there was a joy set before Him which inspired Him to endure the cross and despise the shame. Therefore, as children and heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, we are called to suffer with Him that we may be also glorified together. For the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. The fruit of the Spirit develops and ripens more rapidly in the shade of trial or sorrow than in the sunshine of health and prosperity. It becometh the divine Husbandman to cut back and prune with severity the branches of the true vine that they may bring forth more fruit. We are in school under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the Father. Many of the lessons we receive are hard and test our faith and patience to the utmost, but if we "endure as seeing the invisible" the cloud as it passes will wear a silver lining, and at eventide it shall be light.—Christian Uplook.

Bearing the Monotony In Life.

There is a fatal monotony in all our lives. We have to set ourselves morning after morning to tasks that look to be utterly insignificant and disproportionate to the power that we bring to bear upon them—like elephants picking up pins with their trunks—and yet we may make all our commonplace drudgery great and wondrous and fair and full of help and profit to our souls if ever it all—our shops, our desks, our ledgers, our studies, our kitchens and our nurseries—we write "My meet is to do the will of Him that sent me."—Alexander McLaren.

A Religious Life.

A religious life is not a thing that spends itself like a bright bubble on the river's surface. It is rather like the river itself, which widens continually and is never so broad or deep as where it rolls into the ocean of eternity.—Lutheran.

The Joy and the Glory.

You shall have the joy of success when you are ready to give God the glory of it.—Matthew Henry.

The Best Way.

One of the best ways of growth in faith is to take God's word and test it.—Episcopal Recorder.

The Larger Self.

Our natures to the night and day
Their qualities of life impart;
The heavens and earth grow old and gray
As we grow old and gray in heart.

To some the last lone age appears,
And Time has nothing to fulfill;
To others, lo, the endless years!
The morning stars are singing still.

BOICE, RUNYON & CO.,
PARK AVE. AND RAILROAD

A gentleman living in Noxen, Wyoming Co., Pa., describes feelingly the afflicted condition to which his wife has been subject: "She is 33 years old," he says, "and has been troubled with constipation, sick headache, bad stomach and extreme nervousness. She would be so nervous sometimes that she would quiver all over. Often she would sit down and fold her arms tightly until they would be more quiet. After eating a meal she would have a distressed feeling and bloat, get drowsy and feel bad all over. We saw Ripans Tabules advertised in the Philadelphia Record, and Pennsylvania Grit, and decided to try them, and she has been very much benefited by them. The nervous trouble is now gone; she sleeps sound at night. She has a good appetite. She is still somewhat troubled with constipation, from which she has never been free since she can remember. She will continue using the Tabules, for they have helped her more than any medicine she has ever taken."

WANTED:—A case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R-I-P-A-N-S on the package and accept no substitute. R-I-P-A-N-S, 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

DRESSY GOWNS.

The All Black and the All White Effect Still Prevails.

Black chantilly will be much used for dressy evening gowns this winter. It will be combined with black velvet in a variety of ways. When appliques of this material are used, the black chantilly looks best over a lining of white taffeta. Colored taffeta linings are not used much under black lace robes, as fashion still clings to black and white effects. Persian braids and Persian embroideries in all the delicate colorings are features of many of the imported gowns. This Persian trimming is particularly handsome on the all black or all white gowns. It takes the place of the gold and silver embroideries of last winter.

The illustration shows a dinner gown of black chantilly made over white taffeta. The skirt has a graduated flounce, the heading of which is concealed by an irregular applique of black panne edged with narrow Persian embroidery. The decollete waist is outlined with a broad band of the black panne and an irregular application of the Persian embroidery. A point of this embroidery reaches up to the neck in front, where it is held by means of a necklace of pearls. The wide band of panne also forms the upper part of the sleeves, the lower half being a full puff of the lace reaching to the wrists. Two cream white artificial roses are fastened a little to the left of the waist line.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

BLACK CHANTILLY GOWN.

BLOUSE COSTUMES.

Blue Cheviot a Favorite Material For Young Girls.

Blouse costumes of navy blue cheviot are very becoming to youthful figures. The cheviot must be light weight as well as hairy to give the proper effect. Many of these blue suits are made up with red facing and linings and are worn with all black hats or hats of the same colorings.

The new flannel waists show an increase of white materials, peau de sole, louisine and cashmere being favorites. These are daintily tucked and fitted over tight linings. There is no suspicion of stiffness about them, and the most elaborate ones are fit for informal evening wear.

Gowns of blue cashmere are very handsome when trimmed with coarse yellow insertions worked with silver thread. Some of the newest skirts used for this kind of dress are made entirely accordion plaited, the plaits being stitched down flat at the hips to give the necessary slender effect. With a skirt of this sort the trimming usually consists of one wavy band of wide lace or else a series of apparently careless applications.

In today's illustration we have a costume of navy blue cheviot trimmed with panne velvet of a deeper shade. The jacket is cut blouse fashion with a double row of gilt buttons and a long narrow collar of the panne edged with a tiny line of white satin. The belt is also of the panne, with a gilt buckle. The sleeves are cut bishop fashion, with the cuffs of blue panne. The skirt has two wide gored ruffles headed by a band of the velvet and edged with heavy stitching. The entire costume is made up over crimson taffeta.

OF BLUE CHEVIOT.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

"You stay too much in-doors," said the lawyer. "You should be out, whipping up the circulation like Mr. Enfield and me. (This is my cousin—Mr. Enfield—Doctor Jekyll.) Come now; get your hat and take a quick turn with us."

"You are very good," sighed the other, "I should like to very much; but, no, no, no, it is quite impossible; I dare not. But, indeed, Utterson, I am very glad to see you; this is really a great pleasure; I would ask you and Mr. Enfield up, but the place is really not fit."

"Why, then," said the lawyer, good-naturedly, "the best thing we can do is to stay down here and speak with you from where we are."

"That is just what I was about to venture to propose," returned the doctor with a smile. But the words were hardly uttered, before the smile was struck out of his face and succeeded by an expression of such abject terror and despair, as froze the very blood of the two gentlemen below. They saw it but for a glimpse, for the window was instantly thrust down; but that glimpse had been sufficient, and they turned and left the court without a word. In silence, too, they traversed the by-street; and it was not until they had come into a neighboring thoroughfare, where even upon a Sunday there were still some stirrings of life, that Mr. Utterson at last turned and looked at his companion. They were both pale; and there was an answering horror in their eyes.

"God forgive us, God forgive us," said Mr. Utterson.

But Mr. Enfield only nodded his head very seriously, and walked on once more in silence.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mr. Utterson was sitting by his fireside one evening after dinner, when he was surprised to receive a visit from Poole.

"Bless me, Poole,, what brings you here?" he cried; and then taking a second look at him, "What ails you?" he added; "is the doctor ill?"

"Mr. Utterson," said the man, "there is something wrong."

"Take a seat, and here is a glass of wine for you," said the lawyer. "Now, take your time, and tell me plainly what you want."

"You know the doctor's ways, sir," replied Poole, "and how he shuts himself up. Well, he's shut up again in the cabinet; and I don't like it, sir—I wish I may die if I like it. Mr. Utterson, sir, I'm afraid."

"Now, my good man," said the lawyer, "be explicit. What are you afraid of?"

"I've been afraid for about a week," returned Poole, doggedly disregarding the question, "and I can bear it no more."

The man's appearance amply bore out his words; his manner was altered for the worse; and except for the moment when he had first announced his terror, he had not once looked the lawyer in the face. Even now, he sat with the glass of wine untasted on his knee, and his eyes directed to a corner of the floor. "I can bear it no more," he repeated.

"Come," said the lawyer; "I see you have some good reason, Poole; I see there is something serious amiss. Try to tell me what it is."

"I think there has been foul play," said Poole, hoarsely.

"Foul play!" cried the lawyer, a good deal frightened and rather inclined to be irritated in consequence, "What foul play? What does the man mean?"

"I daren't say, sir," was the answer; "but will you come along with me and see for yourself?"

Mr. Utterson's only answer was to rise and get his hat and great-coat; but he observed with wonder the greatness of the relief that appeared upon the butler's face, and perhaps with no less, that the wine was still untasted when he set it down to follow.

It was a wild, cold, seasonable night of March, with a pale moon, lying on her back as though the wind had tilted her, and a flying wrack of the most diaphanous and lawny texture. The wind made talking difficult, and flecked the blood into the face. It seemed to have swept the streets unusually bare of passengers, besides; for Mr Utterson thought he had never seen that part of London so deserted. He could have wished it otherwise; never in his life had he been conscious of so sharp a wish to see and touch his fellow-creatures; for struggle as he might, there was borne in upon his mind a crushing anticipation of calamity. The square, when they got there, was all full of wind and dust, and the thin trees in the garden were lashing themselves along the railing. Poole, who had kept all the way a pace or two ahead, now pulled up in the middle of the pavement, and in spite of the biting weather, took off his hat and mopped his brow with a red pocket-handkerchief. But for all the hurry of his coming, these were not the dews of exertion that he wiped away, but the moisture of some strangling anguish; for his face was white, and his voice, when he spoke, harsh and broken.

"Well, sir," he said, "here we are, and God grant there be nothing wrong."

"Amen, Poole," said the lawyer.

Thereupon the servant knocked in a very guarded manner; the door was opened on the chain; and a voice asked from within, "Is that you, Poole?"

"It's all right," said Poole. "Open the door."

The hall, when they entered it, was brightly lighted up; the fire was built high; and about the hearth the whole of the servants, men and women, stood huddled together like a flock of sheep. At the sight of Mr. Utterson, the household broke into hysterical whimpering; and the cook, crying out, "Bless God! its Mr. Utterson," ran forward as if to take him in her arms.

"What, what? Are you all here?" said the lawyer, peevishly. "Very irregular, very unseemly; your master would be far from pleased."

"They're all afraid," said Poole.

Blank silence followed, no one protesting, only the maid lifted up her voice and now wept loudly.

"Hold your tongue!" Poole said to her, with a ferocity of accent that testified to his own jangled nerves; and indeed, when the girl had so suddenly raised the note of her lamentation, they had all started and turned toward the inner door with faces of dreadful expectation. "And now," continued the butler, addressing the knife boy, "reach me a candle, and we'll get this through hands at once." And then he begged Mr. Utterson to follow him, and led the way to the back garden.

"Now, sir," said he, "you come as gently as you can. I want you to hear, and I don't want you to be heard. And see here, sir, if by any chance he was to ask you in, don't go."

Mr. Utterson's nerves, at this unlooked for termination, gave a jerk that nearly threw him from his balance; but he recollected his courage and followed the butler into the laboratory building and through the surgical theater, with its lumber of crates and bottles, to the foot of the stair. Here Poole motioned him to stand on one side and listen; while he himself, setting down the candle and making a great and obvious call on his resolution, mounted the steps and knocked with a somewhat uncertain hand on the red baize of the cabinet door.

"Mr. Utterson, sir, asking to see you," he called; and even as he did so, once more violently signed to the lawyer to give ear.

A voice from within: "Tell him I can not see any one," it said complainingly.

"Thank you, sir," said Poole, with a note of something like triumph in his voice; and taking up his candle, he led Mr. Utterson back across the yard and into the great kitchen, where the fire was out and the bettles were leaping on the floor.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 3, "God's Leading In Our Lives." Text. Ps. xxiii.

Courage, self reliance, strength, are fine to have and give one who has them confidence and power which are of much value in this world.

There is another side of life, however. The larger part of us are not gifted with these qualities. Timidity, distrust of self and weaknesses of many kinds have fallen to our share in the distribution of things, and we crave some one to rely upon, some one who knows all and understands us and whom we can trust. Our very want may be the means of our enrichment. Confidence in one's own powers and ability prevents any realization of need and leads to contentment and a certain pride of personality which narrows the life, stunts its growth and keeps it self centered.

"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want!" No one utters that deep in his soul until he has felt want, known his own emptiness and longed for filling with good things. Enjoyment of food depends less on the richness of the provision than on the keenness of the appetite. Soul hunger gets one in condition to appreciate heavenly manna.

Not until we are ready to be led can the Lord become our Good Shepherd. When we feel able to feed ourselves and prefer to choose our own grazing ground, we know no need of a shepherd and will follow none.

Blessed are the poor and meek and hungry, for, being needy, they will be led, and when they are willing to follow God, they shall be filled with the best of His pasturage.

What comfort beyond expression breathes in this psalm, which through ages has been the language of devoted souls in many lands and under most diverse conditions.

It has a tone of joyous confidence better than abundance of good things could inspire. Not the satisfaction of the rich man who said, "I have much goods laid up for many years." The reliance is not on goods, but on God. The soul craves companionship with persons and starves in the midst of possessions. In the presence of its loved ones true affection finds its fullness.

Poverty and distress and hardest ordeals of endurance are not evil, but shall yield deepest and abiding comfort; for correction of wrong aims and ambitions is accomplished and the sympathetic nearness of the Leader is realized as never before. "Rod and staff give comfort." Oh, what blessedness comes to the heart as it gradually comes to the consciousness of the abiding helpfulness and nearness of God!

The ordinary routine of life may be dull indeed and wearing, but to every heart is given the privilege of knowing the shepherding of the Christ and to feel in all the depths of the being the conscious presence and favor of Him who loves supremely, who leads unerringly and comforts with a divine comforting.

"The Lord is my shepherd."

What Pessimism Betrays.

Much of the world's pessimism is but personal vanity putting on the air of critical wisdom. The man who wants to be admired and set on a pedestal and is frustrated of his hope is apt to think there is nothing admirable in a world which does not admire him. So he enters upon the career of a general deprecator of moral values and tells the universe what a low opinion he has of it. For, as Dr. Arnold said of human weaknesses generally, this form also has its root in self conceit. It starts with trying to mount a private and personal pedestal and ends in the foolish attempt to empty all the pedestals. The humble are never pessimists. They do not get their own shadows in the way and so do not miss seeing what is great and admirable in God's works and especially in man.—Sunday School Times.

Soul Satisfaction.

Soul satisfaction is the thing above all others to be desired because it is the most valuable and is within the reach of all. Many desire wealth and stay poor; they crave reputation and are dishonored; they thirst for knowledge and remain comparatively ignorant. But the soul that hungers and thirsts after righteousness, after a clearer faith, a brighter hope, a holier joy, a diviner reverence, shall in due time attain to the height of full soul satisfaction in regard to these things. "I shall be satisfied when I awake in Thy likeness." The awaking time is coming for all souls that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for God has said, "They shall be filled."—Religious Telescope.

Silent Threads of Gold.

Little self denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptations—these are the silent threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of life that God approves.—F. W. Farrar, D. D.

The Cheerful Side.

It is not wrong for a shadowed heart to prompt sunny words. Even a cat will curl up in the only spot of sunshine in a room. If our life is clouded and clouds have a silver lining, let us wear our clouds wrong side out or bright side out.—American Friend.

Laden With Benefits.

Prayers have been compared to ships which go forth heavy with petitions, but return laden with benefits.—Lutheran Observer.

Other Than Mine.

My bark is wafted on the strand by breath divine,
And on the helm there rests a hand other than mine.

GOLF.

In all probability the play for the Mellick and Golf Committee cups on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, will be concluded the Saturday following Thanksgiving, when the result will be announced by the golf committee.

In the inter-city golf tournament on the Morris County Golf Club course yesterday, Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, of this city, who played with the Metropolitan team, defeated her opponent, Miss Gilbert, of Philadelphia, 5 up. The New York team won easily.

There yet remain to be played for at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course, the finals for the Holiday cup, the Gilbert cup, for mixed foursomes, and special prizes offered for play on Election day. There is no telling when the play for the Gilbert cup will be concluded as the event is so arranged that it may continue on for an indefinite time.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Park Field Club has disbanded for the season, but Henry Brosie is organizing a football team and he hopes to get some of the members of the field club on the team. St. Mary's choir boys wanted to play a game next Tuesday with the field club, and it is possible the new team may take the challenge up.

The members of the St. Mary baseball nine which enjoyed a winning streak throughout the past summer, has decided to place a football team in the field but only for one game. It will be played with an eleven composed for the most part from players of the Scotch Plains baseball team which the St. Mary's defeated after the most exciting contest of the season. The local team is practicing hard for the event and has hopes of proving victor with the pigskin as well as with the leather sphere. The game will be played within the near future.

LAWN TENNIS.

The work of laying out two tennis courts at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is steadily progressing. It is not likely, however, they will be ready for much play this season. Next season it is believed that there will be as many devotees of tennis as golf, thus making a lively season.

ROD AND GUN.

Frank Woodruff, of Duer street, is hunting in the Passaic valley.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup, bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

For the Children.

A children's Hallowe'en party was given yesterday afternoon at the home of the Misses Hand, West Second street A number of young folks were present and enjoyed a programme of games. Refreshments were served toward evening.

PHANTOMS THERE.

Unique Gathering Even For Hallowe'en at Home of F. C. Lounsbury Last Evening.

A pleasant and unique Hallowe'en party was given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, by their children, the Misses Catherine and Ella Lounsbury, Fred C. Lounsbury, Jr., and Jesse Lounsbury.

The affair was called a phantom party, every one of the dozen guests being rigged up with pillow cases and sheets. All lights were extinguished and lighted pumpkins furnished the only illumination. All the furniture was removed from the rooms and in its place there were boxes covered with rugs and drapings. In the corners of the rooms there were cornstalks and other products of the field.

The guests were admitted by the back door, so as not to spoil the effects of the decorations. Some were dressed as witches and others represented wierd characters. After an evening of great fun, refreshments consisting of pumpkin pies, apples pop-corn and coffee were served.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

Met in District Convention at Flemington Yesterday—Plainfielders There.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Flemington, November 1. — The eleventh annual convention of the Elizabeth district of the Epworth League, held in this city yesterday, was attended by delegations from forty-three chapters.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, Rev. John MacMurray and Rev. G. W. Gardner, headed the delegates from the First M. E. and Monroe Avenue M. E. churches, of Plainfield, and the Grace M. E. church, of North Plainfield, respectively. Presiding Elder Smith, of Plainfield, took a prominent part in the proceedings. R. F. Fenno, of Plainfield, was chosen president for the ensuing year, and Dyckman Winckler, of North Plainfield, was selected as recording secretary for the same term. Among the members of the committee having in charge of the arrangements for the next convention to be held at Tottenville, are Mrs. J. A. Stafford and Rev. John MacMurray, of Plainfield.

Kitchen Party.

An informal Hallowe'en kitchen party was given last evening by Miss Mabelle Smith, of West Fourth street, to a number of intimate friends. The guests were entertained in the kitchen which was prettily decorated for the occasion. Various games and making candy formed the evening's enjoyment. After a pancake supper dancing was taken up and continued until a late hour.

Abandoned Car Burned.

work she wished to do. She set out for America, arrived in New York with little money and with only vague plans. She knew she needed better acquaintance with the Bible, so she went to Northfield for two years. Then she studied the kindergarten methods in New York. But she kept thinking how absolutely destitute the people at her home were of the physician's skill. In all that region, within a radius of thirty villages, there was not a single physician, nor any one who knew how to care for the sick. The conviction that she could best help her people by learning to care for the suffering sent her through the training school for nurses at the Presbyterian Hospital.

At this time she had in the main been supporting herself. She now began to practise her profession to secure money to pay her home passage and give her a start in her work, for there was no board back of her. When almost ready to sail, with characteristic unselfishness, she gave up her paying patients put off her departure to go to the Adirondacks to nurse a cousin who had come over, never to return. The delay had its compensations, for it gave opportunity for her marriage with an old acquaintance, who had journeyed to America with a purpose similar to her own.

On their return in the summer of 1900 they located at Kortcha, Albania. There they have been for the past year laboring, teaching, preaching and healing in an entirely new field, without help from our board, supported by friends in America and Turkey. Mdme. Tsilka herself writes: "My nursing is giving me admittance into the worst of families. I have been working a good deal among the Beyes [Turkish lords] . . . I am called to go out to visit all sorts of afflicted people. It is an easy thing to make them friends of mine, but so hard to make them friends of Christ."

From her work in Kortcha she had gone to join Miss Stone on her tour. With Miss Stone she has been taken into captivity. She is a rare spirit, beautiful and strong, in the enthusiasm of young womanhood, with splendid preparation for signal usefulness, with the Christ-love glowing like a holy flame within her. In the brigand's cave she has endured the martyrdom of motherhood. God grant she may not also suffer the martyrdom of death.

Only a Ribbon Burned.

A sensational story appeared in this morning's New York papers stating that Mrs. Lewis B. Bird, of Summit avenue, was badly burned as the result of her picture hat catching fire from a stray spark. The truth of it was that a spark set fire to a ribbon on the hat, which was extinguished without further damage.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY AND CITY NOMINEES EXHIBITED TO LOCAL VOTERS LAST NIGHT.

Local Democracy Held Its First Mass-Meeting of The Campaign at Reform Hall Last Evening.

STATE SENATOR HUDSPETH WAS CHIEF SPEAKER.

WALTER L. HETFIELD HAD SOMETHING TO SAY ON THE LOCAL ISSUES.

The County Candidates Also Made Short Speeches — There Was Some Enthusiasm — Some Blows From The Shoulder Struck at Republican Claims and Theories.

Reform Hall was the scene of another political demonstration, last evening, when the local Democrats were afforded an opportunity to see and hear their county and city nominees. While there was no personage present as important as that presented by the opposition party the evening before, the enthusiasm was somewhat more apparent.

The speaker of the evening was State Senator Robert Hudspeth, of Jersey City, who thoroughly reviewed both parties, in the course of which he related facts which appealed strongly to the voters. His remarks were supplemented by all three of the county candidates for assembly on the Democratic ticket, Charles Sulzer, of Elizabeth, George H. Vandeveer, of Rahway, and Charles L. Moffett, of this city.

Another speaker who struck a popular vein and who dealt mainly with the local situation was Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., the nominee for Councilman in the First ward. He touched lightly on the assertions in regard to the Democratic party made the evening before by Colonel Mason W. Tyler, and declared that, in comparison, Plainfield was in the grasp of a machine more powerful than that of larger cities nearby now struggling to free themselves from ring rule.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Michael Flynn, chairman of the Democratic city committee, who introduced the presiding officer, John H. Hillman. The latter spoke at some length on the paramount issues of the campaign which he declared to be the extravagance of the present legislation and the vile partisan acts of the Republican party. The entire ticket, he said, was composed of men for whom there need be no hesitancy in voting. The county ticket commends itself and above all the man at the head of the list was placed there by the vote of the people.

"He is a man of the people," said Mr. Hillman, "and in my opinion is the peer of any man who ran for office in this State. He can be voted for with the knowledge that he will serve faithfully. He represents the people while his opponent stands for the moneyed interests of the State and stands prepared to do their bidding." Mr. Hillman then reviewed the situation in local circles and declared that while Plainfield was well governed it might be made better. There should be a change he said, and the present ticket presents real, live opposition.

Mr. Hillman then introduced Senator Hudspeth, who began his talk by apologizing for the weakened condition of his voice, which he said was due to espousing the cause of that "Aptly termed commoner, James M. Seymour." This was greeted with long applause and on its subsiding he went on: "The Republicans declared a short time ago with much gusto that the Democratic party in New Jersey was a thing of the past and it would never be rejuvenated. They also declared it would be impossible to get any respectable man to accept a nomination on its platform. The events of the past week have shown them how far they were out of the way. Murphy has been gyrating about the State, beseeching the Republicans to stand fast and doing everything possible to gain a vote.

"They are attacking our party and venting spite at every opportunity, but we need not be ashamed of any of our nominees or the platform. Two-thirds of the Republican platform is devoted to paying tribute to the late martyred President and the other third is used in mentioning State affairs. There is no need to make the assassination a factor in a political campaign, but you know it has been done by the Republicans.

"The Republican party of the State in past years has been under the influence of corporations. Members of assembly were sent there because they affiliated with trusts and did their bidding. The power of the moneyed interests has never been so rampant as in the past six years.

"The opposing party in its platform takes credit to itself for the prosperous condition of the treasury, due, they say, to their economy and careful distribution of funds. It is true there is a neat surplus in the treasury, but it was made possible through the energy of two Democratic governors who brought the railroad and canal combines to the realization that they had to bear part of the State tax. Only this year New Jersey received $1,000,000 from railroads and canals which, prior to Leon Abbett's term, bore no part of the burden of taxation."

After briefly summing up acts of the Republican legislatures within the past few years, some of which were strongly denounced by the speaker, Mr. Hudspeth continued, "I charge the Republican party with not being true to its pledges and of not being frugal in its management of State affairs. They prat of being a friend of the wage earner but in truth the line between the aristocracy and the wage earner has never been so apparent as at present.

"Imagine such begrimed sons of toil as Kean and Fowler, proclaiming their affections for the working people. Go through Murphy's party and see if you can find one who really stands for the masses and then compare him with the Democratic candidate for governor who has risen from the shop to his present proud position, who knows what it is to be a wage earner and feels for their wants. Exercise your judgment and I have no hesitancy in saying that on November 5, the great electorate of New Jersey will cast a great majority for James M. Seymour."

On Mr. Hudspeth's retirement, Charles Sulzer, of Elizabeth, was introduced and for the most part echoed the sentiments of his predecessor. He furthered the remarks in regard to the Republicans' duplicity and declared that the coming election would prove Lincoln's words, "they couldn't fool the people all the time."

The opposing party, he said, had done nothing for the people but had looked out for itself. He referred to their passing laws abolishing spring elections, the re-districting law, the State hospital and national guard scandals. The new reformatory at Rahway was brought out prominently, the speaker declaring that it held but six inmates while a man from Ohio was being paid $5,000 per annum for the superintendency. In conclusion, he said if he was sent to the assembly he would voice the sentiments of the people.

He was followed by the other assembly candidates, George Vandeveer, of Rahway, and Charles Moffett, of this city. Both spoke briefly, asking for the votes of the party and declaring their intentions if elected.

The concluding speaker was Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., who spoke only on local lines. He referred to the utterances of Colonel Tyler the previous evening and declared he was sorry to LAWYER MAXSON WON SUIT.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER FIGURED IN REMARKABLE SUIT.

Appeared as Counsel for Plaintiff in Case in New York Court Which Attracted Much Attention.

The New York papers have just published an account of an interesting case which Lawyer Henry L. Maxson, of the New York bar, and a Plainfielder all his life, has had before the courts in New York.

Mr. Maxson on behalf of George W. Matthews & Son, fashionable tailors, of Chicago, Ill., commenced an action against the wife of Col. John T. Dickinson to recover $100 damages. The colonel, who was secretary to the World's Fair Commission, ordered some evening clothes for himself of the tailors and paid $50 on account. Mrs. Dickinson was not concerned about her husband's wearing apparel, and was much surprised when, after moving from Chicago to New York, she was sued for the balance of the purchase price. The Illinois law says that a wife may be sued separately and jointly with her husband for the necessaries of the family. In Iowa and Oregon a similar statute exists.

Mrs. Dickenson's attorneys contended before the New York court that such a law would not be recognized outside the State where it was enacted. This view was adopted by the trial court and the suit was dismissed. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court and Mr. Maxson has received a decision in his favor.

The appellate tribunal held that the husband's clothes were a family expense for which the wife could be charged even though she had never assented in any way, directly or indirectly, thereto and that the courts of New York would recognize such a peculiar law and would give it full force and effect where the parties were residents of Illinois when the debt was contracted. Some of the New York papers seem to have singled out the case from a long list of opinions handed down by the Court and the Law Journal, an official legal paper, quoted the case in full.

OFFICERS FOR AID SOCIETY.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ORGANIZATION AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

All Reports Showed That the Ladies' Aid Society Is in a Healthy Condition.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church met yesterday afternoon in annual session and reviewed the work for the past year. This society has a membership of nearly fifty women, and as the name implies it is an aid society in the strict sense of the word. Persons in the church who are at any time in need of assistance are given such aid by the society, but the work is done in a quiet manner so that outsiders do not know of charity thus given.

Reports were received yesterday concerning the amount of money expended and assistance given during the year, and all reports showed that the society is in a healthy, flourishing condition. Many persons have been assisted in various ways, and thus the objects of the organization have been fully sustained.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. David J. Yerkes; first vice-president, Mrs. Wilson; second vice-president, Miss Thickstun; secretary and treasurer, Miss Florence I. Marsh.

TO GIVE BAZAAR

Women of St. Joseph's Church Planned For Affair at Saengerbund Hall.

The women parishioners of St. Joseph's church will hold a bazaar during the fore part of this month. The affair will be held in Saengerbund Hall and will continue for three evenings.

Various contests have been arranged to enliven the occasion. The children of the Sunday-school will participate in several forms of entertainment. One amusement being arranged is a Japanese play. The proceeds will be used for general parish purposes.

Opens Dental Parlors.

Dr. O. B. Whitford, of Brookfield, N. Y., has just opened dental parlors in the Stillman building, over Putnam & DeGraw's store. He was recently married and has taken up his residence at the corner of West Sixth and Division streets. Dr. Whitford was a classmate of Dr. Guy Hillman, of West Front street.

Raising Church Fund.

The congregation of the Mt. Olive Baptist church is endeavoring to raise $500 as a church fund. Pledge cards for offerings have been distributed and these will be returned Sunday, November 24.

MENACE TO DRIVERS.

Residents of Washington Valley Complain About Automobiles and Fast Running.

Residents in the vicinity of Washington Valley are complaining very much over the reckless manner in which automobiles from this city and other places are run through that place, especially on Sundays. Recently they have been more or less of a menace to persons driving back and forth to Plainfield.

Last Sunday a party of four men in an automobile passed through the Valley at a high rate of speed. The men were blowing horns and otherwise disturbing the peace. A prominent woman resident of Watchung was driving home and her horse was greatly frightened. At one time it looked as though she might be thrown from her carriage and seriously injured.

Other complaints have been received at this office concerning the reckless running of automobiles and the residents of the Valley think it is nearly time a stop was put to it. Many women who depend on a horse and carriage to come to Plainfield are almost afraid to venture on the road alone, particularly on Sunday, and this condition of things, it is believed should not exist. Oftentimes the occupants of the automobiles do not have perfectly clear heads and are not altogether accountable for what they do.

THOSE SIXTY VOTES.

C. D. McMurtry Denies Story About Assessor E. M. French's Alleged Promise.

The Democrats of the borough are much incensed over the attitude of the Republicans in spreading false reports to hurt the Democratic vote. It is said that Senator Charles A. Reed is responsible for the rumor charging Elston M. French with having promised Calvin D. McMurtry, the Democratic nominee for sheriff, sixty Republican votes.

In company with Mr. McMurtry, Mr. French called on Senator Reed Thursday afternoon to deny the allegation and to ascertain the basis for the report. Senator Reed it is claimed declared that a friend of his had told him that he had heard it directly from Mr. McMurtry. The latter positively denied that any such statement was made by him and further declared that it was entirely false.

COMPLETELY PARALYZED.

Many Troubles Subsequently Fell to the Lot of Manning Fields.

Complete paralysis overtook Manning Fields while walking along West Sixth street, yesterday morning, and he sought out a convenient front porch whereon to recover. He proved to be somewhat of an obstruction to the residents of the house and the police were summoned. Patrolman Higgins assisted Manning to a less conspicuous abiding place where he remained until this morning.

He was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, when it was found he had recovered from the paralysis only to become afflicted with complete loss of memory. He was warned to avoid using front stoops for a sleeping place in the future, after which sentence was suspended.

QUILTING PARTY.

Given by the Members of the Woman's Relief Corps.

The members of the Woman's Relief Corps were entertained yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. W. Nash, on Prospect avenue, at a quilting party. The quilt was started some time ago and was completed yesterday. The members propose to sell the quilt for the best price, the profits to be given to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R. Following the quilting bee refreshments were served by Mrs. Nash and a social time was enjoyed.

A Famous Lecturer.

Rev. Dr. Buckley's lecture on "Christian Science—a Delusion" at the First M. E. church, Thursday evening, November 7, will be a event of the season. Reserved seats are on sale at Armstrong's. Dr. Buckley's able articles in the "Century" and other magazines, on "Christian Science," his various volumes on the same subject and on "other superstitions," on "Oratory" and other subjects, his remarkable debate with Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and with other teachers of error, his lectures throughout the land on more than a score of high-class themes, have won for him national fame.

Played Games Until Midnight.

Miss Deborah Winn, of the Jackson building, gave a pleasant Hallowe'en party Thursday evening to a dozen of her friends. Games furnished the principal amusement, and at midnight refreshments were served.

MUSICAL EVENINGS PLANNED.

WARD STEPHENS WILL ARRANGE TWO IF SUPPORT IS GIVEN.

Past Attempts Have Not Turned Out Well Financially—Will Make This Final Effort.

It has frequently been said of Plainfield that it is not a music-loving town and that every attempt to offer the public high-class concerts has met with a most discouraging lack of interest and financial support. Other towns smaller than Plainfield substantially support music clubs and every season arrange to hear right at home two or three artists of reputation.

Two years ago Ward Stephens gave a most delightful chamber music concert at the Casino. He was encouraged and helped in his efforts at that time by one of Plainfield's women who, needless to say, is a great lover of good music. The expenses of that concert were just barely paid.

One year later Mr. Stephens was induced to give another concert at the Y. M. C. A. Hall and the expenses were not paid. A third attempt was made by Mr. Stephens which was abandoned owing to lack of support from the public.

Mr. Stephens is now a resident of Plainfield. It has recently been suggested to him by some of the women of this city, who do love music, that he give two musical evenings during the winter at a private residence, if possible, and ask for a subscription of $10 which would entitle the subscriber to three tickets for each musicale. The number of subscribers would be limited.

Prominent artists would be engaged. Not a "Calve" or a "Jean de Reszki," but one in keeping with the amount subscribed. The scheme is purely an experimental one and Mr. Stephens says that he will not attempt to arrange the musical evenings unless a proper amount is subscribed. If fifty people would subscribe $10 each the financial success of the musicales would be assured. Mr. Stephens will be pleased to hear from any interested in the scheme.

BARN PARTY FOR HALLOWE'EN

HOW MISS MABEL HOOLEY ENTERTAINED HER LITTLE FRIENDS.

Danced to The Music Furnished by a Gramaphone—Field Decorations in The Barn.

A pleasant Hallowe'en party was given Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Hooley, 70 Rockview avenue, by their daughter, Miss Mabel Hooley. The affair was held in Mr. Hooley's barn which had been transformed into a place which was just the thing for the young folks to have a good time. Japanese lanterns covered the electric lights, while decorations of cornstalks, pumpkins and other field products were used with good effect.

Miss Hooley entertained her young friends in royal style, while she was assisted by her parents and her aunt, Miss Brooks. The chief amusement was dancing, music for which was furnished by a gramaphone. The young folks had a merry time dancing the two-step and the Virginia reel and other popular numbers, after which refreshments consisting of apples, pumpkin pies, raisins, peanuts and other goods things, were served. A little later the party of young folks retired to the house, where ice cream and cake was served.

Those present included the following: The Misses Mabel Hooley, Helen Hooley, Majorie Howard, Dorothy Howard, Adelaide Howard and May Faber, Reginald Broome, Leslie Brokaw, Jack Dewey, Tracy Howard, John Valiant, Jr., DeWitt Brokaw, Jr., Edward Suffern, Edward Overton, Harold Hegeman and Langdon Howard.

SMASHED WEIGHING MACHINE.

Crowd of Young Men Caught in the Act By Druggist Hall.

In their search about town for legitimate prey, Thursday evening, a crowd of young men discovered a large bronze weighing machine in front of Hall's drug store. Without more ado the machine was knocked over and demolished. The act was witnessed by Mr. Hall, who gave chase and captured one of the culprits. Unless the damage is paid for he intends prosecuting all who took part in the mischief.

Difference of a Dollar.

The toilet set advertised by Woodhull & Martin in yesterday's Press for 98 cents, should of been $1.98. The first figure did not print.

Practicing for Christmas.

The choir of St. Mary's church has already commenced to practice Christmas music. Meetings are held twice a week for this purpose.

WORK IN JAPAN.

Interesting Discussion at Meeting of Young Women's Mission Band at Trinity Church.

Facts concerning the work being done in Southern Japan by the missionaries of the Reformed church formed the basis for an evening's interesting discussion at the regular meeting of the Young Women's Mission Band of the Trinity Reformed church last evening. During the short meeting much was learned of the great task of Christianizing that people.

Miss Kate Baxter related the "Story of Missions" and a "Brief History of South Japan Missions" was the topic of Miss Mabel Woodruff's paper. In illustration of the subject Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff exhibited a number of pictures of the mission field which attracted considerable attention. "What Chance a Missionary Has" was told by Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh. "Japanese Home Life" was described in an article read by Mrs. H. W. Marshall. A letter from one of the missionaries—Mr. Peek—was read by Miss Martha Anthony. Miss Cora Laire closed the exercises by reading a suitable poem.

The organization has recently sent to Miss Curry, at her mission station in New York, a barrel of clothing.

Miss Lilly Remson was chairman of the committee which arranged the programme and presided over the latter part of the meeting.

ONE DAY LATE.

But the Young People of Grace M. E. Church Had a Good Time all the Same.

A Hallowe'en party was given under the auspices of the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church, at 97 Westervelt avenue, last evening. The house is a vacant one and it had been adorned throughout the various rooms with autumn leaves, vines, pumpkins, corn stacks and other things symbolical of the season.

In attendance were delegations from Westfield, Cranford, Scotch Plains and the First M. E. church of this city. Contests such as pie eating, apple and potato races and apple bobbing were among the features. A weird story of "Jones' Ghost" was related by Miss G. Steiner, who chose to tell the tale in a darkened room. John Carney, Jr., of Bayonne, told fortunes in a little booth.

Those in charge of the affair were Miss Delia Voehl, Miss Mary G. Steiner, and Mr. Wilson, the superintendent of the Sunday-school. The assistants were the Misses Addie Carney, Tina Voehl, Mary Hoagland, Ada VanHorn, Carrie S. Pangborn and Benjamin Schuck, Ralph Bullman, Arthur Austin and Ray Stevens.

FINES ALL PROFITS.

But Patrolman McCarthy Finally Ended The Good Things For The Corned Beef Peddlers.

Charley Williams and two friends resolved to go into the retail grocery business yestereay afternoon and began operations by stealing a case of corned beef from a North avenue grocery.

Dividing the stock, the trio separated and commenced peddling their wares about town, offering the cans at such a price that housewives thought western steers were a glut in the market and immediately had visions of reduced butcher bills. The theft had been witnessed, however, and Williams' career in the grocery business was cut short by the arrival of Patrolman McCarthy.

This morning he appeared before Justice Nash and pleaded guilty to the charge of stealing. He was held in $50 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury. The police are looking for his two companions.

Republicans Counting on a Majority of 2,500 in Union County Tuesday.

The Republican county committee met last evening at Elizabeth and discussed matters pertaining to the coming election. The meeting was not largely attended, but considerable enthusiasm was manifested.

Reports were received from all parts of the county, and it was the general opinion that the Republican ticket would have a majority of about 2,500. The reports were all encouraging and the committees feels that is no doubt but what the entire ticket will be elected throughout the State. The election tickets for the townships were given out for distribution.

The Plainfield members of the committee present were Andrew McCardell, William N. Runyon, John Keeley, William T. Kirk, William Newcorn and Frank H. Smith.

BOROUGH PLANS MORE PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS

Building Lines, Fire Limits and Municipal Street Cleaning Are All Discussed

ORDINANCES TO BE DRAFTED

MAYOR SMALLEY WAKES UP AT MEETING OF BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Introduced Several Subjects of Interest to North Plainfield—Councilmen Seemed to Favor Them In Discussion.

The promise made by Mayor Smalley on assuming his duties upon re-election that the policy of municipal improvements which marked his previous administration, would be continued, is being faithfully kept. At the regular monthly meeting of the Borough Council, last evening, steps were taken to provide for a proper building line ordinance. Provision was made for a a street cleaning ordinance. Following immediately after the improvement to Somerset street, the discussion at the meeting showed that before the members of the Council retire from office many things will be accomplished for the good of the borough.

All the members were present when the meeting was called to order with the exception of Mr. Coddington. Action was immediately taken on a petition addressed to the body by the Antietam command, of the Union Veterans' Union, asking for an appropriation to assist in defraying the expenses of the encampment of the order which will be held during the fore part of the present month. The matter was referred to the corporation counsel for his opinion.

Collector Brown's report for the month of October, summarized, was as follows: Taxes and interest, $9,384.97; board of health, $1,116 67; special school, $4,583.20; Watchung avenue assessment, $109.40; sale of Watchung avenue bonds, $9,000.00; rent from property sold for taxes, $22 00; Frank Bowley, clerk fines, $3 60; balance on hand, October 1, $2,648.99. Total, $25,901 23; disbursements, $13 007.12. Balance on hand November 1, 12 894 11.

The claims, which were ordered paid, aggregated approximately $2 000. In the report of the street committee for the month of October were the following items of expenditures: Somerset street widening, labor, $151 60; crosswalks, $70,89; hire of steam roller for seven days, $63 00; storm sewer, A. M. Griffen, supplies, $4 73; C. M. Meaker, balance on contract, $21 96; C. M. Meeker, for grate, $3.06; C. M. Meeker, for manhole cover, $11; H. C. VanEmburgh, engineer, $63.25; D. C. Smalley, freight on pipes, $49 27; repairing Somerset street, labor, $79.50; macadamizing Westervelt avenue, $33 40; J. H. Wilson & Co., $779 57; street sprinkling, W. Conover, labor, $9; total, $1,349.23. This report was accepted.

In compliance with a request of the Gesang and Turn Verein, the Mayor announced the appointment of Frank G. White as a special marshal for Saengerbund Hall. The sum of $60, collected as rent on the property on Watchung avenue, formerly owned by William Miles, but taken by the borough for unpaid taxes, was ordered to be placed to the credit of the delinquent taxpayer so as to reduce his assessment.

Mayor Smalley brought up the matter of improvements as soon as the regular business was disposed of by the Council. He stated that in his opinion there should be some provision to prevent the building of porches, which might obstruct the pavement of Somerset street and also to deter property-owners along the thoroughfare from planting trees on the sidewalks. The great improvement of Somerset street would be lessened by obstructions of this nature, he declared. It had come to the Mayor's knowledge that certain property-owners intend to build small frame structures to be used as stores and he believed that such action should be immediately frustrated by the adoption of a building ordinance, which would prohibit the erection of a certain class of structures along Somerset street.

Councilman Nichols endorsed the proposition and Councilman Clark recommended that at the same time action be taken to prevent residents along the thoroughfare from sweeping and distributing waste paper and other refuse on the street. The committee on law and ordinances was instructed to act in conjunction with the

AT THE THEATRES.

Three revivals of successful comedies and a bill of straight vaudeville and pantomime make up the Proctor bills for next week. "Blue Jeans" will be sumptuously revived at the Fifth Avenue and "What Happened to Jones" will return to New York for a week at the Fifty-eighth Street. Up in Harlem "Nancy & Co." will be revived while the Twenty-third Street has the Hanlons' pantomime and a big vaudeville show. Continuous performances have been resumed at the Twenty-third Street and the show is non-stopping at the Fifth Avenue. Election returns will be read from the stage and on that day the performances will be continuous at all of Manager Proctor's Theatres. There will be the usual early openings for the holiday and an extra amount of vaudeville will be presented. "Phunphorall" is the Hanlons' pantomine at the Twenty-third Street, preceded by "A Quiet Family" as a curtain-raiser. The Hanlon Brothers will appear in both numbers as leaders in the fun-making.

Joseph Arthur's famous comedy-drama, "Blue Jeans," will be revived at the Fifth Avenue with all the original mechanical effects and a completely new scenic equipment. The author has given the rehearsals his personal attention, and special preparations have been made for a sumptuous revival of the popular old comedy. Vaudeville will rule between acts and will keep the show continuous, the leaders in that section being Billy S. Clifford, late of Clifford and Huth; the Brothers Damann, wonderful acrobats; Bianca Lyons, a skilful violiniste; Terry and Elmer, eccentric dancers; Edyth Wells, a lady baritone, and the kalatechnoscopes moving pictures. The Sunday concerts begin at 2 o'clock.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

HEAVY BRITISH LOSS

Fifty-four Officers and Men Killed Outright.

BOER ATTACK IS VERY SEVERE.

Lord Kitchener Assumes In Absence of Particulars That the Enemy Has Retired—Death of Colonel Benson Deplored.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The following is the text of Lord Kitchener's dispatch, dated Pretoria, Nov. 1:

"I have just heard of a severe attack made on the rearguard of Colonel Benson's column when about twenty miles northwest of Bethel, near Brakenlaagte, during a thick mist.

"The strength of the enemy is reported to have been a thousand. They rushed two guns with the rearguard, but it is uncertain whether they were able to remove them.

"I fear our casualties were heavy. Colonel Benson was wounded, but not severely. A relieving column will reach him this morning."

Later Lord Kitchener telegraphed as follows:

"Colonel Barter, who marched from the constabulary line yesterday, reached Benson's column early this morning unopposed. He reports that Colonel Benson died of his wounds.

"The other casualties are the following: Killed—Colonel M. Guinness, Major F. D. Murray, Captains M. W. Lindsay and F. T. Thorold, Lieutenants E. V. I. Brooke and R. E. Shepherd and Second Lieutenant A. J. Corlett. Died of wounds—Captain Eyre Lloyd."

Lord Kitchener then gives the names of thirteen other officers who were wounded, most of them severely, and announces that fifty-four noncommissioned officers and men were killed and 160 wounded, adding that four of the latter have since died of their wounds.

The dispatch then says:

"I assume that the two guns have been recovered and the enemy has withdrawn, but I have no further details.

"I deeply regret the loss of Colonel Benson and the officers and men who fell with him. In Benson the service loses a most gallant and capable officer, who invariably led his column with marked success and judgment.

"The fighting was at very close quarters and maintained with great determination by both sides. The enemy suffered heavily, but I have not yet received a reliable estimate. The Boers retired east."

CHASING BOTHA.

Several Columns on His Track. Many Prisoners Taken.

PRETORIA, Nov. 2.—Reports received on Wednesday account for eighty more Boers, besides several who were killed. General Williams and Colonel Fortescue took fifty more prisoners from the train wrecking commando which has infested the district from twenty to sixty miles northeast of Pretoria. Generals Plumer and Bullock together have taken twenty-five stragglers in the vicinity of Pongola. It is estimated that there are still about 500 Boers in the Volkrust district and Pultenay. Generals Plumer and Bullock are attending to these.

The remainder of Commander in Chief Botha's commando are back in the Ermelo and Carolina districts. General Botha himself is reported to be near Lake Chrissie. Several columns are on his track.

Since the collapse of General Botha's Natal movement the normal progress of attrition has been resumed. This work was temporarily affected by the concentration of columns to the southwest. These columns are again hunting down the weakened district commandos throughout the country and evidently with increased successes.

Big Horse Show Assured.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—Entries for the national horse show which opens in Madison Square Garden Nov. 18 have closed. The list numbers 1,434, the longest on record, the next longest being 1,363 last year. The light harness and carriage horses, saddlers and trotters show a slight falling off. The entries for four-in-hands total fifty-two against thirty-seven last year.

Kongo Troops Eaten by Cannibals.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Antwerp says that a detachment of black troops recently sent by the Kongo authorities to quell a revolt at Batingis, in Kassai, was captured, and the soldiers were killed, roasted and eaten.

NEW YORK POLITICS

Both Fusion and Tammany Leaders Predict Victory.

BETTING ODDS FAVOR FUSIONISTS.

Anti-Tammany Forces Predict Mr. Low's Election by a Landslide. Mr. Croker's Figures Are Still Held Back.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—The mayoralty campaign in this city is nearing the end. Both sides have been bending every energy for success during the final week of the struggle.

Every estimate made by the Republicans, the Citizens' Union and the Greater New York Democracy shows that the entire fusion ticket will be elected and that the county candidates will run little if any behind Mr. Low. The majority for the fusion county ticket on the average will, according to present indications, be not less than 25,000. It may be 40,000 or even 60,000. All the fusion campaign managers say that the tide against Tammany is so strong that accurate estimates are impossible. Everything, they claim, indicates a landslide, and the anti-Tammany majority for every man on the fusion ticket may break a record. It is now only a question of keeping up the pace and getting out the vote.

Jacob Brenner, the chairman of the Republican campaign committee in Brooklyn, declares emphatically that Kings county will give a majority of not less than 18,000 for Low. "We are expecting a much larger majority than that," he continued, "and when I say 18,000 I am giving rock bottom figures. In fact, the reports that we have received from all parts of the county point to a landslide. I am actually afraid to give the figures that have been handed in to us, they are so flattering, for fear of being classed as a rainbow chaser. But it is a fact that all the indications point to a very large majority for Low."

Richard Croker has received from the Tammany Hall district leaders their final estimates of the vote to be cast at next Tuesday's election in Manhattan and the Bronx.

They are claimed to indicate a victory for Shepard of about the same proportions as the prevailing Tammany estimate during the last week—20,000 to 40,000 majority in New York county.

The estimates received by Mr. Croker have not been officially announced, but may be submitted by him to the meeting of the Tammany executive committee that will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Betting in Wall street on the election yesterday took a decided turn in favor of Seth Low, and before the close of the day the fusion candidate was the favorite at 100 to 80.

The betting was dull, and the wagers made were for small amounts as compared with bets of previous days this week.

The Low men attribute the dullness to a lack of Shepard money, while the Democrats said it was due to a holding off of backers for better odds.

May Boycott Us.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—The Spectator, discussing the continued agitation in central Europe against the United States, says today: "There is, in fact, a real danger. If the conservative parties on the continent, which include the clarians, Clericals and Absolutists the vast mass of the peasantry, ld achieve a temporary triumph, a effort will be made to boycott States and the Argentine protection for 'vital in- ued by their competi- the movement will bly the hatred with it, nemies and common in- England and America will te drive all who speak English ell and buy food freely into a sin- group."

The Turk Prepares to Resist.

PARIS, Nov. 2.—The sultan has ordered the completion with all speed of the defenses at Salonika, Smyrna and the entrance to the Dardanelles, says the Constantinople correspondent of the Echo de Paris. Submarine mines will be placed and troops mobilized at points where disembarkations are likely. A violent anti-French feeling prevails, and fears are felt for the safety of French residents in Turkish cities, Constantinople excepted.

The cash in the treasury is classified as follows: Gold reserve fund, $150,000,000; trust fund, $803,897,089; general fund, $148,310,584; in national bank depositaries, $110,840,438; total, $1,213,048,111.

5. The jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Supreme Court by writ of error shall be exclusively vested in the Court of Errors and Appeals; but any writ of error pending in the Supreme Court at the time of the adoption of this amendment shall be proceeded upon as if no change had taken place.

ROOSEVELTS ANNOYED.

President Orders the White House Grounds Closed to Visitors.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Camera fiends have annoyed the Roosevelt children so much in their playground south of the White House that the grounds will be closed to the public in the future. The lawn between the mansion and the drive which surrounds the White House lot adjacent to the grounds of the Washington monument have for the last five years been open for half an hour morning and evening to allow the clerks from the state, war and navy building to make a short cut between Pennsylvania avenue and that building.

During the time when the gates were open people have been allowed to stroll over the lawn and even to approach the White House and see the president go out for his daily horseback ride at 4 o'clock. The Roosevelt children are usually playing in the grounds at that hour, and they have frequently been asked by visitors with cameras to pose for their photographs. If they refused or ignored the requests, they were persistently followed about the grounds.

The president has expressed his dislike for this and reluctantly ordered that the gates be kept closed at all hours of the day. The only exception to the rule will be made on each Saturday afternoon during the summer season when the Marine band gives a concert.

CABINET MEETING.

Appointments Discussed by President and His Advisers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Nearly all the time of the cabinet meeting yesterday was occupied by the president in the inspection of the long lists of appointments that were made by his predecessor during the recess of congress. Mr. Roosevelt will have to send all these appointments to the senate or make appointments to take their places. While it is his policy to send in for confirmation all the recess appointments made by President McKinley, he wishes, as a matter of principle, to know about the men for whose appointment he is to assume the responsibility.

President Roosevelt asked the cabinet officers also to submit lists of vacancies in federal offices soon to occur under their several jurisdictions. He wishes to take up the subject of new appointees systematically and deliberately in order that the best appointments for the places may be made. The president is in favor of reappointing federal officers who have served acceptably for four years unless there are special, strong reasons for superseding them, but he is determined to apply the principle of merit rigidly in each case.

The cabinet also discussed the abrogation of the so called Browning Indian school ruling, but no further action was taken.

Last of the Gang Convicted.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 2.—Fred Lee Rice has been convicted here on the charge of murdering William Boyd. Rice is the only survivor of the notorious trio of Aurora bank burglars. The murder occurred on the 4th of June last. Boyd and another constable were escorting the three prisoners to the jail when some one threw two loaded revolvers into their carriage. In the desperate fight for liberty which followed Constable Boyd was shot through the head. Counsel for the prisoner was granted a reserve case because the jury found that he did not actually do the shooting. They held that he was guilty of murder, however, on the ground that there was a conspiracy between himself and the other two prisoners, Jones and Rutledge.

Chile Asked to Stop Road Building.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—"The Argentine government has requested Chile to desist from roadmaking in the Cordilleras," says a dispatch to The Daily Mail from Buenos Ayres, "and has demanded an official declaration that the roadmaking already accomplished does not constitute a claim by Chile to the territory in dispute. Failing this assurance, the Argentine minister, it is said, will be withdrawn from Santiago, Chile."

A Million Railway Contract.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 2.—Chief Engineer J. A. Atwood of the Pittsburg and Lake Erie railroad has awarded to the Union Switch and Signal company the contract for a system of automatic electric block signals for the whole length of the road from Youngstown to Glassport. The contract is worth $100,000. Installation of the system will begin as soon as possible.

Li Hung Chang Very Ill.

PEKING, Nov. 2.—Li Hung Chang's foreign physicians have pronounced his condition grave. He has had hemorrhages for the last two days. His death would probably affect the negotiations as to Manchuria which he has been conducting with M. Paul Lessar, Russian minister to China.

TRIAL NEARLY ENDED

The Schley Court Adjourned Until Monday.

A FEW ERRORS TO BE CORRECTED.

The Admiral May Consume Some Time In Going Over the Record of His Testimony and In Making Additions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The hands of the elongated antique timepiece which stands against the wall in the hall occupied by the Schley court of inquiry pointed to 12:45 o'clock yesterday when Judge Advocate Lemly announced that he had no more witnesses to call, and Mr. Rayner, following him, said that no witnesses would be summoned on behalf of Admiral Schley in surrebuttal.

For a moment it appeared as if the now famous case was about to reach a sudden conclusion. But this delusion was soon dissipated by the announcement on the part of Captain Lemly that he might ask to be allowed to bring in one more witness on Monday and also a statement from Mr. Rayner that Admiral Schley himself would desire to return to the stand on Monday to correct errors in his evidence as officially reported.

There is a probability that the admiral will consume considerable time in going over the printed record of what he said, and there also is an understanding that he will make some additions to his former statements. But it is not believed that beyond what he may have to say there will be much more testimony taken in the case.

The only witness that the judge advocate still has in mind is Lieutenant Strauss, and Captain Lemly said yesterday that if the lieutenant's attendance could be secured he would detain the court for a short time only.

Captain Sigsbee will also return to the stand Monday to make corrections in the testimony given Thursday by him.

Yesterday's witnesses were Mr. Sylvester Scovel, a former newspaper correspondent who saw service in the Cuban campaign; Lieutenant Hood, who commanded the Hawk during the Spanish war, and also a number of officers who were heard Thursday and who returned to the stand to correct testimony. The court held only one session and adjourned over until Monday.

Forty Naval Vessels Proposed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—Over and above the four warships for which congress directed him last session to prepare plans as a basis for appropriation at the next session Secretary Long has before him the recommendations of the board of naval construction looking to authorization by congress of the building of forty more naval vessels of all classes, from battleships down to tugboats. The plans for the two armored cruisers and two battleships projected by congress last session already have been prepared and look to the construction of about 16,000 ton battleships and 14,000 ton cruisers. The battleships and cruisers additional to these which the construction board proposes probably will be of about the same size and general type.

Maso's Manifesto.

HAVANA, Nov. 2.—The manifesto of General Bartolome Maso in declaring himself a candidate for the presidency of Cuba has caused a stir in political circles. It is generally admitted that he will prove a strong candidate if he receives the support of the Autonomist party. El Diario de la Marina, the organ of the Autonomists, commends the manifesto. "It is not the redhot bombshell predicted," says this paper, "but a conservative and well ordered pronouncement. The idea of evolving gradually into independence under the Platt amendment is the view the Autonomists take."

Presbyterians Hope For Unity.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov 2.—Representatives of the northern and southern synods of the Presbyterian church are in session here for the purpose of taking steps toward establishing a great Presbyterian college for the higher education of women to cost probably $500,000. The hope is to make it a bond of union between the two contending branches of the church in the United States.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 2.—Late reports from the Winnebago Indian reservation in Nebraska are that fifty-three of the 1,000 Indians on the agency have died of smallpox, which is epidemic there, and as the medical force of the reservation is limited the disease threatens the destruction of the entire tribe.

TOULON, Nov. 2.—The French Mediterranean squadron arrived here Thursday evening, but it did not include the ships detached under Admiral Caillard, which are expected to be reported in Turkish waters late tomorrow.

Col. Tyler's Attitude.

While Plainfield is not favored every day with visits from United States senators and candidates for governor of New Jersey and their appearance here at the Republican mass-meeting Thursday evening was an event of importance to the city, yet the most significant thing was the fact that Col. Mason W. Tyler was chairman of the meeting and his vigorous arraignment of the Democratic party.

Even the most forgetful cannot help but remember that it was only last December that Col. Mason W. Tyler was arrayed against the local Republican forces as Democratic candidate for mayor. He conducted an active campaign against Dr. O. L. Jenkins, the Republican candidate, but was finally beaten by 376 votes. Colonel Tyler had the support in the fight of a number of prominent Republicans and recruited most of his strength in the Second and Third wards.

Col. Tyler's campaign was conducted chiefly on his own personality. While the question of ousting the existing city administration played a more or less prominent part, the strict party lines did not figure. It was nevertheless understood that Col. Tyler was a Democrat, numbered perhaps among the admirers of Grover Cleveland rather than in the following of William Jennings Bryan.

So the announcement that Col. Tyler would preside at the meeting was in the nature of a surprise. It was not, however, difficult to see the reason the place should be offered to him. Col. Tyler is a popular man and has many friends in this city. His speech was decidedly a surprise. He roundly denounced the Democratic party. There was no mincing of words. He characterized it as the synonym for all moral and political rottenness. It was certainly a strong card for the Republican party and one of which it will not fail to take advantage.

It is very pleasant that the firemen of North Plainfield should be invited to participate in parades in different sections of the State. The members of Warren Engine Company have demonstrated the fact that they are one of the best drilled companies in the State. It is taking more or less risk, however, to take away part of the apparatus and nearly all of the experienced fire fighters. Had the fire in the borough, Thursday, been of a serious nature, it might have been a costly trip for the borough department. As long as the fire occurred within the hydrant limits it was all right, otherwise the absence of the steamer would have been severely felt.

The hunting season in this State opened yesterday. The law permits killing of the hare, rabbit, quail, partridge, grouse, English and ringneck pheasants, gray, black and fox squirrels, woodcock, gray, English or Wilson snipe, reed bird, rail bird or marsh hen, geese, duck and other web-footed wild fowl. It is unlawful to trap game and to hunt on Sunday, or when there is snow on the ground. Hunting ducks at night or from vessels not propelled by oars or paddles is prohibited. No quail, grouse, woodcock, squirrel or pheasant are permitted to be removed from the State.

A printer who makes a feature of advertising posters remarks that "the bill-board is the brass band of an advertising campaign," and that "it fits into a newspaper advertising campaign admirably," according to the Philadelphia Record. However, he does not affirm (nor does any disinterested person of experience affirm) that the bill-board or any other agency can be successfully used in place of the newspaper. A number of large advertisers, including theatrical managers, have abandoned posters altogether in order to put more money into newspaper advertising.

The executive committee of the Consumers' League of New Jersey has sent a notice to all the newspapers of the State calling the attention of all kindly disposed persons of the fact that if they will do all their Christmas shopping before December 1, the strain upon the employes in the shops will be greatly relieved and much suffering spared to hundreds of men and women. It is worth remembering.

There isn't any doubt but that the name of Frederick Miller, of Elizabeth, Republican candidate for the Assembly, is going to be cut considerably in Plainfield. He is not considered the type of man who will make by any means an ideal Assemblyman, and the general feeling against him promises to be made evident at the polls.

A returning Plainfielder forgot the existence of the fence between the tracks at the North Avenue station the other evening. It was dark and he could not see the fence. A serious accident nearly resulted. If the fence had been painted white it would have been easy to distinguish.

U. S. Senator Kean quite surprised his hearers Thursday night by the clever little speech he made. The Senator has not been considered a fluent platform speaker, but this campaign has evidently developed his powers in that direction to a considerable extent.

If you happen to have a spare moment one of these autumn days, just drop into the office of the Plainfield Water Supply Company and let the officials of that company know that you favor the installation of meters.

Only two days now before Election day. The interest in the campaign as far as Plainfield is concerned has not yet reached the point that it threatens to disrupt the community. Really somebody ought to wake up.

Last night it was the Democrats' turn to wish that the doors of Music Hall were once more open to the public.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

Church Rally.

A rally will be held at the Fillmore Baptist church Sunday, November 10, and ministers from out of town will participate in the exercises. In the morning Rev. E. J. Cruder will preach, and in the afternoon Rev. A. W. Smith will make an address. Rev. E. E. Jackson will deliver a sermon in the evening.

Miss Della Voehl, of Somerset street, has returned from the Pan-American Exposition.

Methodist Bishops Hope to Effect Church Union.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 2.—Bishop Goodsell presided at the morning session yesterday of the Methodist bishops. It was decided to hold the next semiannual conference at Chattanooga, at which time closer relations and the final union of the churches north and south will be further considered.

Dr. James M. King, who was the first assistant of the late Dr. Spencer of Atlanta, was elected corresponding secretary of the Church Extension society, with headquarters at Philadelphia. Dr. King's successor will not be named until next week.

The reports of Bishops Cranston, Merrill and Andrews were presented and referred to committees for further consideration.

Bishop McCabe presided at the afternoon session, which was devoted to reports from nine foreign countries. Bishop Thoburn, who is present, reported for his conferences in India, Bengal, Burma and the Philippines.

Bishop Vincent, for the European conferences, and Bishop Hartsell, for the African conferences, reported by letter.

Bishop Hartsell is now en route to South Africa. He is able to travel from Cape Town by railway to New Umiltila, where he hopes to hold the first conference in that region next week. The work in Liberia shows phenomenal progress.

FATAL COLLISION.

Freight and Work Trains Wrecked at Plymouth, Ind.

VALPARAISO, Ind., Nov. 2.—Two men were instantly killed and a dozen others injured in a collision at Plymouth last evening between a local freight on the Pennsylvania road and a work train of the Clifford Construction company of this city.

The accident occurred at the bottom of a steep hill. The local freight, running at high speed, crashed into the work train, which consisted only of a locomotive and caboose, in which were the crew of fifteen men. Cars and locomotives were smashed into bits, and the dead and mangled men were buried under the wreckage. Wrecking trains from Plymouth, Chicago and Fort Wayne started immediately for the scene. Trains on this division of the Pennsylvania road were delayed for several hours.

Not a man in the work train escaped uninjured, and it is feared several of them are fatally hurt.

Miss Stone's Case Serious.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 2.—The case of Miss Stone has again become more serious. The brigands, it appears, are still holding out for the £25,000 ransom, and it is feared that, should they persist in their demand, Miss Stone will have to be sacrificed. Nevertheless the negotiations are still proceeding. Anxiety prevails at the United States legation, whence there has been an active exchange of telegrams between Secretary Spencer Eddy and various points. Mr. Eddy has had a long conference with Sir Nicholas R. O'Conor, the British embassador here, who is actively assisting in the efforts to bring about Miss Stone's release.

Census School Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The census report on school, militia and voting ages for all states and territories shows the following summary for the country as a whole: Persons of school age, 5 to 20 years, 26,110,788, of whom 24,987,130 are native born, 22,490,211 are white and 13,086,160 are males; males of militia age, 16,360,363, of whom 13,132,280 are native born and 14,495,396 are white, and males of voting age, 21,829,819, of whom 16,227,285 are native born and 19,036,143 are white. Of the total number of males 21 years of age and over 2,326,295 are illiterate. A little over 28 per cent of the entire alien population of the country is illiterate.

Murdered by His Wife.

MILO, Me., Nov. 2.—The coroner's jury which investigated the murder of Thomas Gero at Chesuncook, a region far up in the woods beyond Moosehead lake, has found that he came to his death from knife wounds inflicted by his wife. The chief witness was a guide, Fred Holt, who was going down the lake in a canoe. He heard screams at the Gero cabin and, going ashore, looked into the cabin and saw Mrs. Gero standing over her husband with a bloody knife in her hand. Mrs. Gero is being brought out of the woods by the sheriff for a court hearing.

Unprecedented Wool Transactions.

BOSTON, Nov. 2.—The Commercial Bulletin says in today's report on the wool trade of the United States: "All American records have been broken in the Boston wool market this week. The largest transactions hitherto on record in any one week's business were for the week ending Nov. 3, 1899, when 18,366,500 pounds were sold in Boston. This total has been surpassed by a week's transactions of not less than 25,000,000 pounds, a larger amount than the combined clips of Michigan and Ohio."

Real Soul Mates In Marriage

"It's a pity," said Mr. Manley, "that Miss Browne is so soured on matrimony. She doesn't know how happy she might be."

"Are married couples ever happy?" asked Susan Pepper.

Mr. Manley did not seem to hear. He was looking off at the sea where the whitecaps rose and fell in rhythmic waves like mermaids dancing with their soul mates.

"Yes," he said, "some married people are very happy. I know I would not be single again for anything the world could give me. What is more, I have not seen any woman I thought would suit me so well for a wife as the one who is my wife. If ever I reach what I am aiming for in my profession, and I expect to, I shall owe it largely to having a comfortable, harmonious home to go away from in the morning and to return to at night and that I owe altogether to my wife. That, now, is a selfish way of looking at it, and I should be ashamed to put the thing so if I did not at least try to have my wife get as much satisfaction out of matrimony as I do myself.

"I didn't understand that at first. When a man marries, he does so in order that he may be happy, not in order that he may make his wife happy. A woman does the same. Both go into the wedded state for what they can get out of matrimony for themselves, not for what they can contribute to the pleasure of the other. It's selfishness from the word go, nine cases out of ten. A marriage like that is not happy of course. It ought not to be.

"Then, again, when a man and woman are married they think they own each other. Each one thinks the other ought to give up all personal tastes and fancies, all individuality, to please the one, or else it is proof that the other does not love the one properly. Selfishness again, pure brute selfishness.

"I USED TO YAWP ABOUND."

A man is apt to have this notion more than a woman. He thinks if he supports that woman she has no right to herself, that he owns her, soul and body. I confess I was like that."

He stopped suddenly. Then he looked at Susan and once more took up the thread precisely where he had dropped it.

"I may as well tell you," he said. "When I was first married, I had the idea that a man should rule his own house and that a wife should be an underling to his will. Well, I—I used to yawp around sometimes in what I thought was a masterful way, like a blooming fool, about how I wanted things run. My wife never answered me back a word, never in her life, at such a time, but she went on and managed the thing exactly in her own way, if it was something over which she considered she had especial jurisdiction. Without a trace of temper she gave me to understand there was around her a circle of individuality which I must not cross. If she minded my storming around, if it hurt her, I never knew it. I do not know to this day. She used sometimes to interfere, too, with what I was sure were my prerogatives. Then I had my own way, just as she did, but I am sure I made a lot more fuss over it than she did. At last we both learned not to meddle with each other, but to respect each other's individuality. I let her alone; she lets me alone. It took us twelve years to learn it, though."

The whitecaps were by this time no longer disporting rhythmically. They were tumbling about, angry and distorted. Manley turned his eyes toward the sea and smiled. Then he went on:

"My wife is the one woman of the world for me. She manages her house wisely; holds down the expenses; will not go into debt to keep up with the style of her neighbors. I am as fond of her as I was when we were first married, and I am far happier than I was then. Both of us are, I am sure. What is more, I respect my wife far more than I did when we were first married."

Certainly here is one happily mated pair, though the harmony at first was like that which pervades woman's clubs at election time. What though it did require twelve years to wear off the sharp corners of each nature? The result is worth it. SUSAN PEPPER.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

"Sir," he said, "looking Mr. Utterson in the eyes, "was that my master's voice?"

"It seems much changed," replied the lawyer, very pale, but giving look for look.

"Changed? Well, yes, I think so," said the butler. "Have I been twenty years in this man's house, to be deceived about his voice? No, sir; master's made away with; he was made away with eight days ago, when we heard him cry out upon the name of God; and who's in there instead of him, and why it stays there, is a thing that cries to heaven, Mr. Utterson!"

"Well, Mr. Utterson, you are a hard man to satisfy, but I'll do it yet," said Poole. "All this last week (you must know) him, or it, or whatever it is that lives in that cabinet, has been crying, night and day, for some sort of medicine, and can not get it to his mind. It was sometimes his way—the master's, that is—to write his orders on a sheet of paper, and throw it on the stair. We've had nothing else this week back; nothing but papers, and a closed door, and the very meals left there to be smuggled in when nobody was looking. Well, sir, every day, ay, and twice and thrice in the same day, there have been orders and complaints, and I have been sent flying to all the wholesale chemists in town. Every time I brought the stuff back, there would be another paper telling me to return it, because it was not pure, and another order to a different firm. This drug is wanted bitter bad, sir, whatever for."

"Have you any of these papers?" asked Mr. Utterson.

Poole felt in his pocket and handed out a crumpled note, which the lawyer, bending nearer to the candle, carefully examined. Its contents ran thus: "Dr. Jekyll presents his compliments to Messrs. Maw. He assures them that their last sample is impure and quite useless for his present purpose. In the year 18—, Dr. J. purchased a somewhat large quantity from Messrs. M. He now begs them to search with the most sedulous care, and should any of the same quality be left, to forward it to him at once. Expense is no consideration. The importance of this to Dr. J. can hardly be exaggerated." So far the letter had run composedly enough; but here, with a sudden splutter of the pen the writer's emotion had broken loose. "For God's sake," he added, "find me some of the old."

"This is a strange note," said Mr. Utterson; and then sharply, "How do you come to have it open?"

"The man at Maw's was main angry, sir, and he threw it back to me like so much dirt," returned Poole.

"This is unquestionably the doctor's hand, do you know?" resumed the lawyer.

"I thought it looked like it, sir," said the servant rather sulkily; and then, with another voice, "But what matters hand of write," he said. "I've seen him!"

Seen him?" repeated Mr. Utterson. "Well?"

"That's it!" said Poole. 'It was this way: I came suddenly into the theater from the garden. It seems he had slipped out to look for this drug or whatever it is; for the cabinet door was open, and there he was at the far end of the room digging among the crates. He looked up when I came in, gave a kind of cry, and whipped upstairs into the cabinet. It was but for one minute that I saw him, but the hair stood upon my head like quills. Sir, if that was my master, why had he a mask upon his face? If it was my master, why did he cry out like a rat, and run from me? I have served him long enough. And then—" The man paused and passed his hand over his face.

"These are all very strange circumstances," said Mr. Utterson, "but I think I begin to see daylight. Your master, Poole, is plainly seized with one of those maladies that both torture and deform the sufferer; hence, for aught I know, the alterations of his voice; hence the mask and the avoidance of his friends; hence his eagerness to find this drug, by means of which the poor soul retains some hope of ultimate recovery—God grant that he be not deceived! There is my explanation; it is sad enough, Poole, ay, and appalling to consider; but it is plain and natural, hangs well together, and delivers us from all exorbitant alarms."

"Sir,' said the butler, turning to a sort of mottled pallor, "that thing was not my master, and there's the truth. My master"—here he looked round him and began to whisper—"is a tall, fine build of a man, and this was more of a dwarf. No, sir, that thing in the mask was never Doctor Jekyll—God knows what it was, but it was never Doctor Jekyll; and it is the belief of my heart that there was murder done."

"Poole," replied the lawyer, "if you say that, it will become my duty to make certain. Much as I desire to spare your master's feelings, much as I am puzzled by this note which seems to prove him to be still alive, I shall consider it my duty to break in that door."

"Ah, Mr. Utterson, that's talking!" cried the butler.

"And now comes the second question," resumed Utterson; "Who is going to do it?"

"Why, you and me," was the undaunted reply.

"That's very well said," returned the lawyer; "and whatever comes of it, I shall make it my business to see you are no loser."

"There is an ax in the theater," continued Poole; "and you might take the kitchen poker for yourself."

The lawyer took that rude but weighty instrument into his hand and balanced it. "Do you know, Poole," he said, looking up, "that you and I are about to place ourselves in a position of some peril?"

"You may say so, sir, indeed," returned the butler.

"It is well. then, that we should be frank," said the other. "We both think more than we have said; let us make a clean breast. This masked figure that you saw, did you recognize it?"

"Well, sir, it went so quick, and the creature was so doubled up, that I could hardly swear to that," was the answer. "But if you mean, was it Mr. Hyde?—why, yes, I think it was! You see, it was much of the same bigness; and it had the same quick light way with it; and then who else could have got in by the laboratory door? You have not forgot, sir, that at the time of the murder he had still the key with him? But that's not all. I don't know, Mr. Utterson, if ever you met this Mr. Hyde?"

"Yes," said the lawyer, " I once spoke with him."

"Then you must know as well as the rest of us that there was something queer about the gentleman—something that gave a man a turn— I don't know rightly how to say it, sir, beyond this; that you felt it in your marrow kind of cold and thin."

"I own I felt something of what you describe," said Mr. Utterson.

"Quite so, sir," returned Poole. "Well, when that masked thing like a monkey jumped from among the chemicals and whipped into the cabinet, it went down my spine like ice. Oh, I know it's not evidence, Mr. Utterson; I'm book learned enough for that; but a man has his feelings, and I give you my Bible word it was Mr. Hyde!"

"Ay, ay," said the lawyer. "My fears incline to the same point. Evil, I fear, founded—evil was sure to come—of that connection. Ay, truly, I believe you; I believe poor Harry is killed, and I believe his murderer—for what purpose, God alone can tell—is still lurking in his victim's room. Well, let our name be vengeance. Call Bradshaw."

The footman came at the summons, very white and nervous.

"Pull yourself together, Bradshaw," said the lawyer. "This suspense, I know, is telling upon all of you; but it is now our intention to make an end of it. Poole, here, and I are going to force our way into the cabinet. If all is well, my shoulders are broad enough to bear the blame. Meanwhile, lest anything should really be amiss, or any malefactor seek to escape by the back, you and the boy must go round the corner with a pair of good sticks, and take your post at the laboratory door. We give you ten minutes to get there."

CHAPTER IX.

"And now, Poole, let us get to ours," he said; and taking the poker under his arm, led the way into the yard. The scud had banked over the moon, and it was now quite dark. The wind, which only broke in puffs and draughts into that deep well of building, tossed the light of the candle hither and yon. As they reached the door a light footfall was heard on the inside.

"So it will walk all day sir," whispered Poole; "ay, and the better part of the night. Only when a new sample comes from the chemist, there's a bit of a break. Ah, it's an ill conscience that's such an enemy to rest! Ah, sir, there's blood foully shed in every step of it! But hark again, a little closer—put your heart in your ears, Mr. Utterson, and tell me, is that the doctor's foot?"

The steps fell lightly and oddly, with a certain swing, for all they went so slowly; it was different indeed from the heavy creaking tread of Henry Jekyll. Utterson sighed. "Is there never anything else?" he asked.

Poole nodded. "Once," he said. "Once I heard it weeping!"

"Weeping? how's that?" said the lawyer, conscious of a sudden thrill of horror.

"Weeping like a woman or a lost soul?" said the butler. "I came away with that upon my heart, that I could have wept too."

But now the ten minutes drew to an end. Poole disinterred the ax from under a stack of packing-straw; the candle was set upon the nearest table to light them to the attack; and they drew near with bated breath to where that patient foot was still going up and down, up and down, in the quiet of the night.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Shortage of Cars Delays Trade. Loans of Gold to Foreign Nations.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

Although the latest railway returns indicate that transporting facilities have greatly improved, the nation's business has expanded more rapidly. Car shortage has, in fact, become the chief retarding influence. From all sections of the country and many different lines of industry complaints are heard regarding the inability to move goods. Probably the delay has been most aggravating in the case of coal, unseasonably high temperature alone preventing serious inconvenience.

Formerly exports of gold were the signal for anxiety in domestic money markets and depression in prices of securities. Movement of coin or bullion out of the country indicated that foreign creditors were insisting on cash in settlement of adverse trade balances. Now similar exports are regarded with equanimity and even gratification, since they mean that money is being loaned to less fortunate nations.

Wheat came to market more freely, arrivals at western cities amounting to 7,060,590 bushels against 6,182,393 in the previous week and 5,537,602 a year ago. Atlantic exports were less satisfactory than last week; but, including all United States ports, the week's shipments were 5,018,103 bushels against 3,685,821 last year and 3,508,998 in 1899. A further fall put cotton $3 a bale lower than it was two weeks ago, and port receipts are very heavy despite reports that many planters are holding for more profitable prices.

Banking liabilities in October were unusually light, amounting to only $76,777 against $550,000 a year ago.

Miners' Convention Closed.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 2.—The state miners' convention adjourned after deciding to hold another convention in this city Nov. 26. There was also a call issued for a meeting here on Nov. 27 to which the operators of Virginia and West Virginia will be invited. The convention of two days resulted in nothing more than this. It is the object of the National Mine Workers' officials to have the state miners request the operators to confer with them. Owing to the fact that the national officials of the United Mine Workers will be busy from now until the time of the national convention in January, it is thought very little work will be accomplished in West Virginia toward increasing the membership of the organization and establishing new unions.

A Waitress' Strange Story.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Miss Minnie A. Gardiner, a waitress in a cheap restaurant in this city, tells an interesting story in which she claims to have been stolen while a small child and that her father is a rich Chicago banker named Loeb. Miss Gardiner says that until a short time ago she supposed her father to be Charles W. Gardiner, a photographer, who left Troy a short time ago, and claims she was abused by her supposed mother. Before Gardiner left the city she declares he said: "You are not related to me or my wife. Your name is Loeb, and your father is a banker in Chicago. You were taken from your home when a baby, and it broke your mother's heart. Your father is still alive and in Chicago."

Another Respite For Krist.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Nov. 2.—Governor Odell has granted another respite to Nov 20 in the case of Frederick Krist, under sentence of death for shooting his sweetheart at Waverly, Tioga county. Hon. George Raines of Rochester, counsel for Krist, appeared before the court of appeals, and the court fixed Nov. 11 as the day to consider a motion for a reargument of the case. Krist is now in Auburn prison and was to have been executed on Monday next.

Exploding Locomotive Kills One.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 2.—A Lake Shore and Michigan Southern locomotive leased by the Pittsburg and Lake Erie road blew up last night near Shanopin Station, killing Harry Walters of Sheridan, Pa., and severely injuring J. F. Sullivan, of Cleveland, O. Walters was a Pittsburg and Lake Erie engineer who was piloting the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern crew. Of the injured Sullivan, who is badly scalded and suffering from shock, may die.

Close Call For Government.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 2.—After a continuous sitting of twenty-seven hours the federal house of representatives rejected by a vote of 39 to 25 a resolution of no confidence in the government introduced by Mr. Reid, the opposition leader, in connection with the tariff bill.

George VanNest, William Beekman and Stelle Randolph formed a hunting party which spent yesterday gunning about Landsdown. Included in the captured game was a fox which fell victim to the unerring aim of Van Nest.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

An exciting game of football was played on Hope Common yesterday morning between the St. Mary choir boys and the Temperance Cadets. The latter were defeated by a score of 12 to 0. The ball was carried across the line for both touchdowns by William Owens and the goals were kicked by Harry Hillman.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup, bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

Mr. Dunham, the organist of the church, has been devoting the past two months to perfecting the cast and has now sixty voices. Judging by the interest taken at the rehearsals of those taking part its success is now assured.

Fowler's Candy Kitchen.

Fowler, the East Front street confectioner, is making some decided improvements at his candy kitchen. He is going to extend his candy counter the full length of the store, sixty feet. This will be known as the 5 and 10 cent counter. He will continue to sell higher price candy, all of which he makes himself and guarantees to be pure. Mr. Fowler will serve ice cream and hot soda throughout the winter.

LOCAL DEMOCRATS MET LAST NIGHT.

hear he had done so, as it was only last year that Colonel Tyler was a candidate for mayor on the Democratic ticket. He spoke of the work done by Democratic mayors and councilmen in the past, and then told why the people should vote for the men who are now on the ticket. None of them, he said, were controlled by a ring or acting as tools for any one.

He warned all good Democrats not to let McMurray come to them with $5 for a day's work, which consisted of standing about the curbstones on election day and doing nothing in particular, as it in reality was the giving up of the right to vote. "If you need the $5," said Mr. Hetfield, "take it, put it in your pocket, but when you go to the polls exercise your rights as citizens."

In conclusion, he asked all to vote the Democratic ticket and beat the ring, which now has the city in its control.

Previous to the opening of the meeting and between speakers, musical selections were rendered by LaVere's band.

Surprise to Harry Winn.

A surprise party was tendered to Harry Winn, of Steiner place, last evening. The affair was arranged by Miss Lillian Mirex, and there were seventeen young people in the surprise. Games constituted the feature of the evening's entertainment. A supper was served at midnight.

Couldn't Find Prowlers.

The police were summoned at 10 o'clock last night to the home of Mrs. Randall, on East Front street, where it was thought some one was prowling about. A thorough investigation failed to reveal any strangers.

LEAL'S DEFEATED.

Westerley High School Won Football Game 6 to 0 This Morning.

In a stiff game the Leal's School boys were defeated this morning on the Hope chapel gridiron by the Westerley High School eleven, of Staten Island the final score being 6 to 0.

The single touchdown and goal therefrom was made in the first half by steady plunges mostly through centre, Murray, the left half back carrying the ball over. Corteiyou, the full back, kicked an easy goal. During the remainder of this half the home team was on the offensive.

In the first half Ralph Schoonmaker, Leal's left halfback, received an ugly cut over the eye and was taken out when almost blinded in the second half. The local eleven was hammered in the second half, although the visitors were unable to push the ball over the goal line.

McGee, Leal's full back, made a brilliant run of forty yards in this half on a double pass. Penalties were inflicted on both teams.

FOR RESISTING OFFICER.

John Kavanagh Was Fined $5 While George Green Escaped With Suspended Sentence.

City Judge Runyon, this morning, disposed of the cases of John Kavanagh and George Green, who were tried recently on complaint of Patrolman Tosten. Kavanagh was fined $5 for resisting the officer and, in Green's case, sentence was suspended.

The trouble for which they were arrested occurred at Kavanagh's restaurant, on Grant avenue, from which place he ejected Green as Totten passed by. He placed the former under arrest, but Kavanagh broke away and retreated to his apartments. In passing sentence the Court declared the officer was justified in his course, as he did not what led up to the disturbance.

Green was very penitent and, in response to an earnest talk from the Judge, promised to mend his ways and merit the good opinion which his employer and others have of him.

HOW PLAINFIELD'S VOTE IS LIKELY TO GO

Impartial Summing Up of the Local Situation on the Eve of Election Day.

VERY LITTLE ENTHUSIASM.

NEITHER OF THE PARTIES HAS CONDUCTED LIVELY CAMPAIGNS.

A General Republican Victory is Expected, Although a Few Democrats Have a Fighting Chance—No Sign of a Landslide.

On the very eve of election, there is little or no excitement in Plainfield over the result. Most of the interest seems centered on the the contest for municipal offices. While the vast majority of the people know that there is to be an election tomorrow and have an idea who the candidates are, the popular excitement which marks the close of the campaign in other parts of the State and in New York city is wholly absent here.

The campaign has been a very quiet one and neither party has exerted itself to any great extent. Two mass meetings have been the extent of the public demonstrations. Today the mails are utilized for the distribution of campaign literature and tickets. As a result the letter-carriers are carrying heavy loads. Tomorrow both parties expect to have full corps of workers at work, trying to get the vote out as early as possible.

Plainfield is normally Republican. In November, 1898, the Republican plurality here was 962. It was a little more than 700 the year after. Last year's presidental ticket received a plurality of 1,525. The city election last December showed a Republican majority of 1,222. To the impartial investigator of local conditions, there is every reason to believe that the Republican candidates on the general ticket will poll close to the normal plurality of 800. There may be exceptions. Frederick Miller, Republican candidate for the assembly, is likely to run behind his ticket. Charles L. Moffett, Democratic candidate for the assembly, is likely to receive a complimentary vote.

As far as the municipal election is concerned there are no signs of any great upheaval in city affairs. It is reasonable to expect that the Republicans will have no trouble in retaining their hold on the Common Council. The hottest fight appears to be likely in the First ward where Walter L. Hetfield is waging a very vigorous campaign against the Republican machine and Councilman William Gloak, its candidate. Mr. Hetfield lacks the organization of his opponent, but he is a veteran, resourceful campaigner and promises a hot fight for election. The Democrats' best chance of victory is there.

Lewis G. Timpson, Democratic, may be expected to reduce Councilman Jan VanHerwerden's vote in the Second ward, but it is doubtful if he can overcome the normal Republican majority there. Leslie M. Daniel, Republican, will undoubtedly be elected councilman from the Third ward. The Fourth has always been the Democratic stronghold, and John M. Casey is considered a strong candidate. Councilman Robert M. Lee, the Republican nominee, stands likely to win out unless the Democratic committee has some surprise in store.

The split among the Second ward Republicans over the nomination of Edward E. Pray as councilman at large has not healed. As has been already stated in these columns, it has developed largely into a movement to break down the power of John E. Keely in that ward. The opposition has been keeping its own council, but the results of its labors may be expected through the mail today. An attempt has been made to spread the movement into other wards, but with what success is not known. The name of J. P. Homan, one of the Democratic nominees, will be used in place of Mr. Pray's name.

Mr. Pray deeply regrets that he has been the cause of any split in his party and says that had he known that there was the slightest objection to his candidacy, he would have gladly withdrawn in favor of Mr. Ginna or any other man whom the Republicans of the Second ward might have desired.

In regard to his position, Mr. Pray said to a Press reporter, "I want the people of the Second ward to understand that I go into this election utterly unpledged. My name was first used without my consent or knowledge but when the nomination was tendered to me, I accepted it, considering it an honor. I do not represent any faction as I have not the slightest idea of any of the factional troubles there. My only aim will be to serve the city as well as it can. I shall be directed only by my belief as to what is for the best interests of the city. I have been successful in business and now have a little leisure time which I will gladly devote to the city as I am a great admirer of it and believe that it is one of the best governed in the country. I have some good friends in the Republican party but they have not asked me to pledge myself to any line of policy and I should not have, even had they asked me."

Mr. Pray's statement will be read with interest as it answers many of the rumors which have been circulated through the city during the last week.

The opposition of Mr. Pray is likely to be well developed in the Second and Third wards. It is a question, however, whether the majority from the First and Fourth can be overcome. If not, Mr. Pray's election is assured. The chances are that Councilman James F. Buckle and Clarence L. Murphy will be elected councilmen-at-large. Mr. Buckle will probably poll the bigger vote.

Of course, City Judge William N. Runyon's election is assured as there is no one against him. Floyd D. Woodhull, Republican, will probably defeat Rev. J. P. Taylor, Democratic, for member of the Board of Education.

As to the justices of the peace and constables, it can be that some Democrat will conduct a lively little campaign of his own and win out. If they trust to the ticket carrying them through, however, the Republican nominee will be chosen without doubt.

Just what plurality the Republican ticket will receive will largely depend on the success which meets the efforts of the Republicans to get the vote out. Under normal conditions it should be about 800 and there appears no reason to believe that it will be otherwise this year. If there is a landslide for either side, it has developed with remarkable quietness and has so far given no evidence of its existance.

Where To Vote.

The polls will be open tomorrow from 6 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 2 p. m. to 7 p. m.

WHAT DEMOCRATS THINK OF TYLER'S SPEECH.

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders Talks on Col. Tyler's Opinion of Democracy.

CORRUPTION IN ALL PARTIES

POINTS OUT PRESENT CONDITIONS OVER IN PHILADELPHIA.

Says Political Rottenness Invariably Follows Continued Power By Any Party—Remarks on Col. Tyler's Action.

Much surprise was caused in this city and in the borough by the utterance of Col. Mason W. Tyler at the recent Republican mass meeting, particularly that portion of his speech reflecting on the Democratic party. In order to ascertain the feeling of the party criticized, a Daily Press reporter interviewed Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, one of the most influential and able business men residing in that borough, and one who is held in high respect, irrespective of party affiliations.

Mr. Saunders said: "If Col. Tyler is correctly reported in last Friday's Daily Press, he said at the recent Reform Hall meeting 'how any person within 100 miles of New York can have the face to vote the Democratic ticket is more than I can understand.' As it is my intention to vote the Democratic ticket ticket from top to bottom it may not be amiss to explain to Col. Tyler that being a resident of Plainfield I am within 100 miles of the city of Philadelphia, where the Republican party has had its own way since my school days there and I am so educated in the belief that this way has always been and still is dark, treacherous, immoral, corrupt and altogether damnable that even the vice of Tammany Hall cannot convert me from the belief that New Jersey, which is geographically side by side side with Pennsylvania, will grow equally as bad if left too long under the foot of the Republican party.

"If the Democratic party is the 'synonymn for all moral and political rottenness because it fostered the slave trade, advocated repudiation, stood for greenbacks, free silver and race tracks,' why did so estimable a man as Col. Mason W. Tyler less than one year ago accept the regular nomination for mayor of Plainfield (within 100 miles of Tammany Hall) made by the Democratic party? The stench from Tammany Hall, which now seems to have such a violent effect upon the Colonel's nostrils was no more than a passing perfume of the eau de Mayflower at the time when the bee was buzzing.

"I think the Colonel accepted this Democratic nomination because he knew that 'moral and political rottenness' invariably follows continued power by any party; that George Washington 'fostered the slave trade'; that the Democratic party never upheld repudiation; that from Jefferson to Cleveland much good has come out of the Democratic party. Political corruption belongs to no one party."

JAMES M SEYMOUR,
Democratic Candidate for Governor.

ALIS FOUND EASY VICTORY.

DEFEATED LINCOLN A. A., OF WESTFIELD, BY SCORE OF 36 TO 0.

Plainfield Eleven Outweighed and Outplayed Its Opponents—Game Was Played at Westfield.

Outweighed and outplayed, the Lincoln A. A., of Westfield, went down before the Alis A. A., of Plainfield, Saturday afternoon, by a score of 36 to 0. The game was played on the Westfield grounds.

It was an uneven contest from the start, when it was evident that the home team was outclassed. The Alis boys carried the ball at will. Tom Smith gained the most ground around the ends, while Rapalje, formerly fullback on Rutgers, made great gains through the line. There were no brilliant runs made but the Alis eleven was good for at least ten yards on every play. Occasionally Smith punted and Alis regained the ball almost immediately on downs. Westfield was forced on the defensive almost the entire game.

The teams lined up as follows:

Alis A. A.		Lincoln A. A.
Cathcart	right end	Hegeman
Waring-Wittke	right tackle	Hurst
Giddis	right guard	Pearson
Davis	centre	Everit, Taylor
Pike	left guard	Collins
H. Smith	left end	Wolf
Phillips, Radford	quarter back	Bogart
Woolston	right half back	Brunner
T. Smith	left half back	Davenport
G. Smith	full back	Howe

Denies A Rumor.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I am informed that Captain Kiely is circulating a story, that in a conversation had with him the other evening that I said "I had no use for the Irish or Catholic vote and did not want them." There were too many reputable gentlemen present to refute such a false report. I desire to emphatically deny that such language was used, or anything to that effect, and to brand it is as an infamous falsehood It is only done through personal malice.

AT THE THEATRES.

J. H. Stoddart will play "The Bonnie Brier Bush" for another week at the Republic Theatre, at the end of which time that delightful play will be moved to Harlem for a week's engagement at the Harlem Opera House. From thence it goes to Toronto and the other principal cities of Canada and the northwestern States. No play produced in New York in the past half-dozen seasons has been accorded such excellent words of commendation from the greatest critics as has this dainty comedy-drama in which the favorite actor of New York's famous old stock companies has made his first appearance as a star.

John Kendrick Bangs, writing in "Harper's Weekly" says: "The Bonnie Brier Bush' is the most satisfactory dramatization of a popular book that has appeared. I would observe parenthetically that our managers would do well to profit by this example of how the thing should be done. Furthermore, it is exceedingly well acted. Mr. Stoddart's Lachlan Campbell would have made a reputation for this actor even if he had hitherto lacked it. The role fits him with that precise nicety that has made Jefferson's "Rip VanWinkle" a perennial attraction, and Mr. Stoddart is to be felicitated that upon his first appearance as a star, every curve of the figure of his genius is shown by the garments his playwights have cut for him." Mr. Stoddart in "The Bonnie Brier Bush" continues to draw crowded houses to the Theatre Republic at every performance. A special matinee will be given on Election day.

Modern Surgery Surpassed.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, "says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

THE FIGHT WITH BOTHA.

Further Details of the Attack In Which Benson Fell.

PRETORIA, Nov. 4.—Further details have been received regarding the attack by the Boers under Commandant General Louis Botha last week upon Colonel Benson's column near Brakenlaagte, eastern Transvaal. It appears that General Botha, who had been joined by another big commando aggregating a thousand men, attacked Colonel Benson's rearguard Oct. 30 on the march and captured two guns, but was unable to retain them. Colonel Benson fell mortally wounded early in the fight.

Major Wools-Sampson took command, collected the convoy and took up a position for defense about 500 yards from intrenchments prepared by the Boers. The captured guns were so situated that neither side could touch them.

The Boers made desperate efforts to overwhelm the whole British force, charging repeatedly right up to the British lines and being driven back each time with heavy loss. The defense was stubbornly and successfully maintained through the whole of the following day and the succeeding night until Colonel Barter, who had marched all night from Bushman's kop, brought relief in the morning of Nov. 1. The Boers then retired. Their losses are estimated as between 300 and 400. Colonel Benson did not long survive.

Not only did General Botha direct the attack, as already cabled, but he personally shared in the fighting.

Queen Alexandra, following the example of the late Queen Victoria, is sending Christmas gifts to the troops in South Africa. For this purpose she has ordered thousands of brier pipes, each silver mounted and bearing the stamp of the crown and her majesty's monogram.

BRIGGS REMEMBERS NOTHING.

Murderer of Mrs. Jones Arraigned at Bellows Falls, Vt.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Nov. 4.—In view of the fact that the murder of Mrs. Chauncey Jones at Langdon, N. H., is the first affair of the kind in this section of the country for nearly a quarter of a century it is not surprising that hundreds flocked to the little farmhouse, the scene of the tragedy, while many went to Claremont, N. H., where the accused man, George H. Briggs, was arraigned before a local justice. Briggs was held without bail to await the action of the grand jury without any evidence being produced exeept the statement of the county attorney. Briggs declared yesterday that he had no recollection of what occurred at the Jones house.

The result of the inquest has not yet been announced.

Cleveland Jones was closely questioned by the authorities. He said that when Briggs appeared at the doorway of the Jones house the four younger children sought refuge in the cellar and were there when their mother, shot to death, stumbled into the front room to die.

They heard Briggs leave the house and his oath to return and clean out the whole place, so that without even a glance at their dead mother's face they all rushed to the home of one of their neighbors.

Cleveland said that he saw Briggs struggling with his wife in his own doorway and heard her pleading with him not to go back to the Jones house.

Train Wreckers Try Again.

TORRINGTON, Conn., Nov. 4.—It is learned from an authoritative source that another attempt was made to wreck a train on the Naugatuck division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company on Saturday night. The train which leaves Winsted for Bridgeport at 9:40 was the one upon which the would be wreckers had designs. A large stone was found on the track in almost the identical spot where one was placed about a week ago. The engineer saw it in time to slow down his train. The locomotive struck the obstacle and moved it to one side and passed on its way unharmed.

"Scab" Workmen Shot.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 4.—Two machinists working in the Southern railway shops here, Walter Binder and William Seaver, were shot in their house some time after midnight last night by a party of men. Seaver was killed instantly and Binder desperately wounded. According to the antemortem statement of Binder the attacking men were former strikers who were bent upon killing the "scabs." Harry Jones and Arthur McCraney have been arrested. More arrests will follow.

No News From Miss Stone.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 4.—Nothing is publicly known here beyond what has been cabled regarding the whereabouts and fate of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the abducted American missionary, or the progress of the negotiations for her ransom. In the absence of news there is considerable disquietude.

TO PUNISH TREASON

Draft of a New Act Discussed In Manila.

AIMED AT TURBULENT FILIPINOS.

Vice Governor Wright Says, "Americans Are Here and Intend to Stay"—Strange Utterance of Senor Reyes.

MANILA, Nov. 4.—There was a public discussion before the Philippine commission yesterday of the draft of the act against treason and sedition. Many prominent Filipinos were present. Vice Governor Wright explained the object of the bill, saying that the Spanish code was unsatisfactory.

"There are a number of people living in the Philippines," remarked Mr. Wright, "who, so long as there is no punishment for treason, will take advantage of the fact to clog the wheels of the insular government. It must not be overlooked that turbulent spirits exist in the pacified provinces. The masses of the people are susceptible to inflammatory utterances and liable to be influenced by scheming demagogues. It would be inexcusable weakness on the part of the commission to allow the people to be aroused to deeds of violence who are now gradually drifting to the pursuits of peace.

"The recent renewed attempts at insurrection in the island of Samar and the province of Batangas, Luzon, and at a few other points, due to noisy Filipino agitators, have caused a feeling of unrest in the minds of both Filipinos and Americans, and the effect of their continuance would be to make impossible the very things these agitators claim they most desire. Such endeavors serve to recruit the ranks of the insurgents and to postpone the era of good feeling and fellowship which must come.

"No excuse exists for secret political organizations. Their intent must be evil. No matter what may have been the opinions of the Filipinos regarding the sovereignty of the American government, the fact remains that the Americans are here, and, moreover, here they intend to stay."

The bill was then read in Spanish.

Senor Sabella Reyes, a Spanish journalist, who has been here for several weeks, said he was opposed to the bill and objected generally to the imposition of the death penalty for political crime. He suggested that persons committing the offenses against which the bill was aimed should be deported to the United States and declared that Italy and Portugal had enacted the most reasonable existing laws dealing with the matters under consideration.

Commissioner Worcester asked him if he considered the killing of King Humbert a political crime.

Senor Reyes—Nothing political is criminal.

Vice Governor Wright asked him if he considered the killing of President McKinley a criminal act.

Senor Reyes—I have already made it clear that there is no such thing as a political crime.

The commissioners indignantly ordered him to take his seat.

Senor Buencamino, on behalf of the Federal party, objected to the bill.

Advices from Catbalogan, Samar, say it is well known that, in spite of the fact that all the ports of Samar are closed, supplies still reach the insurgents. Most of this work is done during dark nights by small boats from the island of Leyte. Every available gunboat is now endeavoring to prevent this.

The capture of Lukban's commissary has proved a great blow to the insurrection, as it renders future supplies very precarious.

Conditions in the island of Leyte are very annoying to General Smith. A large number of junks are used with the express object of aiding the insurgents in Samar, covering the movements of fugitives and landing provisions and clothing.

Four Badly Hurt In Trolley Accident

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 4.—Four persons were seriously hurt, one of them perhaps fatally, and several others were slightly cut and bruised in a collision of two motor cars on the Columbus, London and Springfield Electric railway yesterday afternoon at Rome, a few miles west of Columbus. The collision occurred at the bottom of a steep grade and was caused by the brakes on a descending car failing to work, allowing it to crash into a car standing at a siding.

Fierce Fire In Lisbon, N. H.

LISBON, N. H., Nov. 4.—Starting in the peg mill of James G. Moore, fire has destroyed a large part of the business section of this town. The inflammable material in the mill made a tremendous blaze, and the flames quickly spread to the adjoining buildings on Main street. Not only were the principal business blocks burned, but several dwelling houses also were swept before the fire. The loss is fully $100,000.

Li Hung Chang Is Better.

PEKING, Nov. 4.—The condition of Li Hung Chang, who has been seriously ill, shows improvement. His physicians diagnose the malady as ulceration of the stomach, and the hemorrhages have been severe. As a rule he is an intractable patient; but, having been told that his life depends upon his adhering to a liquid diet, he is complying with the medical orders.

Ovation For Sousa's Band.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—Sousa's band received a memorable ovation at the close of its engagement at the Glasgow exhibition. The crowd wanted to carry the conductor on their shoulders. Mr. Sousa began a tour of the provinces today at Middlesborough.

UNCLE SAM'S MAIL.

Recommendations by Assistant Postmaster General.

FURTHER TEST FOR PNEUMATIC TUBES

Mr. Shallenburger Urges a Fast Service Between the Pacific Coast and the Orient—Annual Expenses Increased.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The annual report of Second Assistant Postmaster General William S. Shallenburger, just made public, urges regular direct fast mail service between the Pacific coast and the orient, the re-establishment of the pneumatic tube service generally and the closer separation of city mail by postal clerks on railway trains rather than by clerks of the mailing division after its arrival in the general office. Under the last named proposition the entire force engaged in distributing the mail ready for the carriers would be under one management, and congestion in a postoffice could be overcome by the temporary detail of railway mail clerks off duty. The city distribution postal cars have been assumed entirely by the railway mail service, supplanting the former practice of having clerks from the city postoffices go out some distance on the road to meet incoming trains.

Constant demands are now being made for still closer separation by having the railway mail clerk or superintendent in charge take the outgoing mail from the public and see that it is expeditiously dispatched and also deliver the incoming mail, properly made up for the carriers. Mr. Shallenburger suggests for the present a test of the practical operation of this proposition at postoffices whose gross receipts are $500,000 or more a year.

The postoffice department has no contract for direct mail service between the Pacific coast and the Philippines, mails being carried by government transports or by steamers to Hongkong and thence by steamers of other countries to Manila.

"The mail service and commercial interests," says the report, "would be greatly advanced by fast mail steamers adhering strictly to schedule time between the Pacific coast and Manila and calling at other ports at regular intervals under contract with this government."

The request for an appropriation of $500,000 for pneumatic service is renewed as a basis for beginning the service, which, when fully established, it is stated, will involve an annual expenditure approximately $800,000. The department expresses its opinion and that of the commission of experts that investigated the subject that the outright purchase of the system should not be considered by congress pending a more complete test.

The report shows that on June 30 last there were 267,357 miles of star route service, 183,358 of railroad routes, 45,779 of railway postoffice car routes and almost 3,000 miles of electric and cable car routes. The annual rate of expenditure for all classes of domestic mail transportation mail service has increased $6,940,285 since last year.

End of the Industrial Commission.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The industrial commission will cease to exist on Dec. 15 by operation of law. The members of the commission are now at home mostly to vote in the coming state elections. A full meeting of the commission will be held next Wednesday, and the commission probably will remain in session most of the month, going over its final report. This will be embodied in one volume and will be submitted to congress about the time the official existence of the commission expires.

Costly Blaze In Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 4.—Fire destroyed the warehouse and contents of the Metropolitan Storage company, 177 and 179 Second street, and partly damaged the property of the American Laundry company's plant and the Westlake, Delahunt & Smith printing office adjoining. The total loss will probably reach $100,000.

Forest Fires In Missouri.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Nov. 4.—The fiercest forest fires since 1835 are raging a few miles south of here. The woods have been in flames for three days, and thousands of cattle and horses are in danger. Farmers and stockmen have turned out en masse to fight the flames, but their efforts have so far availed little.

Robbery and Arson.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—Burglars entered the store of Henry Wolcott at Eatontown, N. J., and, blowing open the postoffice safe, secured $400 in cash and stamps. The building was set on fire and burned. The entire loss is placed at $4,000. Mr. Wolcott carried $3,000 insurance. Mrs. Nephew is the postmistress.

NEW JERSEY POLITICS.

Both Parties Claim Victory on Eve of Battle.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The gubernatorial campaign in New Jersey was brought to a close with the leaders of both parties claiming a victory for their respective candidates. It has been one of the most stubborn battles ever fought in the state, the Republicans leaving no stone unturned to hold the state machinery which they have controlled for nearly a decade, while the Democrats struggled to take it from them.

The Republicans base their hopes on two things—first, the large majority which must be wiped out by the opposition and, second, on the fact that they think the voters of the state, pleased at the prosperous condition of affairs in the nation, will return a Republican governor as an evidence of their indorsement of the national administration and as an assurance to the present head of the administration that they have confidence in him. It was principally on the latter issue that the party made its fight.

The Democrats claim victory chiefly on the personal popularity of their candidate for governor, James M. Seymour. He is very popular with the working classes, and his strength is acknowledged by his opponents. He has thrice been elected mayor of Newark by large majorities.

Both state committees have compiled tables made up from reports from various counties of the state. The Republicans by their figures show that Franklin Murphy, their candidate for governor, who is also chairman of the committee, will be elected by about 10,000 majority.

The table compiled by William B. Gourley, chairman of the Democratic state committee, shows that Mayor Seymour will have about 8,000 majority.

STARVED THEIR PATIENTS.

Nurses In an Insane Asylum Under Grave Charges.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Two female nurses at the Asylum For the Insane at Dunning, Ill., were today formally charged by Secretary Follett W. Bull of the Civil Service Reform association with having caused the death of two patients in the asylum, Kate Neddo and Kate Kurkowski.

The charge is made that the nurses deliberately withheld food from the patients, sometimes giving them nothing at all and for weeks nothing but bread and tea. It is also charged that medicines provided for the patients were not administered to them. The motive assigned in the charge is that the patients were especially obnoxious to the nurses and that their course was prompted by a desire to so weaken the patients that they would become ill and be sent to a ward for the sick, thus relieving the nurses of the care of them. It is charged that this course was carried too far and that the patients' death resulted from it.

The women died early in September, and the causes of death were given in the death certificates as inanition in one case and scurvy in the other. The case was brought to the attention of the Civil Service Reform association by Miss Jane Addams, Miss Julia C. Lathrop and Dr. Alice Hamilton of Hull House, who gained their first information from Dr. Clara Ferguson, for six years woman physician at Dunning.

Minister Wu Uninformed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Mr. Wu, the Chinese minister, has returned to the city from his trip to Ann Arbor, Mich., where he went to deliver an address to the students. Replying to questions on the subject, Mr. Wu said he had not received any notice of his recall to China, a step which a Peking dispatch of Saturday's date said had been determined upon, nor had he received any intimation that he would be asked to return. As he has heretofore expressed himself, the minister would not be surprised in the least if such action were contemplated by his government, as he now has served on the mission here for more than a year longer than the customary time allowed by the foreign office at any one place—viz, three years.

Accidental Shooting.

NEW CAANAN, Conn., Nov. 4.—As a result of the accidental discharge of a .32 caliber revolver Craig Zerzoy, aged fifteen, at his home fatally injured, and his death is momentarily expected. Zerzoy and Bert Saunders, a playmate, were holding the revolver, and in some manner it was prematurely discharged. As Zerzoy fell to the ground he said, "Do not harm Saunders, as it was not his fault." No arrest has been made.

Bay State Predictions.

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—A Republican plurality of from 30,000 to 40,000 is the concession of the Democratic leaders at what is practically the close of the state campaign of 1901 in Massachusetts. The Republican leaders, who claim to have canvassed the state thoroughly, say that their plurality will be 55,000. It has been one of the quietest campaigns known in this state, even in the ordinary quiet of "off years."

Tortured by Burglars.

MASSILLON, O., Nov. 4.—Balser Race, his wife and two sons, living near this city, were tortured by burglars until they gave up over $1,000 in certificates of deposit and $40 in money. The burglars set fire to the hair of their victims and threatened to roast them alive. One of Race's sons may not recover. The burglars escaped in vehicles stolen from Mr. Race.

A PERILOUS AIR TRIP.

Occupants of Escaped Captive Balloon Land Safely.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—The nine occupants of the captive balloon which escaped from this city Saturday afternoon have returned safely. The balloon was landed near Pescadero, fifty miles from this city and but a short distance from the ocean. The balloon was at one time setting out to sea, but was blown back to land. Those who made the involuntary trip were Ed P. Dudley, aeronaut; A. L. Dodge, Ed Foster, Jr.; Walter Leon, C. P. Vildecoq, J. F. Leonard, M. L. Howarth, John A. M. Swift and Mrs. J. P. Gunsaulus.

A. L. Dodge, one of the passengers, describing the trip, said the balloon first started toward Oakland and after circling about for a time drifted southward and became stationary for a short period. Then, catching a breeze from the eastward, it sailed over the San Mateo hills and stood far out over the ocean, and the occupants of the wicker cage faced the prospect of a plunge into the sea. Twice, according to Dodge's story, the balloon dipped close to the surface of the water, but rose again each time to a considerable altitude. Finally a breeze from the sea caught the balloon and carried it back over the land and after dragging the cage through the tops of a grove of trees landed it on a hillside six miles from Pescadero.

"It was a terrible experience," said Dodge, "and I would not undergo the same adventure again for any consideration. Everybody was more or less shaky, while the woman passenger and two or three men were so sick that they sat in the bottom of the basket throughout the trip."

The Outlook In Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4. — The campaign just closed in Pennsylvania has attracted more than the ordinary off year interest in consequence of the fusion of the Democrats and independent Republicans on candidates for the only two state offices to be filled, state treasurer and justice of the supreme court. The Republicans, organized under the name of the Union party, joined with the Democrats in the nomination of E. A. Coray, Jr., a Republican, for state treasurer and Herman Yerkes, a Democrat, for supreme court justice against the regular Republican nominees, Frank G. Harris, for state treasurer, and William P. Potter, for supreme judge. The fusion leaders are making strong predictions that their candidates will carry the state, while on the other hand the regular Republican leaders express confidence in bringing their candidates safely through, though passively conceding that the majority may be lowered from that of two years ago, when Barnett, Republican, was elected state treasurer by 110,000 majority over Creasy, Democrat.

Report on Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Authority for the conversion of all Hawaiian silver coins into corresponding coins of the United States and for the immigration of a number of Chinese laborers, conditioned upon their engaging in agricultural pursuits only during their residence in the territory and their return to their own country upon ceasing to be farmers, are the chief recommendations of Mr. H. E. Cooper, acting governor of Hawaii in his annual report. Other recommendations are for the maintenance of an expert forester at the islands to investigate and report upon forest conditions and forestry conservation and extension, the detail of a special agent of the fish commission at Honolulu and the adoption of restrictive measures to prevent wanton destruction of the food fishes of the territory. The estimates for appropriations required for the next fiscal year aggregate $1,412,444.

Strike May Be Averted.

SCRANTON, Nov. 4.—It is quite possible that the threatened strike of the 4,000 men employed in the eight collieries of the Temple Coal company may be averted. Superintendent Thorne told the men's committee that if it can be shown that the fifty dismissed men were known by the foreman to be Maltby strikers when they were hired the company would probably recall the dismissals. The men say there is no question but that the Temple company's foreman knew these men were from among the Maltby strikers.

Senator Davis' Speech Liked.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 4.—Senator Davis' speech in the pan-American congress upholding territorial integrity of the Latin-American republics, also disclaiming any designs against them on the part of the United States and affirming strongly the Monroe doctrine, created much discussion. The Liberal papers approve it. Don Filomeno Mala, editor of the radical Liberal paper El Diario del Hogar, regards the utterance as sure to have the happiest effect among the Liberals throughout South and Central America.

In the course of the afternoon the king visited Prince Albert to congratulate him upon the event, expressed his joy and promised to act as godfather.

FRANCE SENDS NOTE.

Formal Demands Made Upon Turkey For Satisfaction.

FRENCH FLEET NOT HEARD FROM.

It Is Expected That Admiral Caillard Will Be Joined by Other Vessels Before Reaching His Destination.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, has telegraphed M. Bapst, councilor of the French embassy at Constantinople, directing him, so it is announced, to present to Tewfik Pasha, Ottoman minister of foreign affairs, a note asking how the Turkish government proposes to pay the Lorando claim and demanding the execution of the sultan's irade dealing with that matter.

The note will also request satisfaction regarding the rights of France which are defined in the various capitulations and treaties and which in some cases have not been respected and in others have been encroached upon by Turkey.

The declaration of what has been done bears out the statement previously cabled regarding the intentions of the French government.

Admiral Caillard is expected to reach his destination today. The foreign office has received no news from him since his division left the other divisions of the Mediterranean squadron en route for Turkish waters days ago.

It is pointed out that the absence of news is not surprising, as the instructions to Admiral Caillard were to steer due south and to avoid passing in sight of Bonifacio, Corsica, or traversing the strait of Messina in order to prevent his movements being signaled. The vessels of the division carried only a normal supply of coal, but this would be much more than sufficient to enable them to steam 1,500 miles, the estimated distance they must cover before reaching their destination.

It is expected that Admiral Caillard will be joined en route by the torpedo cruiser Condor, which is stationed in Cretan waters, and may be met by the torpedo dispatch boat Vautour, which is stationed at Constantinople. It is also probable that the armored cruiser Admiral Charner, which arrived at Port Said Oct. 31 from the far east, is being held there in order to join Admiral Caillard if needed. It is further reported that three other warships are held in readiness at Toulon to re-enforce him should their presence be necessary.

Dispatches from Rome assert that the second division of the Italian Mediterranean squadron, which, as already announced, left for Turkish waters with the supposed object of counterbalancing the French naval demonstration, will join the first division, which has been cruising in the eastern Mediterranean for some time.

It appears also that the Greek warships Psara, Hydra, Spetsai and Eurotas are now at Smyrna, where is also the Russian Mediterranean squadron.

According to dispatches from Toulon, all the officers and men of the garrison now on leave of absence have been ordered to rejoin their respective commands immediately.

Three transports are preparing to receive troops. The cruisers Du Chayla and Cassard are ready to sail at a moment's notice, and the battleships Bouvet and Jaureguiberry will be ready Tuesday.

The work of repairing the docks was continued throughout yesterday.

Bloodshed at a Political Meeting.

ROANOKE, Va., Oct. 4.—Meager details have been received here from the little town of Ferrum, Va., about thirty miles from Roanoke, on the Roanoke and Southern railroad, of a tragedy at that place. A negro named William Hale took exception to some remarks made by a white man at a political meeting and, leaving the hall, went to his home, where he armed himself with a double barreled shotgun loaded with buckshot, returned to the place where the speaking was being held and fired both barrels into the crowd. A white man named Robinett, who was the village blacksmith, was killed instantly, and John Thomas, colored, received wounds from which he died shortly afterward. Two other men, both white, but names thus far not learned here, were seriously and probably fatally wounded. Hale made his escape and thus far has not been captured.

Mgr. Sbarretti's Farewell.

HAVANA, Nov. 4.—Mgr. Donato Sbarretti, whom the pope has appointed apostolic delegate extraordinary to the Philippines, has issued a farewell pastoral letter to the diocese of Havana. The retiring bishop advises the founding of religious schools for children and the continuation of the Saturday schools now managed by Cuban ladies. Referring to the return by the state to the church of the property belonging to the latter, Mgr. Sbarretti says, "This act will glorify before all nations the government which from a disinterested standpoint has so decreed."

Tomorrow's Election.

Now, on the eve of a State election in New Jersey, it is well to call the attention of the voters of Plainfield to the fact, and to remind them that it is not only a right but a duty of every American citizen to cast a ballot at the coming election. Of chief importance is the choice of a governor of this State. He is the chief executive of the State and, in his hands, rests the appointment of a great number of State officers. His policy will largely influence that of the State and his acts can play a wonderfully important part in the government of New Jersey.

Of the five men who are before the public as candidates for the place, it is a foregone conclusion that the decision of the people lies between two, Franklin Murphy, the Republican nominee, and James M. Seymour, the Democratic choice. For the last few years, the State has given a plurality to the Republican candidates. In 1898, Foster M. Voorhees' plurality for governor was 5,499. This year, the Republicans claim the election of Mr. Murphy by over 10,000 plurality while the Democrats are equally sanguine that Mr. Seymour will be elected by over 6,000 plurality.

Of special importance to the people of Union county is the choice of the men who are to go to the House of Assembly to represent the county there. Judgment should be exercised in voting for the candidates, keeping well in mind the fitness of the men for the place. Party lines will undoubtedly have much to do with the result, but there are other things to be considered.

Then there is the vote for the men who are to look after the municipal machinery for the next year. Seven out of the eleven councilmen are to be elected, also a city judge, a school trustee and sundry justices of the peace and constables. According to the provisions of the Meeker Election Law the city election is combined this year with the general one and all the candidates are voted for on one ticket. It was said that the change was made to reduce the cost, which it undoubtedly did. The enemies of the measure claimed it was an attempt to drag national and State issues into municipal affairs.

However the voting may be, it is certain that in Plainfield this year, the interest in the city election has overshadowed the importance of the other election. It is a question as to whether or not the Plainfield public is satisfied with its present local government. The Republicans are in power, at present, and they are making their fight on their past record in city affairs.

Every Plainfielder, who casts a ballot, tomorrow, should not allow the State ticket to influence him any as far as the city election is concerned. The issues are entirely separate and distinct. If these two can be kept apart in mind, then the Meeker law will be proved a complete success. Otherwise it will be a serious menace to the good government of cities.

Therefore be sure and vote tomorrow and, although there is but one ballot, remember that you are called upon to pass judgment on two entirely different subjects, the State government and the municipal situation, and let your vote be according to your belief in each case.

There has been some talk every autumn of an ordinance to prevent the burning of leaves in the city streets. If householders would only show a little judgment in regard to the burning of leaves, there would be little or no objection to the practice now so general. Early in the morning is the worst time in the day to burn them as they are still damp with the night's dew and will smoke and smoulder for hours filling the neighborhood with an atmosphere of smoke. If the burning is delayed until the middle of the day and the leaves spread out instead of heaped up so high, they will burn quickly and with almost no smoke. Just a little judgment will be a wonderful benefit to the community.

The Daily Press has been criticised for publishing in our editorial column the statement made by Col. Tyler regarding the Democratic party. It is hardly necessary to answer such thoughtless critics. Everyone who has followed the editorial comments of The Daily Press knows of our independent stand. We do not indorse the statement made by Col. Tyler. On the contrary, we do believe that there is a great deal of good in the Democratic as well as in the Republican party. Neither party can, however, pose as perfection. As far as Col. Tyler's statement is concerned, every impartial observer will agree that it was ill-timed coming from last year's Democratic candidate for mayor.

While the morning papers after election will be able to tell the Plainfield public the general results in State and county, it will be The Daily Press that the people of this city will look for reliable figures regarding the county and city as well as the State at large. As on past occasions, the election returns will be covered fully set forth in The Daily Press of Wednesday. For the benefit of the commuter, the result in the city will be bulletined in front of The Daily Press office at an early hour. Wednesday's issue of The Press will be published at 2 o'clock that afternoon.

There seems to be a mistaken idea prevailing that Col Mason W. Tyler was a candidate on the Citizens' ticket and not the Democratic ticket last year. He was regularly nominated at the Democratic city convention and was a candidate on the Democratic ticket. There was no Citizens' ticket last city election.

Mayor Smalley has a number of ideas for the improvement of North Plainfield which he is preparing to have adopted. The members of the Borough Council appear to take the same view and so his plans for a building line and fire limits appear to have an excellent chance of being adopted.

Do you know where you ought to vote tomorrow? A full list of the different polling places in the city is to be found on the first page. Ask one of your neighbors what ward and district you are in and then hunt up the polling place

It is said that figures will not lie and yet each political party is able to prove conclusively with figures before election that victory is coming its way. There is but one way to tell and that is to wait until it is all over.

While you are enjoying the holiday tomorrow, just stop into the office of the Plainfield Water Supply Comyany and tell them your opinion of the need of water meters

As tomorrow will be Election Day, a legal holiday in New Jersey, The Daily Press will not be published on that day.

All of the city public schools will observe the holiday tomorrow and no sessions will be held.

The election in town tomorrow gives promise of passing very quietly. A determined effort will be made by both parties to get a full vote out, but it is hardly probable but the Republican ticket will win out by a fair majority.

Weekly Competitions For Trophies on Local Courses Held Saturday.

SEASON WILL END SOON.

PRESIDENT'S CUP CONTEST NARROWED DOWN TO FOUR.

Another Month of Play at Hillside—D. H. Barrows Leads For Golf Committee Cup—Miss van-Herwerden Will Win.

The golf season in Plainfield is drawing to a close. Another month will end the weekly competitions at the Hillside Club. Tuesday will mark the close of the competitions at the Park Golf Club. There was the usual crowd out Saturday at both clubs, the courses being fast and the day delightful.

PARK GOLF CLUB.

Since Saturday's play for the President's cup at the Park Golf Club, the contest for that trophy has narrowed down to four players who still have a chance of winning it. The four are H. D. Hibbard, Senator Charles A. Reed, S. St. John McCutchen and George T. Rogers.

There was a fair field out Saturday in the weekly competition for the cup. First honors went to S. St. John McCutchen, who made the creditable score of 100, his best for the season. J. O. McKelvey's gross score was only one worse and he took second honors. J. H. Simpson, who made the lowest gross score for the day, 95, divided third honors with George T. Rogers. There were many who played and failed to turn in any cards. The last competition for the cup will be held Election Day morning.

Saturday's best scores were:

	G.	H.	N.
S. St. John McCutchen	100	20	80
Jos. O. McKelvey	101	17	84
George T. Rogers	108	20	88
J. H. Simpson	95	7	88
Charles Dupee	105	14	91
Charles B. Morse	109	17	92
William R. Faber	113	21	92
Samuel Townsend	110	17	93
Allan B. Laing	111	17	94
Charles W. McCutchen	121	24	97

The standing for the cup is now as follows:

H. D. Hibbard	11
Charles A. Reed	10
S. St. John McCutchen	9½
George T. Rogers	9½
Arthur H. Serrell	7
Joseph O McKelvey	6½
Samuel Townsend	6½
Joseph H. Howell	6
H. G. Phillips	6
Charles W. McCutchen	6
Allan B. Laing	5½
Morgan T. Townsend	5
Charles B. Morse	5
William A. Townsend	5
Frank Rogers	5
Leeley W. Hallock	5
Charles L. Nichols	4
James H. Simpson	3½
Joseph L. Myers	3

Herbert S. Rogers	3

HILLSIDE CLUB.

Another month will bring to a close the weekly play for the Mellick and Golf Committee cups at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. As far as the Mellick cup is concerned, it is safe to predict that Miss Lida vanHerwerden will be the winner. She has played a very strong game throughout the season, and quite early she secured an advanced position in the race. She now has thirty and one-half points, while her nearest competitor is Miss Daisy Elsberg with a total of twelve and one-half points. Saturday there were no entries for this competition, consequently no scores were made.

The only event of Saturday was the weekly play for the Golf Committee cup, and the number turning in scores reached an even eight. Dr. George W. Endicott, who has not been devoting much time this season to golf, surprised the contestants by making low net score, 72. His handicap, however, was quite large, it being 27. This is the lowest net score yet made on the course, but the golf committee will probably do things to Dr. Endicott's handicap.

Robert Abbott, who held third position in the competition, won second honors. He will still remain in the same position, but will have a total of ten points instead of eight. Elliott T. Barrows won third honors, and his additional point gives him a position with several contestants who have a total of three points. Dudley H. Barrows now leads for this trophy with a total of twelve and one half points, but O. Westley Abbott is very close to him with eleven points, while Robert Abbott is a close third with ten points. Barrows will have to guard his position well if he wants to win the trophy.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

To correct an erroneous report, Street Commissioner Gavett states that no discrimination has ever been made against any man in connection with the street and sewer department on account of color, political affiliation or religious belief.

Burded With Phosphorus.

Ray Stevens, of the borough, met with a painful injury Friday evening at a Hallowe'en party. In handling some phosphorus he burned his hand and wrist. The injured member was dressed by a physician.

MISS EMILY HOBHOUSE.

English Girl Who Exposed the Horrors of British Concentration Camps in South Africa.

Miss Emily Hobhouse, the young Englishwoman who has come into prominence on account of her disclosures of cruel and inhuman practices in the British concentration camps in South Africa, is the youngest daughter of the late Archdeacon Hobhouse. Her childhood was spent in an ordinary parsonage house, and she continued to reside there after the marriages and departures from it of her brothers and sisters, until the death of her father in 1895, busying herself in parish work under his surveillance. When he died she came to the United States, going to Minnesota, whither many Cornish miners, with whom at St. Ives she had been closely acquainted in earlier days, had emigrated, and there looked after their spiritual and temporal welfare in the village of Virginia. She visited hospital and jail there, and preached temperance with some effect. But bad times came on; the mines were closed, and the population dispersed.

After her return to England Miss Hobhouse busied herself in unpaid work under the Women's Industrial council. She wrote an article on the conditions of the women who work in the great dustyards of London, and also one on the housing of single women. The war in South Africa interested her greatly, and she found herself in sympathy with the "Friends," who make it one of their duties to alleviate the horrors of every war. She learned something of the customs and language of the Boers from Dutch residents or visitors, and eventually determined to go out and personally distribute the clothing which had been collected from pitying souls. Her unofficial report, which has caused so much comment, was originally written in the shape of letters to her nearest relatives.

ADMIRAL CROWNINSHIELD.

Head of the Bureau of Navigation and One of the Central Figures in Schley Inquiry.

Capt. Arrant Schuyler Crowninshield, who is held responsible in some quarters for the bitterness of the controversy over the battle of Santiago bay, is chief of the bureau of navigation and as such has the rank and pay of a rear admiral. His position gives him the same power and influence possessed by the adjutant general of the army. He is the naval officer who advises the civilian head of the navy department on the technical management of the department. During the war he was practically the head of the navy. He prepared orders to ships and officers and Secretary Long signed them. When Schley failed to execute Crowninshield's orders as he thought they should be he criticised him to the secretary, particularly when Schley turned back from Santiago to go to Key West to coal. That criticism constituted the beginning of the Sampson-Schley controversy. Crowninshield was born in New York in 1843, was graduated from the naval academy in 1863 and was immediately assigned to the Ticonderoga. He participated in both attacks on Fort Fisher, became lieutenant in 1866, lieutenant commander in 1868, commander in 1880 and captain in 1894. He commanded the Maine in 1897 and was relieved by Capt. Sigsbee. Senator Lodge has been a warm friend of the captain for years, and Crowninshield's appointment to the chiefship of the bureau of navigation in 1897 is attributed to the influence of the Massachusetts senator. During the war with Spain Crowninshield was a member of the board of strategy.

MRS. BROWN'S DINNER.

A Simple Little Feast With Seasonable Decorations.

"Let's give an autumn dinner of some sort to pay off some of our summer obligations," said little Mrs. Brown.

"All right," returned Brown cheerfully. "What will it be? A harvest festival with pumpkins and stacks of corn or"—

"Dick Brown! The idea of such a thing in our little flat! No; it must be dainty and rather modest, to be within our means, of course. Not that I don't like the harvest idea. I do. But there! Don't say another thing to me. I think I have it!" And have it she did, for her guests talked of her dainty feast for weeks afterward.

The table was most beautifully decorated with autumn leaves in varying shades of purple, red and yellow. The centerpiece was composed of golden ears of corn and bunches of grapes, with their variegated foliage. Under each plate there was a mat of leaves, each mat of a different hue. The menus were printed as follows on pale yellow cards ornamented with autumn leaves painted in water colors:

The china service was yellow and white, and the small dishes holding the relishes were leaf shaped. The tomato eggs each rested in a basket made of yellow autumn leaves. For this dish the ordinary recipe for stuffed tomatoes was followed, except that chopped hard boiled eggs were added and the mixture was put back again into the shells. The nut salad, composed of all sorts of nuts chopped fine, with French dressing and laid on lettuce leaves, was considered delicious as well as most appropriate to the season. But the ices were the triumph of the feast. They were in the shape of little pumpkins lying on golden leaves of corn. These pumpkins were made of orange ice filled with frozen whipped cream, and each was decorated with a tiny green pumpkin tendril.

HELEN CLIFTON.

THAT DARK ROOM.

How to Make It the Brightest Corner In Your House.

In almost every city house there is at least one dark room or alcove. This alcove is the most difficult part of the house to furnish, and no matter how much care is bestowed upon it it never looks inviting in the daytime. Here is a suggestion which may help the woman who is confronted by a room of this sort.

The alcove in the illustration is most effectively treated in pale green, black and old rose. The portieres are pale green. The wall paper is a rich shade of old rose and gold, and the wainscoting is of Flemish oak. The furniture is also of the Flemish oak. The floors are of polished hard wood, and the Turkish rugs combine different shades of old rose, green and deep blue. High up on the wall there are two small, square windows through which the sunlight seems to shine. This effect is gained by having the small panes made of yellow stained glass and by placing a good way back of the window, in a little recess, an electric light. This electric light is put in front of a reflector, which spreads its radiance into an even glow. If the reflector were not placed there, the small round spot of electric light would not seem natural. This is a very clever as well as an artistic way of making a dark room bright.

R. DE LA BAUME.

A woman is like your shadow: follow her, she flies; fly from her, she follows.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

"Jekyll," cried Utterson, with a loud voice, "I demand to see you." He paused a moment, but there came no reply. "I give you fair warning, our suspicions are aroused, and I must and shall see you," he resumed; "if not by fair means, then by foul—if not of your consent, then by brute force!"

"Utterson," said the voice, "for God's sake, have mercy!"

"Ah, that's not Jekyll's voice—it's Hyde's!" cried Utterson. "Down with the door, Poole."

Poole swung the ax over his shoulder; the blow shook the building, and the red baize door leaped against the locks and hinges. A dismal screech, as of mere animal terror, rang from the cabinet. Up went the ax again, and again the panels crashed and the frame bounded; four times the blow fell; but the wood was tough and the fittings were of excellent workmanship; and it was not until the fifth that the lock burst in sunder and the wreck of the door fell inward on the carpet.

The besiegers, appalled by their own riot and the stillness that had succeeded, stood back a little and peered in. There lay the cabinet before their eyes in the quiet lamplight, a good fire glowering and chattering on the hearth, the kettle singing its thin strain, a drawer or two open, papers neatly set forth on the business table, and nearer the fire, the things laid our for tea; the quietest room, you would have said, and but for the glazed presses full of chemicals, the most commonplace that night in London.

Right in the midst there lay the body of a man sorely contorted and still twitching. They drew near on tiptoe; turned it on its back and beheld the face of Edward Hyde. He was dressed in clothes far too large for him, clothes of the doctor's bigness; the cords of his face still moved with a semblance of life, but life was quite gone; and by the crushed vial in his hand and the strong smell of kernels that hung upon the air, Utterson knew he was looking on the body of a self-destroyer.

"We have come too late," he said sternly, "whether to save or punish. Hyde is gone to his account, and it only remains for us to find the body of your master."

The far greater proportion of the building was occupied by the theater, which filled almost the whole ground-story and was lighted from above, and by the cabinet, which formed an upper story at one end and looked upon the court. The corridor joined the theater to the door on the by-street, and with this the cabinet communicated separately by a second flight of stairs. There were besides a few dark closets and a spacious cellar. All these they now thoroughly examined. Each closet needed but a cursory examination and when they opened the door to the corridor they were apprised of the uselessness of further search by the fall of a perfect mat of cobweb which had for years sealed up the entrance. Nowhere was there any trace of Henry Jekyll, dead or alive.

Poole stamped on the flags of the corridor. "He must be buried here," he said, hearkening to the sound.

"Or he may have fled," said Utterson, and he turned to examine the door in the by-street. It was locked; and lying near by on the flags, they found the key, already stained with rust.

"This does not look like use," observed the lawyer.

"Use!" echoed Poole. "Do you not see, sir, it is broken? much as if a man had stamped on it."

"Ay," continued Utterson, "and the fractures, too, are rusty." The two men looked at each other with a stare. "This is beyond me, Poole," said the lawyer. "Let us go back to the cabinet."

They mounted the stair in silence, and still with an occasional awe-struck glance at the dead body, proceeded more thoroughly to examine the contents of the cabinet. At one table, there were traces of chemical work, various measured heaps of some white salt being laid on glass saucers, as though for an experiment in which the unhappy man had been prevented.

"That is the same drug that I was always bringing him," said Poole; and even as he spoke, the kettle with a startling noise boiled over.

This brought them to the fireside, where the easy-chair was drawn cozily up, and the tea things stoody ready to the sitter's elbow, the very sugar in the cup. There were several books on a shelf; one lay beside the tea things open, and Utterson was amazed to find it a copy of pious work, for which Jekyll had several times expressed a great esteem, annotated, in his own hand, with startling blasphemies.

Next, in the course of their review of the chamber, the searchers came to the cheval-glass, into whose depths they looked with an involuntary horror. But it was so turned as to show them nothing but the rosy glow playing on the roof, the fire sparkling in a hundred repetitions along the glazed front of the presses, and their own pale and fearful countenances stooping to look in.

"This glass has seen some strange things, sir," whispered Poole.

"And surely none stranger than itself," echoed the lawyer in the same tones. "For what did Jeykll"—he caught himself up at the words with a start, and then conquering the weakness—"what could Kekyll want with it?" he said.

"You may say that!" said Poole.

Next they turned to the business table. On the desk among the neat array of papers, a large envelope was uppermost, and bore, in the doctor's hand, the name of Mr. Utterson. The lawyer unsealed it, and several inclosures fell to the floor. The first was a will, drawn in the same eccentric terms as the one which he had returned six months before to serve as a testament in case of death and as a deed of gift in case of disappearance; but in place of the name of Edward Hyde, the lawyer, with indescribable amazement, read the name of Gabriel John Utterson. He looked at Poole, and then back at the paper, and last of all at the dead malefactor stretched upon the carpet.

"My head goes round," he said. "He has been all these days in possession; he had no cause to like me; he must have raged to see himself displaced; and he has not destroyed this document."

He caught up the next paper; it was a brief note in the doctor's hand and dated at the top. "Oh, Poole!" the lawyer cried, "he was alive and here this day. He can not have been disposed of in so short a space; he must be still alive; he must have fled! And then, why flee? and how? and in that case, can we venture to declare this suicide? Oh, we must be careful. I foresee that we may yet involve your master in some dire catastrophe."

"Why don't you read it, sir?" asked Poole. The lawyer read:

"When this reaches your hands, I shall have disappeared, under what circumstances I have not the penetration to foresee; but my instinct and all the circumstances of my nameless situation tell me that the end is sure and must be early. Go then, and first read the narrative which Lanyon warned me he was to place in your hands; and if you care to hear more, turn to the confession of "Your unworthy and unhappy friend,

"HENRY JEKYLL."

"There was a third inclosure?" asked Utterson.

"Here sir," said Pooole, and gave into his hands a considerable packet sealed in several places.

The lawyer put it in his pocket. "I would say nothing of this paper. If your master has fled or is dead, we may at least save his credit. It is now 10; I must go home and read these documents in quiet; but I shall be back before midnight, when we shall send for the police."

They went out, locking the door of the theater behind them; and Utterson, once more leaving the servants gathered about the fire in the hall, trudged back to his office to read the two narratives in which this mystery was now to be explained.

CHAPTER X.

On reaching his office, the first of the mysterious documents read by the lawyer was that which had been left in his hands with instructions by Lanyon that it was not to be opened until the death or disappearance of Dr. Jekyll. Thus it read:

On the ninth of January, now four days ago, I received by the evening delivery a registered envelope, addressed in the hand of his colleague and old school-companion, Henry Jekyll. I was a good deal surprised by this; for we were by no means in the habit of corresponding; I had seen the man, dined with him, indeed, the night before; and I could imagine nothing in our intercourse that should justify formality of registration. The contents increased my wonder; for this is how the letter ran:

"10th December, 18—.

"Dear Lanyon—You are one of my oldest friends; and although we may have differed at times on scientific questions, I can not remember, at least on my side, any break in our affection. There was never a day when, if you had said to me, 'Jekyll, my life, my honor, my reason, depend upon you,' I would not have sacrificed my left hand to help you. Lanyon, my life, my honor, my reason, are all at your mercy; if you fail me to-night I am lost. You might suppose, after this preface, that I am going to ask you for something dishonorable to grant. Judge for yourself.

EUROPEAN STATION.

Reestablished After a Lapse of Three Years and Placed in Charge of Admiral Cromwell.

The important action of reestablishing the European naval station was taken recently by the naval department. Secretary Long in formal orders gave the command of the station to Rear Admiral J. B. Cromwell. He is instructed to proceed at once from Rio with the cruiser Chicago, which will be the flagship of the rear admiral.

The Albany and Nashville sailed from Cavite June 3, en route to the European station. The headquarters of the squadron will be designated by UNITED STATES CRUISER CHICAGO.

(Flagship of European Station, in Charge of Admiral Cromwell.)

Rear Admiral Cromwell and probably will be in the Mediterranean.

Rear Admiral Cromwell is now at Rio and has acknowledged the receipt of his orders. It is expected that the rendezvous of the ships at the time they assemble will be Gibraltar.

The European station, although marked on the naval maps, has not been in actual existence since just before the breaking out of the Spanish war. Prior to that time several ships had been in the Mediterranean, and the San Francisco and the Bancroft made a hurried departure from those waters to avoid the complications likely to ensue when war was declared.

The limits of the station are Port Said, at the entrance of the Red sea, on the east, and a line running north and south through the Atlantic from the southernmost point of Greenland to Para on the north coast of Brazil, and thence eastward. This includes the Azores and all of the waters of Europe and North Africa.

The reestablishment of the European station is said to be entirely devoid of political significance, and to be simply a move in the regular procedure of the navy to place the service in the same condition that it was prior to the war.

BUGLE WITH A HISTORY.

It Sounded the Charge That Called the Light Brigade Into Action at Balaklava.

Loyal Britons are just now renewing their memories of the brilliant military and naval exploits of their fathers. The center of the renewed interest is in the Crystal palace exhibition of field and sea souvenirs. The cap that Gordon wore in China is shown, and the spear that ended his life in Africa when the dun-colored hordes swarmed into Khartoum. Oliver Cromwell's helmet and spurs are magnets for many, and hardly less interesting is the death mask of the Iron Duke of Wellington, victor of Waterloo. There are fragments of the ship Royal George, which, as schoolboys will remember from the poem, sank with the prince, after which the king "never smiled again." The famous bugle that sounded the charge of the immortal Light Brigade is on show, but has been sold to the well-known collector, T. G. Middlebrook, for 750 guineas. He has declined to part with it at a considerable profit, and intends, it is said, to bequeath it to the "Death or Glory boys," to whom it really belongs.

FAMOUS ENGLISH BUGLE.
(It Sounded the Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava.)

Trees Die from Insomnia.

"Insomnia dries trees up and kills them after awhile," said a tree fancier. "Trees need sleep, just as individuals, and if powerful lights are glaring upon them all night long the leaves will gradually wither and drop from the branches. This deadening of the tree is often plainly noticeable upon the side affected by the light, and a number of trees in the city are slowly being killed by electricity."

The Power of the Press.

The Kansas City man who advertised in a newspaper for a wife and got one in the shape of a widow with five children has no longer any doubt as to the power of the press.

LOCAL ELEVEN DEFEATED HOBOKEN'S CRACK TEAM

Association Football Season Was Opened in This City With Victory for Home Team.

SCORE OF GAME WAS 1 TO 0.

GREAT INDIVIDUAL WORK SAVED THE DAY FOR PLAINFIELD.

Game Was Most Evenly Played of Any Seen in This City—Ball Was in Hoboken's Territory Most of the Time.

The association football season was formally opened in this city Saturday afternoon, when the first home game of the Association Football Club was played on the Clinton avenue grounds. The opposing team was the Hoboken A. C., which was defeated by a score of 1 to 0. Fully 200 persons witnessed the game, which was one of the most evenly played ever seen on the home grounds.

From the time the kick-off was made by Fred Jones until the referee's whistle sounded for the close of the contest, the Plainfield men were the aggressors. The ball was in the Hoboken territory most of the time and it was only through the excellent work of Fairbank at goal, that it was kept from going through.

Both teams played in the best of shape, but the visitors were clearly outclassed in individual work. The Plainfield men were always in the right place at the right time, particularly in the cases of McComb, Turner and Campbell.

The first half ended without a goal being kicked and at the beginning of the second it looked as if neither side would score. Toward the close of the game, the visitors would have had a goal but for a fine play on the part of Dodd. The ball was kicked low and would have passed but for his falling upon it, taking the chances of being struck in the face with flying feet. As it was two of the players had to leap over him to prevent doing him an injury.

By a number of clever moves the local team finally forced the ball down to the opposing goal where it was put through by Alex Campbell, three minutes before time was up. It was the only one made and gave the game to Plainfield. Next Saturday the P. A. F. C. will have the strong team from the steamship Oceanic as opponents. Several games were played with them last season and all proved close and exciting.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

P. A. F. C.	Positions	Hoboken. A. C.
Dodd	goal	Fairbank
Nicholson	right full back	Roberts
Jameson	left full back	Gray
Turner	right half back	Head
Gannon	center half back	Tillman
Miles	center forward	Charrie
Scott	right forward	Keating
Campbell	right forward	Cowly

SPOKE TO RETAIL CLERKS.

SPECIAL SERMON BY REV. DR. W. C. SNODGRASS LAST EVENING.

He Presented Objects of the Association and Commented Briefly Upon Them.

A delegation from the Retail Clerks' Association attended divine service last evening at the First M E. church, when the pastor, Rev Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, spoke concerning the early closing movement.

At the beginning of the service Dr. Snodgrass presented the objects of the association, as have already been stated in these columns. He then made a few remarks pertaining to the subject. He said that he did not propose to arraign class against class, that the trades-people are the public servants. If the hours of work are long it is the fault of the purchaser. It is the buyer who can shorten the hours of labor. Dr. Snodgrass believed that in some cases the hours are outrageously long, and he thought there should be a remedy for it.

The pastor then preached a sermon from the text "The Laborer is worthy of his Hire." He cited the fact that Christ was a laborer, that he selected one of the hardest trades, that of a carpenter. He believed that if the world is to be transformed it will be through work, the marvelous touchstone of prosperity.

Returns at Park Club.

Election returns for the benefit of the members will be received at the Park Club to morrow evening.

Four Classes of Men.

Men may be divided—especially morally—into kinds under several symbols—the sledge, the anvil, the candle, the knife—eh? The sledge is lust, primitive, black, blind, perhaps unwilling or repentant or even self-hating. The anvil is selfish idealism, enduring, stern, intolerant, uncompromising, high, disdainful. The candle is tolerance, seeing around the ideals with an infinite pity, a heart-broken ecstasy of sacrifice on an altitude. The knife is cynicism, realism; it cuts through everything to what it thinks the truth; it is terrible, splendid, pitiful, inevitable, irresistible. Eh? Here are four ideals! It is big—but you feel it—not?—New Lippincott.

"Aunt" Ruth.

An amusing story is related "on" an Atchison woman, whose first name is Ruth, says the Globe. Although a grandmother, she is still a handsome woman, and does not look her age. Recently she went east to visit her son, at whose house a baby had just arrived. The Atchison woman had cried for hours over the title of "grandmother," but she soon fell in love with the baby, and played with it a great deal. Her son relates that one day his mother was playing with the baby in another room, and he heard her say: "Tootsy wootsy tootsy; does it love its Aunt Ruth?"

During the Object Lesson.

Teacher—Now, children, we come to the apples. Surely you all know apples?

Voices—O yes—apples!

"Do you know them, too, Sadie? Have you ever eaten an apple?"

"No, sir."

"No? Do you never eat apples at home?"

"O yeth, but mamma alwayth giveth each of uth half a one."—N. Y. Times. Times.

The Choir the Main Thing.

The Soprano—You should come to our church some Sunday! I think you would enjoy the service.

Granby—And of what does the service consist?

"We sing several hymns and I have two solos."

"But don't they have any sermon?"

"Yes, I think they do; but of course that is merely incidental. The choir is the main thing, you know."—Boston Transcript.

A Diplomatic Reply.

If one pins his faith on the predictions made by the New York Herald, Somerset county must be placed in the doubtful column. For years back it has been the custom of that newspaper to issue a forecast of the elections in the various states immediately before the close of the campaign. Yesterday it declared that the outcome in Somerset county is still questionable, although it stated that the Republicans claimed that they would carry it by 350 majority and that the Democrats look for a majority of 500 in their favor.

The Herald's prediction is taken from interviews with leading politicians in both parties, men who are generally styled the "knowing ones." There are, nevertheless, many in the ranks of both parties who are very sanguine of victory. Senator Charles A. Reed, for instance, is very confident of success. As the chairman of the Republican county committee, some time ago he had reports compiled by the leaders in the various districts, and upon these he made the announcement that Somerset will go Republican by 600 majority. To a Daily Press reporter he declares that his prophecy has not been altered and today stands by his original forecast.

The Democrats were probably never more hopeful of success. They claim to have a superior ticket in the field and are banking upon it to win. In every district they claim that gains will be the feature of the returns so far as their nominees are concerned. One leader says that McMurtry will be high man with a majority ranging from 300 to 400 and that Childs and the gubernatorial candidate, Seymour, will run close together with a majority which he figures at 300. This is widely different from the claims made by the opposition, but they point to the fact that Somerset county really belongs in the Democratic column.

As to how the various candidates will run, there is a great difference in the predictions, but Senator Reed, although claiming that he will not win out, conceded that McMurtry will run ahead of his ticket. In fact on all sides McMurtry is booked as a strong man.

In the borough of North Plainfield, there is much interest attached to the election, although it is the banner district of the Republicans in the county. Here it is said that 250 will be the majority, Republican of course, according to several politicians of that faith. The Democrats do not concede this, but do admit that it will probably be something like 200 which will grace the Republican column. They point to the fact that many of the foremost men in the borough, those who abandoned the party while the silver issue existed, have returned to the fold, and that their attitude will count much as a drawing card for the Democratic nominees. It is said that the announcement of Former President Cleveland has had the effect of making the so-called "Gold" Democrats solid with the party.

It may be said that whichever way the election goes the Democratic county ticket will run ahead of the gubernatorial vote, while the Republican county ticket will run behind the vote polled by the nominees for governor of that party. Anyhow another twenty-four hours will tell the tale and the leaders of both parties will bend their energies to remove the question of doubt which appears to prevail at the present.

FRANKLIN MURPHY.

NEW JERSEY CARRIED FOR FRANKLIN MURPHY

Republicans Won Out In Gubernatorial Election With a Plurality Of Over 13,000

Franklin Murphy is to be the next governor of New Jersey Such was the verdict of the people of this State at the general election held yesterday. Mr. Murphy, the Republican candidate, defeated James M. Seymour, the Democratic nominee, by a plurality estimated at 13,735. All the counties, except Hudson, Hunterdon, Sussex and Warren, gave pluralities to the Republican ticket. It was an indorsement of the Republican administration in New Jersey. Both parties had claimed the State and it had been considered in doubt. It was generally realized that the one-sided result of last year would not be repeated.

The entire Republican ticket in Union county was elected, but the pluralities were considerably reduced. The ticket received 1,300 plurality while the Assembly candidates received somewhat less. Somerset county gave Murphy a plurality, but part of the Republican county ticket met with defeat. Middlesex county also fell into the Republican column and the Republican county ticket went through as well.

HOW THE ELECTION WENT IN COUNTIES OF UNION, SOMERSET AND MIDDLESEX.

Republicans of Union County Made a Clean Sweep With Their Ticket

The result in Union county shows a decrease in the Republican majority in nearly every district, the dominant party winning out with a margin of 1300 votes. A year ago the Republican electral ticket had a majority of nearly 4900, but it must be borne in mind that that was a Presidential election. The year preceding, when the county went 2500 Republican is a figure which furnishes a fairer comparison. Voorhees carried the county by 2240 just three years ago, and he swept Elizabeth, which is Democratic.

The county seat is carried for Seymour by 824 and is recarded as a signal victory for the minority party in Union county. The Democrats also hammered the Republicans in Rahway, the fact the party had two nominees from thet city on their ticket helping them to a great extent. New Providence township, which gave Bryan a majority of three votes repeats the trick for Seymour. There was a great cut in the Republican majority in Roselle borough, in Cranford, in Summit, it Westfield. In fact the off year had a tendency to reduce the vote considerably all along the line.

Among the assemblymen, Hall, of Cranford, made the best run, even beating the gubernatorial figure. Behind him came Miller, who, as can be seen, was largely cut in the upper wards of Elizabeth and in a number of other districts throughout the county. Newcorn fared well outside of Plainfield, but in his home he was knifed to a great extent and principally for Moffett, the Democratic candidate for Assembly from this city. Elizabeth threw a big vote to Sulzer and Livengood, and as stated Plainfield gave Moffett a good endorsement. Vanderveer ran a good race in his home, Rahway, where the citizens also remembered favorably Walsh, the Democratic candidate for coroner.

The county returns show that there was much cutting down by both parties, but the Republicans suffered the most by this action of the voters. The returns were unusually slow in coming in from the various districts last night. At the Republican county headquarters at midnight not more than half of the districts being heard from. So far as predictions were concerned neither party came near the proper figure. Chairman Kean was counting on 1,700 majority, while the Democratic leaders would only concede 1,000.

The total vote in Union county was as follows: Miller, R., 10,559; Newcorn, R., 10,197; Hall, R., 10,830; Sulzer, D., 8,786; VanDerveer, D., 8,464; Moffett, D., 8,794

TO MANAGE CASINO.

Arrangements Completed Between Owners Of The Casino And Maze Edwards.

Arrangements were concluded, yesterday, between Wm. C. Kinney, representing Chas. J. Fisk and other owners of the Casino property on Seventh street and Arlington avenue, and Maze Edwards, former manager of Stillman Music Hall, by which Mr. Edwards assumes charge and management of the Casino building. He is to present during the coming season, a series of nigh class musicales, readings, concerts and occasional vaudeville.

These entertainments will be given at average weekly period, but arranged so as not conflict with social dances and receptions for which dates had already had been spoken. It is expected the first entertainment will be given Thursday of next week, and thereafter when practicable, every week.

Was Disappointed.

Disappointment over the result of the election induced Samuel McGoldrick to take on board a load of conversation water, last night, and wandered down West Sixth street where in stentorian tones he sought to inform the sleeping residents how it all happened. He was forcibly suppressed by a passing patrolman who didn't agree with him in his views. This morning City Judge Runyon allowed the orator to depart with a suspended sentence.

Endeavor Business Meeting.

Somerset County Gives Murphy a Plurality But Elects a Democratic Sheriff.

The campaign in Somerset terminated with a brilliant victory for Calvin D. McMurtry, the Democratic candidate for sheriff, and a narrow escape from defeat by H. W. Hoagland, the Republican candidate for re-election to the assembly by the margin of forty-two votes. The head of the Republican ticket, Murphy, got through with 395 plurality. The fight was a close one and both sides claimed the victory long before the ballots were counted. Mr. McMurtry's plurality is 617.

The Republican candidates were H W. Hoagland for assembly and Thos. Douglas for sheriff, and the Democratic nominees were S S. Childs for assembly, and Calvin D. McMurtry for sheriff

IN THE BOROUGH.

The total vote in the borough was far below that of last year, the entire ballot in both districts being 507 as against 611 on last election. As usual the Republican candidates were given large majorities, Murphy's being 226. The Republicans claimed they would give him 250 while the Democrats conceded 200. Douglas' majority was the lowest, running well behind the ticket, giving good evidence that much work had been done for McMurtry. Fifty more Republicans votes for the latter would have tied him with Douglass, which was the aim of the Democrats.

The vote in detail was as follows:

For Governor—Murphy, R., First district 307, Second district 292, total 559; Seyour, D., First district 178, Second district 195, total 373; Brown, N. P., First district 18, Second district 31, total 49; Murphy, C. I. U., Second district 1, total 1; Vail, S., Second district 1 total 1; Wilson, S. L., Second district 1, total 1.

Close Contest in Middlesex County Gives a Verdict For Republican Ticket.

In Middlesex county the Republicans won the day with the gubernatorial ticket as well as the county ticket, composed of three Assembly candidates and a coroner. Murphy's estimated plurality is 400.

The Democrats swept the city of New Brunswick electing George A Vielmann, mayor, over Dr. Nicholas Williamson, the Republican nominee, who had already served three terms. Almost everything went Democratic in the city, the party's nominees for aldermen and freeholders winning out.

DUNELLEN.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 6—The gubernatorial vote in the borough was very close and gave Seymour a majority of five. Last year Dunellen gave a large Republican majority. All of the candidates for Assembly were given good majorities, Dr. Whitford, of New Market, running ahead of the ticket. Out of a registry of 360, but 294 votes were cast as follows: For governor: Seymour, 141; Murphy, 136; for members of assembly, Republican, Whitford 175, Jackson 149, Montgomery 149; Democratic, O'Hare 100, Straub 126, Reynolds 124

NEW MARKET.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 6—Piscataway came to the fore with rousing big majorities for all the Republican candidates. Dr. Marcus Whitford, who is a resident of New Market, ran ahead of the ticket, receiving a much larger majority over the nearest Democratic opponent for assembly, than did Murphy over Seymour. The vote in detail was as follows: For Governor, Murphy, 240, Seymour, 142; for Assembly, Whitford, 277, Jackson, 241, Montgomery, 243 O'Hara, 114, Straub, 122, Reynolds, 125.

INSPECTED SEPTIC TANKS.

City Officials From Bryn Mawr Come Here to See How Local Plan of Sewage Disposal Works.

A party, composed of William B. Barret, mayor of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and three members of the Bryn Mawr Council, with C. E. Allbright, a civil engineer of Philadelphia, visited this city Monday for the purpose of inspecting the new septic tank being installed at the city disposal beds. They were the guests of Dr. P. B. Cregar, of Grant avenue, who is an intimate friend of Mr. Allbright.

The party was taken to the plant by Street Commissioner Gavett who showed them about. It is the intention of the Council of Bryn Mawr to establish a sewage system in that municipality similar to the one now being built for this city. They propose putting in a septic tank, utilizing a steep hillside for a cascade through which the sewage is to pass. For this reason particular attention was paid to the tank now being built at the local beds.

At the conclusion of the inspection, the party was entertained at dinner at the Hotel Kensington by Dr. Cregar.

Public Service.

A public missionary service will be held this afternoon in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church at 3 o'clock.

WILLIAM NEWCORN.

REPUBLICANS ELECTED ENTIRE CITY TICKET.

Opposition Party Failed to Accomplish Anything More Than to Lower Pluralities.

The Republicans will continue in absolute power in the municipal affairs of Plainfield. The Plainfield voters so decided by their ballots yesterday. Seven councilmen, a city judge and a school trustee were all elected from that party. The Republicans went in on majorities ranging from over a thousand to 69 for a ward office Not a Democrat was elected.

There was opposition to the Republican ticket and, in some places, the Republican lead was cut down materially. The opposition was too generally distributed to bring about the defeat of any of the Republican ticket. It simply resulted in reducing majorities. The Republican ticket went through with a plurality of 1053. The movement to defeat E. E. Pray was not as formidable as was at first supposed. Close contests for Councilmanic honors were fought in the First and Second wards. Councilman Gloak won by 98. Councilman VanHerwerden had a majority of 69.

City Judge W. N Runyon was re-elected as there was no one running against him. Floyd D Woodhull had no trouble in winning out for school trustee.

HOW IT WENT BY PRECINCTS

Local Situation Summed up Briefly From Returns of Each Polling Place.

Viewed by precincts, the vote in the city was very interesting. It showed the power of the anti-Pray movement and how it was confined almost entirely to the Second and Third wards. It also demonstrated the fact that William Newcorn was knifed in almost every voting precinct of the city. While there were some slight losses for the Republican party, the figures in general were almost equal to those of last year which were unusually high on account of the Presidential election.

FIRST WARD, 1ST DIST.

There were evidences of Walter L. Hetfield's vigorous campaign to be seen in the First district of the First ward. While Councilman Gloak fell considerably behind his ticket, he managed to get a majority of 90 in the district while the Republican ticket repeated its performance of the year before and finished 200 in the lead. William Newcorn fell 100 votes behind his ticket and polled but ten more votes than his rival for the Assembly, C. L. Moffett. Councilman Buckle polled the smallest vote of any of the Republican candidates for councilman-at-large. They all ran behind a trifle. The vote was very heavy, 484 votes being polled. There were three rejected ballots. The Republicans had 327 to 157 of the Democrats.

FIRST WARD, 2d DISTRICT.

The general interest in the Gloak-Hetfield fight brought out the vote in the Second district of the First ward, the balloting being nearly as heavy as at the last Presidental election. There was a Republican loss there, the ticket carrying the district by 34 as compared with 62 last December. Gloak won out from Hetfield by just eight votes. Of the Assembly candidates, Newcorn ran twenty-four votes behind his ticket while Moffett was eighteen votes to the good. There was a slight evidence of the anti-Pray movement by which Homan was the gainer in the city fight. There was much cutting done. The total vote was 199. Eight ballots were rejected, 111 were Republican and 77 Democratic.

SECOND WARD, 1st DISTRICT.

The movement to defeat E. E. Pray, Republican candidate for Councilman-at-large, had its origin in the First district of the Second ward and it was there that it was expected to achieve its chief victory. The knifing was evident, but not in as wholesale a manner as had been hinted. The net loss for Pray was forty-eight, but that was 104 better than the vote for J. P. Homan, whose pasters were chiefly used over Pray's name. In fact, Pray made a better run than did Councilman Jan van Herwerden, the ward councilman, who was only forty-six better than his opponent, Lewis G. Timpson. The knife was also used with considerable freedom on the name of Wm. Newcorn for the Assembly. He was 99 behind his ticket and beat out C. L. Moffett by twenty-one. The rest of the Republican ticket ran well and even showed a gain over last year's figures.

SECOND WARD, 2d DISTRICT.

That part of Netherwood which goes to form the Second district of the Second ward had a quiet election, although the voters turned out in large numbers. There was lots of scratching. Newcorn, Republican candidate for the assembly, suffering the most, while Pray, Murphy and Councilman van Herwerden all came in for a good share. C. L. Moffett made a good run for the assembly and polled but four votes less than his rival, William Newcorn. While the Republican ticket was thirty-nine to the good, Councilman van Herwerden's majority over Timpson was twenty-three. The anti Pray movement was in evidence and made a difference of thirteen in the vote for that candidate. The total vote was 172, 28 more than last December.

THIRD WARD, 1ST DIST.

Republican gains were apparent in the First district of the Third ward, always a Republican stronghold.

BEAUTIFUL DISPLAY IN MR. GINNA'S GREENHOUSE

Chrysanthemums Are Now in Their Glory and are Shown in Many Varieties.

SOME VERY FINE SPECIMENS.

THE GARDENER, JAMES BARLOW, HAS ACHIEVED GREAT RESULTS.

Splendid Exhibition in Greenhouses of S. A. Ginna, of Watchung Avenue—He Has Invited the Public to View Them.

The chrysanthemum show at the greenhouses of Stephen A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue, is a splendid exhibition of the most perfect and beautiful species of that attractive plant of the Flowery Kingdom, Japan. A large assortment of all the well known kinds, of varied colors and tints, of sizes of many degrees, forms the collection, which through the courtesy of the owner can be seen by the public at present.

From the dwarf specimens to the largest one in the collection, the White Mutual Friend, measuring fourteen inches in diameter, there are a multitude which catch the eye. In all there are seventy-five varieties forming the entire collection. These have been cultivated by James Barlow, Mr. Ginna's florist, who has taken pains to produce a fine collection. One cause has interfered with his work and that is the havoc wrought by the Puccinia chrysanthemi, commonly known as the rust, which deadens the plant. This rust is a native of Japan and appeared there six years ago. It was discovered in the State of Indiana some four years ago and since then has spread rapidly. This is the first year, however, that it has troubled the plants in Mr. Ginna's greenhouses.

One of the gorgeous varieties of the white chrysanthemum is the Boundles Snow and others are the Madame Carnot, the Mayflower and the Mutual Friend. The Silver Cloud is a huge flower of a pearl shade. In shades of yellow are George M. Pullman, the Madame Carnot, the Col. Daniel Appleton, the Peter Kay, the Mrs. O. P. Bassett and the Modesta. Particularly beautiful are the Waban, a rich purple specimen, the Mrs. A. J. Drexel, a maroon variety, and George W. Childs, a maroon also, and the Mrs. George West, another purple type. Among the others to be seen are the Belle Castle, in lavender, the Australian Gold, the Wm. H. Quadwick, in white, the Wm Simpson, a purple flower, the Loantika, in old gold and terra cotta and the Zulinda, in lavender also.

The plants are all in bloom and the sight is a grand one. It is expected that the exhibition will continue for at least two more weeks and in the mean time Mr. Ginna welcomes all lovers of the flower to see the collection.

Mr. Barlow, the florist, deserves mention for the fine collection which has been cultivated by him. He is a painstaking man who has thorough understanding of botany. By birth he is an Englishman and he took up his vocation in that country. For the last fifteen years he has done some especially creditable work.

AT THE THEATRES.

If there be anything in a name—and theatrical managers disagree with the Bard on that point—a succession of notably large audiences should punctuate the engagement of Grace George in "Under Southern Skies," beginning November 12, at the Republic, New York. The authoress, Lottie Blair Parker, to whom belongs the credit of having written "Way Down East," has done just what one might be supposed to have done with the theme which suggested her designation. She has created a simple, sunny Southern girl, clad daintily in the high-waisted gowns of three decades ago, and has placed her between two impulsive young men whose only common trait is their passion for her. The pretty story of the womanish attempted self-sacrifice for the sake of an imagined duty in the third act is lifted to what is described as a thrilling height at the apex of which she renounces the the unloved suitor for the loved. Grace George, who will be remembered as the most natural and unaffected of actresses, may be expected to bring to her delineation of the role all the delicacy and daintiness, the reason and the refinement which have won her a conspicuous place in the firmament of theatrical stars. Miss George will have the assistance of a company which includes Ralph Stuart, Cuyler Hastings, Burr McIntosh, Grace Henderson, Alice Leigh, Thomas Bray, Eleanor Gist, Minnie Victorson, Will H. Bray, Thomas Burns, Beatrice Bonner, Donald Maclaren, Kingsley Benedict, Roza Durant, Laura Lemmers, Justine Cutting, Thomas Phillips, Virginia Glyndon, Maude Beindollar and nearly a hundred others. The costumes, properties and scenery are said to be characterized by the accuracy and beauty always notable in the productions of William A. Brady.

Old Rubber Wanted.

All persons having old rubber of any description are requested to send the same to the Sunday-school room at Trinity Reformed church not later than today. The women of that church intend selling the rubber and placing the proceeds in the primary department piano fund. Articles will be called for by notifying Mrs. E. E. Anthony, 444 West Front street.

TOLD OF SCHUMANN.

Life and Compositions Formed Topic of Discussion for Monday Afternoon Club.

The life and musical compositions of Robert Schumann was the topic of discussion at the regular meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club this week. Mrs. J. P. Taylor had prepared a decidedly interesting paper on Schumann and this was read by her.

In order to better bring out the sense of the paper Mrs. A. H. Atterbury illustrated it by playing some of his typical selections. Miss Wood, of Netherwood, also rendered two of his better known songs. At the conclusion of the formal programme a number of the members participated in a discussion of the subject.

TAMMANY DEFEATED

Fusion Ticket a Winner In Greater New York.

SETH LOW MAYOR BY 40,000.

Justice Jerome Has Comfortable Plurality For District Attorney—Van Wyck Snowed Under—Great Rejoicing Over Returns.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Seth Low, former president of Columbia university and four years ago the Citizens' Union candidate for the first mayor of Greater New York, was elected the second mayor of Greater New York by a plurality ranging anywhere from 30,000 to 40,000, defeating Edward M. Shepard of Brooklyn, the Democratic nominee. The campaign was an exciting one, and the vote, though somewhat less than the presidential election a year ago, was the largest ever polled in a municipal contest in this country.

In addition to the canvass for mayor, public interest largely centered in the nomination by the fusionists of William Travers Jerome for district attorney and Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck by the Democrats for justice of the supreme court. Both the candidates for district attorney and justice of the supreme court were voted for only in the territory contained in New York county. Returns indicate that Jerome has been elected by a comfortable plurality and that Mayor Van Wyck has been defeated, the latter running behind his ticket from 15,000 to 20,000.

Returns also indicate the complete triumph of the Greater New York fusion ticket, Charles Vincent Fornes, the nominee of the Citizens' Union and the Republicans, defeating George M. Van Hoesen, the Democratic nominee, for president of the board of aldermen and E. M. Grout, for the past four years Democratic president of the borough of Brooklyn, being chosen for comptroller.

After several weeks of the hottest campaign fighting ever witnessed in this city over a municipal election the day when the ballots were cast passed with unwonted quiet, considering the high feeling which had previously been exhibited. There were a few fights at the polls among individuals, but none of a serious nature, and out of the scores of arrests made—and most of these were on charges of a technical character—but few prisoners were held by the magistrates.

The great feature of the voting was the early casting of ballots. This applied to the brown stone as well as the tenement house districts. There was a drizzling rain up to 9 a. m., but after that hour there was nothing to keep even the most fastidious voter from the polls. Seth Low, fusion candidate for mayor, cast his ballot at 7:55 a. m.; Edward M. Shepard, Democratic candidate, at 11:25; Richard Croker and his two sons were Nos. 1, 2 and 3 at their polling place a minute after 6 a. m.; Senator Chauncey M. Depew dropped his ballot in the box at 9:45 a. m., and Mayor Van Wyck waited until 3 p. m.

The practical use of a voting machine was demonstrated in the Eighteenth district of the First assembly district, Brooklyn, and the result was known at 5:02 in the afternoon, immediately after the polls were closed. No difficulty was experienced in recording the vote, and in many instances men cast their votes in less than three seconds.

Crowds such as are seen on the night of a presidential election last night surrounded the bulletin boards of the newspaper offices. Because of the danger of accidents resulting from the subway excavations near the city hall some 500 policemen were on hand. A cordon was formed which practically shut off Park row from the head of Beekman street to the bridge entrance, and the streets leading into Park row at that point were closed. The street cars were stopped at Center street.

One man, believed to be R. J. Mullaney of Clifton, N. J., while watching the bulletins near the Staats Zeitung building, was jostled off the sidewalk by the crowd and, falling on the stone roadway, fractured his skull. He died soon after.

The bulletin announcement of Mr. Low's election was the signal for a series of impromptu triumphal parades around the district in which the young man with the blaring tin horn was, as usual, very much in evidence.

Seth Low when seen last night at his home, where he was receiving election returns, said:

"I suppose it is safe to assume the result of the election is now assured. It bears out what my friends have anticipated, and I am very much gratified by the result. This is a pleasant outcome of a hard struggle. I appreciate heartily the splendid support the newspapers have given this movement. I think they have been a splendid and important factor in bringing about the result."

Mr. Low and his wife go to Great Barrington, Mass., where they will remain for the remainder of the week, if not for a longer time.

The following are the results in the borough of Richmond complete: For mayor—Low (fusion), 6,750; Shepard (Dem.), 6,046. For president of the borough of Richmond—Cromwell (fusion), 6,620; Muller (Dem.), 6,196. For comptroller—Grout (fusion), 6,804; Ladd (Dem.), 5,849.

Richard Croker at 8:45 o'clock last night conceded the election of Seth Low, fusion candidate for mayor, but Mr. Croker was not willing at that time to give up the county ticket.

He said he was much disappointed at the Brooklyn vote, as he had expected Mr. Shepard to make a good showing there, it being his home borough.

As to the causes for the defeat of the Democratic ticket, Mr. Croker said he was inclined to ascribe it to the large silent vote and the fact that the people sometimes feel they want a change.

VOTE IN THE STATE.

Republicans Will Control Next Assembly—Some City Figures.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Reports received from the various sections of New York state show that the Republicans will retain control of the lower house of the state legislature, the number of Republican and Democratic assemblymen not differing materially from the figures of preceding years.

In the various municipal contests reported from up the state the most interesting elections noted were those of Albany, Troy, Rochester, Syracuse and Buffalo. The city of Albany was carried by the Republicans, ex-Senator Hill taking no active part in the local canvass. The election in Troy was a lively one, a number of arrests for illegal voting being made.

Ex-United States Senator Murphy headed the fight for the candidate of the Democrats, while former Governor Black was the manager of the campaign for the Progressive Democratic-Republican ticket. Daniel E. Conway, candidate for mayor, supported by ex-Governor Black, was easily elected. In Buffalo the entire Republican city and county ticket were elected, Erastus C. Knight, the state comptroller, being chosen mayor. The result in Rochester was close, but Mayor Warner's friends claim his election over the Republican candidate. In Syracuse Mayor McGuire, for a number of years past the Democratic mayor of the city, was defeated by the Republican nominee.

Conway Re-elected In Troy.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Daniel E. Conway was re-elected mayor of this city on a progressive Democratic-Republican ticket over Seymour Van Santvoord, the regular Democratic nominee, by anywhere from 1,000 to 1,800 plurality. The entire Republican city and county tickets were elected. The campaign in this city was a most interesting one, as former United States Senator Murphy led the fight for Van Santvoord and former Governor Black for Conway.

Republicans Sweep Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The entire Republican city and county tickets were elected. Erastus C. Knight, state comptroller, is elected mayor by a plurality of 5,431, and the balance of the Republican ticket was carried by pluralities ranging from 1,800 to 7,800. The next board of councilmen will be composed of 9 Republicans and no Democrats. Sixteen Republican and 9 Democratic city supervisors were elected.

Albany Went Republican.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The city of Albany elected its entire Republican city ticket by majorities ranging from 1,100 to 1,500. The contest was exciting and was participated in by William Barnes, Jr., for the Republicans and Eugene D. Wood and Anthony N. Brady for the Democrats.

Democrats Carry Utica.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The Democrats elected their entire city ticket, Talcott for mayor having a plurality of 832. They elected 4 out of 8 aldermen, so the council will stand 8 Republicans and 7 Democrats. The proposition for free textbooks was badly beaten.

Republicans Carry Schenectady.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The Republicans swept the city and county. Horace S. Van Voast, Republican, was elected mayor by 313 and the common council, which had been Democratic for years, is Republican by 12 to 6.

Oswego Republican by Five Votes.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Oswego elects Benjamin Baker, Republican, mayor over Thomas Pearson, Democrat, by 5 votes.

Syracuse Republican.

SYRACUSE, Nov. 6.—The entire Republican city ticket is elected, and the Republicans elect 11 of the 19 aldermen.

Injured Stoker Dead.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Nov. 6.—One of the stokers who was injured by the explosion on the Reid steamer Bruce Sunday in Cabot strait is dead. Another is likely to die or, if he survives, to be totally blind. The third man who was scalded is also in a precarious condition. All the boats were made ready for launching at the time of the explosion to guard against any possible disaster. The Bruce was carrying a company of 120 instead of ninety, as originally telegraphed.

Starved In a City of Plenty.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—A man about forty-five years of age, emaciated almost to a skeleton, dropped dead on the "L" stairs at the Bowery and Canal street. He was passing by on the sidewalk, became too weak to walk, sat down on the steps to rest and expired at once. There was nothing whatever in the pockets of the clothing. It was apparent that the man had died from starvation.

HOW STATES VOTED

Nash Re-elected Governor In Ohio Over Kilbourne.

MURPHY CHOSEN IN NEW JERSEY.

Heavy Vote In Massachusetts—Crane Again Chosen—Large Majority For Cummins In Iowa—Light Vote For Gregory In Rhode Island.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 6.—Latest returns indicate Republican gains in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Dayton, Zanesville, Portsmouth, Canton, Springfield and other cities, the single exception being Columbus, the home of both Governor Nash and Colonel James Kilbourne, the Democratic candidate for governor.

The greatest Republican gains are outside of the large cities. Some of the Democratic counties report the largest Republican gains. Another exception in the rural districts was found in Pike and Adams counties, which jointly elected a Democratic member of the legislature for the first time in eight years.

The Democratic state committee has no claims to make on the state ticket or the legislature. Colonel Kilbourne said he felt better over carrying his home of Franklin county with a Democratic gain of over 3,000 than if he had been elected governor without carrying Franklin county. Chairman Dick at 10 o'clock gave out a statement that the Republicans had carried the state by over 50,000, with a decisive majority in each branch of the legislature.

The greatest Republican demonstration here was over the returns from Toledo showing that Nash had carried Lucas county and that the legislative ticket there is elected. As Governor Nash had opposed the state appropriation for the proposed Ohio centennial exposition in that city it was expected that he would lose the county. When this dispatch was received after Chairman Dick had made his statement, the Republicans raised their estimates several thousand.

Senator Foraker claims the re-election of Governor Nash by 60,000 plurality, with both houses of the legislature safely Republican. Hamilton county is said to be Republican by more than 10,000.

CRANE RE-ELECTED.

A Large Vote In the Bay State For an Off Year.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—With no state or national issues and but few local contests to arouse interest, there were more ballots cast in the state election than in any off year in the history of the state. The total vote exceeded 300,000.

As usual, the Republicans had no difficulty in carrying the state, W. Murray Crane of Dalton being elected governor for the third time by practically the same majority as when he first ran for the office in 1899.

The state legislature of 1902 will be strongly Republican, although the Democrats gained a few votes. Josiah Quincy, the Democratic candidate for governor, ran about 10,000 behind the vote cast for the party candidate in the presidential election last year, but he so materially increased the Democratic vote in Boston as to give the local leaders great confidence for a party victory in the municpal election next month.

Fine weather proved an excellent incentive for going to the polls, which probably accounted for the heavy vote cast in all districts.

The election was a remarkably quiet one, although there were one or two contests for state senators that aroused some interest.

The Vote In Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—Notwithstanding the intense interest the election in this city was conducted generally in an orderly manner. There were, however, numerous disputes at polling places, and in a number of instances the disputants came away with broken heads, but no very serious rows occurred anywhere. The regular Republicans and the fusionists charge each other with wholesale fraud and promise to make numerous arrests. There were many arrests for violations of the election laws, but in nearly every case the offender was promptly bailed out by political friends. The polls did not close until 7 o'clock, and returns came to the various political headquarters very late. In the absence of sufficient figures the city chairmen of the several political parties continue to claim that their candidates have carried the city. Scattering returns indicate that Potter (Rep.) for supreme court is being cut to some extent all over the state. Returns are unusually slow and very late. The counting of the vote on the proposed constitutional amendments in the interest of ballot reform adds to the work of the election officers. The Republican city chairman claims the election of Weaver by from 35,000 to 50,000 plurality.

Lesson In Politeness.

Just before Brig. Gen. John M. Wilson left the office of chief of engineers he was called upon by a former senator of the United States. Gen. Wilson was always a very punctilious man in his bearing and manners. His visitor entered the office, and with his cheerful good morning stood with his hat on as if he were still in the hall. Gen. Wilson rang his office bell, and his messenger came in.

"George," said the general, "bring me my hat."

The hat was brought in, Gen. Wilson clapped it on and continued conversation with the visitor, who remained totally unconscious of the hint that had been pointed at him. When the visitor left Gen. Wilson called his messenger and directed him to return his hat to the closet.—Cleveland Leader.

GIVING OUT.

The Struggle Discourages Many a Citizen of Plainfield.

Around all day with an aching back,
Can't rest at night,
Enough to make anyone "give out."
Doan's Kidney Pills will give renewed life.
They will cure the backache;
Cure every kidney ill.
Here is Plainfield proof that this is so.

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of 75 Grandview avenue, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for six years. I doctored and used various kinds of medicine with little or no result. I had almost a constant sharp darting pain across my back, and if I ever exerted myself or took cold I suffered severely. I always felt it most when the weather was damp. While in this condition I saw Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and my son bought me a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I started to use them at once, following directions closely. They helped the pain in my back and relieved my other difficulty. I give all the credit for this relief to Doan's Kidney Pills for they are beyond a doubt a grand medicine for kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50c. a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Swept the Boards.

In State, county and city, the Republicans swept the boards. Not one of their candidates failed of election. It would seem to have demonstrated that, for the present at least, the public is satisfied with the administration of public affairs by the Republican party. As far as the issues of the campaign went, they were pretty clearly defined as resting on the present management in the State and the city. The personality of some of the candidates was counted on to take more of a prominent part in the vote on the county candidates and it undoubtedly did.

While the returns are by no means complete, the estimated Republican plurality in the State is 13,725. It may vary several thousand either way but there is no doubt but that the Republican gubernatorial candidate was duly elected and will soon occupy the place now filled by Foster M. Voorhees. However any one may disagree with Mr. Murphy in politics, no one can question his integrity. He can therefore be trusted to administer his duties at the State House with honesty.

The Republican county ticket has gone through successfully although several of the candidates were considerably cut. The fight over the county offices was a comparatively minor one as only three assemblymen were to be elected.

Of special interest to Plainfielders was the vote on the local candidates. There was a free use of pasters, more than usual perhaps. It signified that the people of Plainfield had not agreed to allow State politics to influence them in their selection of local candidates. Despite the fact that the two elections were combined, the voting on the two tickets was considerably different. The local voters appeared to take a decided interest in the local issues until they actually overshadowed the importance of the State and county ticket.

As soon as the new Common Council is seated, something will be done toward securing the new High School for Plainfield. So it was announced at the meeting of the City Board of Education Monday evening. The members of that body, particularly the one who was elected yesterday, should not forget that they are public officials and as such, the public has a right to know of their acts. If the public is kept fully informed with every step taken toward that public improvement, it will do much to put aside the criticism which has heretofore been heard regarding the plans to build a new High School.

The team of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club has played its last match. The record made by that team during the season was an enviable one and one which is bound to assist in bringing into prominence the Plainfield golfers.

There were many words of commendation this morning for the bulletin at The Daily Press office which gave the full details of the local election. It was the first authentic news of the election in Plainfield.

The evidences of the movement in the Second ward to defeat the power of John H. Keely were to be seen at the polls yesterday.

LOTS OF GOLF ON HOLIDAY.

EVENTS AT BOTH OF LOCAL GOLF CLUBS YESTERDAY.

W. R. Faber Won Hellda Cup and S. St. John McCutchen Captured the President's Trophy.

The local golfers had planned to enjoy Election Day to its fullest extent, but the threatened storm of yesterday kept many away. There was plenty to do, however.

HILLSIDE CLUB.

A kicker's handicap and regular play for the Holiday cup were the attractions on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course yesterday. Both competitions were continued all day.

Dunellen, Nov. 6.—While playing with some boys on the way home from school Monday afternoon, George Apgar, youngest son of John Apgar, was in some manner pushed and thrown down. Although the fall was not a severe one his left leg was twisted and broken just below the knee. He was attended by Dr. Brakeley and is now rapidly recovering. No blame is placed on his companions as the pushing was done in fun.

If the persons are found they will be severely dealt with.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD

(Special Correspondence.

Scotch Plains, Nov. 6—The Republican ticket won out here with the usual republican majority. The day was one of the quietest of any State Election held in years. Both sides worded hard to get the vote out but voters sumed to town but little interest in the election. Out of a total registry of 317, but 238 were cast, two of them being rejected. The Republican ticket won by 46 majority. There was very little scratching outside of the assemblymen and Newcorn suffered most by this and run way behind his ticket.

LITTLE BUSINESS DONE ON EVE OF ELECTION.

Very Uneventful Session of the Common Council Was Held Monday Evening.

MANY PETITIONS PRESENTED

WILL MACADAMIZE SPOONER AVENUE WHEN SHARE IS PAID.

Troubles Over Dog Taxes—City Cannot Aid Union Veterans' Union—J. B. Coward Wanted to Know About Change of Council Chambers.

The business transacted by the Common Council at its regular meeting, held Monday evening, was of the ordinary kind, very little of it being important. There were many petitions of one kind and another which consumed more or less time. All the members were present except Councilman Buckle and Gloak.

Robert L. Marsley complained that an unmuzzled dog had killed one of his chickens valued at $6.50, and he asked the Council to reimburse him. The matter was referred to the corporation counsel. Robert W. Van Wyck, of West Fifth street, protested against a tax bill for $5 50, stating that he had only been a resident of this city since June 1, 1901. The matter was referred. Patsy Rosso, or Patsy Russell, who is one and the same person, objected to a personal tax of $100 and a dog tax. He claimed that his personal property never exceeded $50 and that he never owned a dog. The matter was referred.

Collector F. H. Smith reported that ten warrants were issued during the past month. There were nineteen warrants returned and the sum of $68.85. The Plainfield Electric Light Company informed the Council that two lights had been located on Evergreen avenue, one on Madison avenue, near the bridge over Green brook and one on Farra ut avenue, the charge for the same to commence November 1. Building Inspector Doane reported that eleven building permits were granted during October.

Residents in the vicinity of Grant avenue and Central street asked the Council for an electric light on the southwest corner of the above two named streets. The residents of Spooner avenue petitioned to have their avenue macadamized. Mr. Tolles introduced an ordinance to macadamize the street after the property owners deposit $449.64, their share for doing the work. The street will be macadamized from Fourth to Seventh streets in accordance with the work done on other streets.

J. B. Coward communicated with the Council regarding a report to the effect that there is to be a change in the location of the Council rooms and city offices to the Smalley building on North avenue. He said that he would like to know whether such a change is to be made so that he can arrange for using the offices which would be vacated. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Mr. vanHerwerden offered a resolution which provided for the borrowing of $5,000 for the improvement of the sewage system. Another resolution by the same member provided for the issuing of $5,000 in bonds for street improvements. Still another resolution by Mr. vanHerwerden granted the requests of E. F. Hand, N. A. Ferguson and S. L. Sharkey to cancel dog taxes from their bills.

Mr. vanHerwerden reported on the petition from the Union Veterans' Union asking for an appropriation of money to help them entertain members at the State convention. He submitted the opinion of the corporation counsel to whom the matter was referred. The opinion was that the Council has no legal right to appropriate money for such a purpose.

Mr. Tolles offered two resolutions which provides for the laying of sidewalks and the setting of curbing in front of several properties where property-owners have failed to comply with the law, the work to be done by the city and charged against the property.

Mr. Mellick offered a resolution providing for the locating of an electric light at the corner of Grant avenue and Second street and three lights on Dunellen avenue, as petitioned for. There being no other business the Council then adjourned.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL IS AGAIN IN SIGHT.

Board Of Education Promises To Act By The First Of The Year.

AWAITS COUNCIL'S ACTION.

SUBJECT BROUGHT UP AT SCHOOL BOARD MEETING MONDAY NIGHT.

Truancy Law Is Being Enforced With Success According To Report Of Superintendent Maxson—Routine Business Was Transacted.

After having lain dormant for many months, the new High School question was resurrected from the Board of Education archives, at the regular meeting held Monday evening. It was again consigned to its resting place to be revived at the begining of the new year. In the absence of Secretary Lounsbury, Mr. Abbott acted in that capacity. After the usual batch of bills had been read and ordered paid, the tax collector's report was given which showed a total of $8,803 53, with interest, had been received and deposited to the credit of the board. Superintendent Maxson reported receiving $562 for the quarter's tuition from non-resident pupils.

Medical Inspectors Tomlinson and VanHorne reported examining fifty-seven pupils during the past month. Custodian of School Moneys W. F. Arnold rendered his monthly statement, which showed the receipts for the month to have been $10,703 53 and the disbursements $7,344.39, leaving a balance on hand of $3,801 44.

Superintendent Maxson reported giving permission for the Eighth grade of the Whittier School to drill with the pupils of the High School, also allowing the Junior class the use of the Franklin School chapel to give an entertainment. In an informal way he stated that the new truant law recently adopted by the board had already borne good results and many recreant pupils were now at their studies regularly. At Mr. Maxson's suggestion a resolution was passed making the day after Thanksgiving a part of the Thanksgiving recess.

Dr. Richards sprang the new High School matter by asking what was being done in that direction. He was informed that the committee was awaiting a decision of the courts in regard to the legality of borrowing the money, the question having been raised by Jersey City. Mr. Lovell further declared that briefly it was a case of waiting for the Common Council to borrow the funds. The board then went into executive session.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

COLLEGE BOYS WERE BEATEN

ALIS A. A. DEFEATED RUTGERS COLLEGE SCRUB TEAM.

Costly Fumbles Prevented Plainfielders From Scoring Twice—Was a Well Played Game.

In an exciting game the Alis football team defeated the Rutgers College scrub eleven on the Hope common gridiron, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 5 to 0. At least six hundred people witnessed the fray and incidently the two costly fumbles, one in each half, which cost the home team as many touchdowns.

Although the visiting team seemed to be heavier than the Alis boys yet almost continuously the college players were on the defensive, for time and again their line was mowed down by the onslaughts of the plucky men on Alis' team. Captain Smith, the quarter for the visitors, kicked off and Alis returned the ball nearly to the middle of the field and by steady advances got it within ten yards of the Rutger's goal, line plunges being the tactics adopted principally. Rapalje fumbled and the ball went to the visitors, who after returned the ball a short distance down the gridiron again, were held by the strong line of Alis.

Smith punted, but the ball was blocked by Davis. The home team advanced the ball by degrees up the field again and Rapalje carried the ball over, while the crowd went wild with enthusiasm. Phillips tried for goal but failed.

On the next kickoff Alis was forced to kick at an early stage of the play and the scrub fullback returned the punt. The ball was carried down the field by heavy plunges in which Dick Waring, the Alis right tackle, figured to advantage, but the visitors made a bold stand on their fifteen yard line. Rutgers got the ball and succeeded in returning the leather to nearly midfield when time was called.

In the second half after ten minutes of play when the ball was in Alis territory, the home team worked a trick which netted them thirty yards. It was a double pass, Cuming handing the ball to Woolston, who skirted left end, while Cuming shot around the right. Within five yards of the Rutgers goal Alis again lost the ball on a fumble. Towards the end of the game the home team had another chance for a touchdown, but lost the ball on downs when within ten yards of the goal.

All the Alis men played well, Cathcart, Waring, Rapalje, Phillips and Woolston in particular puting up a good game.

The Election In Mississippi.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 6.—The weather was clear and cold, but as only the offices of state treasurer and secretary of state were to be filled little interest was manifested in the election. Private telegrams from the larger towns indicate that the temporary incumbents, George W. Carlisle and Joseph W. Powers, who are appointees of Governor Longino, have been elected state treasurer and secretary of state respectively. Full returns will not be received for a day or two, as numerous precincts are off the railroads and without telephone connections. All the candidates were Democrats.

Nebraska Republican.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 6.—Indications based on scattering precinct returns are that Nebraska has reaffirmed her verdict of last year in favor of the Republicans. Figures, mainly from the smaller towns and a few country districts, show a Republican gain of 4 to the precinct over a year ago, when the average Republican majority was 3,800. If these gains are sustained, Sedgwick (Rep.), for supreme court justice, will carry the state by from 5,000 to 10,000. At Republican headquarters the claim is made of 10,000, but the indecisiveness of the figures is admitted.

The Vote In Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 6.—The Courier Journal claims the Democrats will have increased majorities in both houses of the next general assembly, which will elect a successor to United States Senator Deboe. Charles F. Grainger, Democrat, is elected mayor of Louisville by over 8,000. Every member of the school board of Louisville elected yesterday is a Democrat. Returns and reports from all over the state indicate corresponding Democratic success.

Maryland Elections.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6.—Returns at hand show a tremendous falling off in the vote both in the city and the counties and indicate that the Democrats have been victorious in both city and state, although it is impossible to give any figures because of the meager returns. It seems highly probable that no more than 75,000 votes have been polled in Baltimore as against 110,000 cast two years ago at the municipal elections.

Iowa's Large Plurality For Cummins

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 6.—Returns from this state came in very slowly, the polls having been held open until 7 o'clock in most precincts. The figures generally show a Republican gain which, if continued in the same ratio, will make about 31,000 net Republican gain in the state and give Cummins, for governor, a plurality of 37,000.

Light Vote In Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 6.—It is generally conceded that Governor Gregory and the Republican state ticket are elected by a plurality of about 3,000. This is a loss of some 3,000 from last year. The vote polled through the state was light.

Democrats Won In Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 6.—Returns are coming in slowly and are insufficient on which to base majorities, but all indications point to victory for the Democrats.

One Bid Must Be Accepted.

HAVANA, Nov. 6.—Governor General Wood sent a communication to the municipal council of Havana to the effect that one of the bids recently submitted for the sewering and paving contract must be accepted. Yesterday afternoon a committee consisting of the mayor of Havana and several councilmen had a long conference with General Wood and discussed the matter of raising the necessary funds. The municipal council will take the question under consideration and report on Nov. 20. General Wood has sailed for Santiago.

Oceanic's Fast Trip.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The giant White Star liner Oceanic, second largest steamship in tonnage and first in length in the world, on her way from Liverpool and Queenstown to this port, broke her best previous record by almost two hours, making the passage from Queenstown to the Sandy Hook lightship in 5 days, 17 hours and 45 minutes.

Meade Court Martial Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—In order to permit more time for the preparation of the case the general court martial appointed for the trial of Colonel Robert J. Meade of the marine corps will meet at New York city on the 19th inst. instead of on the 12th inst., as originally ordered.

Weather Probabilities.

Fair; increasing northerly winds.

A BOXER IN OFFICE.

Na Tung Raised For Chinese Foreign Office.

PEKING, Nov. 6.—Na Tung, a former Boxer leader, has been appointed to the Chinese foreign office by an edict received yesterday. He recently returned from Japan, where he went as special envoy to apologize and express condolences for the murder of Sugiyama Akira, chancellor of the Japanese legation at Peking, shortly before the legations were besieged. This appointment is considered a test of the attitude of the Chinese ministers toward the restoration of the Boxers to imperial favor.

Japanese influence supported Na Tung, a fact which contributes further evidence of Japan's recent policy of cooperation with China.

Not long ago Japan sounded the powers regarding the propriety of another protest against the Manchurian convention between Russia and China and was disappointed by a lack of interest in the question on the part of the United States and Great Britain.

A New England dealer in gentlemen's furnishing goods sells Ripans Tabules because he finds almost everybody wants them. "My sales are constantly increasing," he writes. "Customers usually purchase one or two and sometimes five packages at a time and a goodly number in the town have or are now using the Tabules. Judge ——is the latest addition to the list and he speaks in the highest praise of them. I have customers who carry the Tabules constantly in their pockets and take one when they feel poorly, although they consider themselves in the best of health."

Dear Sirs—Two years ago I had very bad corns and callouses on my feet, I went to a chiropodist and paid him $5.75 for taking them off. In less than a month they were back again. I then tried your CORN CURE and used only three bottles, costing 45c, and am happy to say it has taken them off completely. They have not troubled me now for over a year. I consider your HEPBURN'S CORN CURE the best I have ever used.—Yours truly, R. O. RUNYON, 629 LaGrande Ave.

The New Woman
By ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER

Speaking of the inflammable excitability and panicky, hysterical nature of women, recently I was in a great crowd at a public pageant. It was the most closely packed throng I ever was in, though I have been all around the world. The police had no control over the mob at the point where I was. Our toes were trodden upon, our ribs were pressed in, we felt as if we could not breathe, and yet there was that awful host—those behind—ever surging up against us, packing the mass yet tighter. Really and truly it was a moment of peril. One who gave down or got pushed over would have been trodden under foot like a worm. To add to our discomfort a torrent of rain poured upon us. The women around me were mostly middle aged or elderly. They stood stock still, only moving to get as much breath as they could. At that moment a brawny six foot young man who stood beside me began to scream and struggle. He was pale around the mouth, his eyes glared like a wild animal's. Did you ever see a human being with his wits all gone through panic? Well, that was this young man. He began to dig right and left and pump up and down with his elbows. "Oh, I can't get my arms up! I can't get my arms up!" he shrieked. None of us could get our arms up, but we were not saying anything about it. We were just holding our heads on, waiting for relief. The six foot youth saw a policeman and gave a yell and screamed anew: "Officer, I'm dying! I can't breathe here! Oh, I'm dying!" He threw up the arms he had by that time wriggled out and began to climb over the bodies of people. A woman's belt snapped off, a man's necktie went sailing on the wind, but what cared the panic stricken youth? If those whom he jostled and bruised in his senseless struggle had not been women, who stolidly stood their ground and remained cool and steady, there is no telling what accidents might not have happened. It was the most pitiable exhibition of chicken hearted masculinity I ever witnessed, and I hope never to see the like again.

Everywhere you meet the independent, self supporting American girl. At Cleveland I saw a fine, nice mannered young milliner, who had come there from a neighboring town to attend a great meeting and lay in her fall stock of goods. At the Buffalo exposition scores of pretty, intelligent girls were acting as saleswomen, cashiers and telegraphers. One chocolate concessionnaire had a young lady who lectured to the people and told them how to cook. Her talks were very popular.

I saw hosts of farm women at the Pan-American, who had come there with their husbands. I am bound to say that these good country women were on the average better looking, better dressed and more braced up appearing than their husbands.

A missionary in New York city reports that in the noted east side slum district the men are about the only ones who attend religious meetings. The missionary thinks it doubtful whether women among the east siders are considered to have any souls. Rather, it is that the poor creatures are obliged to stay at home and mind their great rafts of young ones and cook for the husbands who are attending to their souls.

Among the teachers who received appointment to the Philippines are the Misses Ross of Haverhill, Mass. Miss Emma R. Ross goes as a directress of sewing. Her salary is $1,200 in gold and transportation both ways. She is a skilled stenographer and typewriter. For expert typewriters there is a promising opening in the Philippines. Immense fortunes in mining, in agriculture and in trading will be made in the islands in the future. Healthy, courageous and capable women can secure their share of these as well as anybody else can.

The oldest old maid in the United States, likewise one of the jolliest anywhere, is Miss Jane Hillyer, 100 years old Aug. 3. She is a Presbyterian and has been for 75 years, and perhaps that is the reason she never married, for in the Presbyterian wedding ritual woman must promise to obey her husband. What a lot of divorces Miss Hillyer must remember!

Pennsylvania has a woman member of its state forestry commission. Miss Myra L. Dock. There is no abler forestry worker in Pennsylvania than Miss Dock. She has studied the science of woodland preservation both at home and in Germany, where it is more highly developed and better understood than elsewhere. She is an admirable lecturer as well as practical student.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

"I want you to postpone all other engagements for to-night—ay, even if you were summoned to the bedside of an emperor; to take a cab, unless your carriage should be actually at the door, and with this letter in your hand for consultation, to drive straight to my house. Poole, my butler, has his orders; you will find him waiting your arrival with a locksmith. The door of my cabinet is then to be forced, and you are to go in alone; to open the glased press—letter E—on the left hand, breaking the lock if it be shut, and to draw out, with all its contents as they stand, the fourth drawer from the top or—which is the same thing—the third from the bottom. In my extreme distress of mind, I have a morbid fear of misdirecting you; but even if I am in error, you may know the right drawer by its contents; some powders, a vial, and a paper book. This drawer I beg of you to carry back with you to Cavendish square exactly as it stands.

"That is the first part of the service; now for the second. You should be back, if you set out at once, on the receipts of this, long before midnight; but I will leave you that amount of margin, not only in the fear of one of those obstacles that can neither be prevented nor foreseen, but because an hour when your servants are in bed is to be preferred for what will then remain to do. At midnight, then, I have to ask you to be alone in your consulting-room, to admit with your own hand into the house a man who will present himself in my name, and to place in his hands the drawer that you will have brought with you from my cabinet. Then you will have played your part and earned my gatitude completely. Five minutes afterward, if you insist upon an explanation, you will have understood that these arrangements are of capital importance, and that by the neglect of one of them, fantastic as they must appear, you might have charged your conscience with my death or the shipwreck of my reason.

"Confident as I am that you will not trifle with this appeal, my heart sinks and my hand trembles at the bare thought of such a possibility. Think of me at this hour, in a strange place, laboring under a blackness of distress that no fancy can exaggerate, and yet well aware that, if you will but punctually serve me, my troubles will roll away like a story that is told. Serve me, my dear Lanyon, and save

Your friend,
"H. J.

"P. S.—I had already sealed this up when a fresh terror struck upon my soul. It is possible that the post-office may fail me, and this letter not come into your hands until to-morrow morning. In that case, dear Lanyon, do my errand when it shall be most convenient for you in the course of the day; and once more expect my messenger at midnight. It may then already be too late; and if that night passes without event, you will know that you have seen the last of Henry Jekyll."

Upon the reading of this letter I made sure my colleague was insane; but till that was proved beyond the possibility of doubt I felt bound to do as he requested. The less I understood of this farrago, the less I was in a position to judge of its importance; and an appeal so worded could not be set aside without a grave responsibility. I rose accordingly from table, got into a hansom, and drove straight to Jekyll's house. The butler was awaiting my arrival; he had received by the same post as mine a registered letter of instruction, and had sent at once for a locksmith and a carpenter. The tradesmen came while we were yet speaking; and we moved in a body to old Dr. Denman's surgical theater (from which, as you are doubtless aware) Jekyll's private cabinet is most conveniently entered. The door was very strong, the lock excellent; the carpenter avowed he would have great trouble, and have to do much damage, if force were to be used, and the locksmith was near despair. But this last was a handy fellow, and after two hours' work the door stood open. The press marked E was unlocked; and I took out the drawer, had it filled up with straw and tied in a sheet, and returned with it to Cavendish quare.

Here I proceeded to examine its contents. The powders were neatly enough made up, but not with the nicety of the dispensing chemist; so it was plain they were of Jekyll's private manufacture; and when I opened one of the wrappers, I found what seemed to me a simple, crystalline salt of a white color. The vial, to which I next turned my attention, might have been about half full of a blood-red liquor, which was highly pungent to the sense of smell, and seemed to me to contain phosphorus and some volatile ether. At the other ingredients I could make no guess. The book was an ordinary version book, and contained little but a series of dates. These covered a period of many years, but I observed that the entries ceased nearly a year ago and quite abruptly. Here and there a brief remark was appended to a date, usually no more than a single word. "Double" occurring perhaps six times in a total of several hundred entries; and once, very early in the list and followed by several marks of exclamation, "total failure!!!" All this, though it whetted my curiosity, told me little that was definite. Here were a vial of some tincture, a paper of some salt, and the record of a series of experiments that had led—like too many of Jekyll's investigations—to no end of practical usefulness. How could the presence of these articles in my house affect either the honor, the sanity, or the life of my flighty colleague? If his messenger could go to one place, why could he not go to another? And even granting some impediment, why was this gentleman to be received by me in secret? The more I reflected, the more convinced I grew that I was dealing with a case of cerebral disease; and though I dismissed my servants to bed, I loaded an old revolver that I might be found in some posture of self-defense.

Twelve o'clock had scarce rung out over London, ere the knocker sounded very gently on the door. I went myself at the summons, and found a small man crouching against the pillars of the porch.

"Are you come from Dr. Jekyll?" I asked.

He told me "yes" by a constrained gesture; and when I had bidden him enter, he did not obey me without a searching backward glance into the darkness of the square. There was a policeman not far off, advancing with his bull's-eye open, and at the sight, I thought my visitor started and made greater haste.

These particulars struck me, I confess, disagreeably; and as I followed him into the bright light of the consulting-room, I kept my hand ready on my weapon. Here, at last, I had a chance of clearly seeing him. I had never set eyes on him before, so much was certain. He was small, as I have said; I was struck besides with the shocking expression of his face, with his remarkable combination of great muscular activity and great apparent debility of constitution, and—last but not least—with the odd, subjective disturbance caused by his neighborhood. This bore some resemblance to incipient rigor, and was accompanied by a marked sinking of the pulse. At the time, I set it down to some idiosyncratic, personal distaste; and merely wondered at the acuteness of the symptoms; but I have since had reason to believe the cause to lie much deeper in the nature of man, and to turn on some nobler hinge than the principle of hatred.

This person (who had thus, from the first moment of his entrance, struck in me what I can only describe as a disgustful curiosity) was dressed in a fashion that would have made an ordinary person laughable; his clothes, that is to say, although they were of rich and sober fabric, were enormously too large for him in every measurement—the trousers hanging on his legs and rolled up to keep them from the ground, the waist of the coat below his haunches, and the collar sprawling wide upon his shoulders. Strange to relate, this ludicrous accouterment was far from moving me to laughter. Rather, as there was something abnormal and misbegotten in the very essence of the creature that now faced me—something seizing, surprising, and revolting—this fresh disparity seemed but to fit in with and to reinforce it; so that to my interest in the man's nature and character there was added curiosity as to his status in life.

"Have you got it?" he cried. "Have you got it?" And so lively was his impatience that he even laid his hand upon my arm and sought to shake me.

I put him back, conscious at his touch of a certain icy pang along my blood. "Come, sir," said I. "You forget that I have not yet the pleasure of your acquaintance. Be seated, if you please." And I showed him an example, and sat down myself in my customary seat and with as fair an imitation of my ordinary manner to a patient as the lateness of the hour, the nature of my preoccupations, and the horror I had of my visitor would suffer me to muster.

"I beg your pardon, Doctor Lanyon," he replied, civilly enough. "What you say is very well founded; and my impatience has shown its heels to my politeness. I come here at the instance of your colleague, Dr. Henry Jekyll, on a piece of business of some moment; and I understood"—he paused and put his hand to his throat, and I could see, in spite of his collected manner, that he was wrestling against the approaches of hysteria—"I understood, a drawer—"

But here I took pity on my visitor's suspense, and some perhaps on my own growing curiosity.

"There it is, sir," said I, pointing to the drawer, where it lay on the floor behind a table and still covered with the sheet.

He sprung to it, and then paused, and laid his hand upon his heart. I could hear his teeth grate with the convulsive action of his jaws; and his face was so ghastly to see that I grew alarmed both for his life and reason.

Even the knifing of William Newcorn, Republican candidate for Assembly, was confined to small bounds. The Republican vote was 339 out of a total of 453, giving a plurality of 231. Newcorn ran behind the ticket to the extend of 47 votes. The opposition to E E Pray developed to the extent of forty votes, otherwise the candidates and the ticket kept together. There were three rejected ballots. Last year the Republican majority for the ticket was 199.

THIRD WARD, 2D DIST.

The count was first completed in the Second district of the Third ward. There was a slight Democratic gain, the plurality of the Republican ticket being decreased from 83 to 65. Newcorn ran twenty behind his ticket, while Miller was ten behind. It was evident that the movement against Pray had spread to the precinct for he had fifteen outs. The vote was good, 155 votes being cast. Last December the vote was 148. There were no rejected ballots. Councilman Buckle and Woodhull both ran even with the ticket.

FOURTH WARD, 1ST DIST.

The relative position of the two parties remained unchanged in the First district of the Fourth ward. The vote polled, 411, was fairly heavy. Of that number, three were rejected, 244 were Republican and 153 Democratic. All the Republican candidates, except City Judge Bunyon and Constable Weaver, ran behind their ticket. Newcorn was cut the most, falling behind thirty-five. Casey's fight for the Council did not make a big showing, as he only led his ticket by eight. There were no signs of the anti-Pray movement. It was Clarence L. Murphy's home district and he naturally polled the highest vote of any of the candidates for councilman-at large.

FOURTH WARD 2d DIST.

The opposition to William Newcorn, Republican candidate for the Assembly, was strongest in the Second district of the Fourth ward where C. L. Moffett, one of his Democratic opponents polled twenty-six votes more than he did. Newcorn was cut fifty times on the Republican ticket. There was a slight loss compared with last year's figures in the Republican column, the Republican plurality having been reduced from 102 to 68. The vote polled was large, 406. There were three rejected ballots. Grieb, Oberg and Cullen received a few votes as socialist candidates for the Council. The promised strength of Casey did not materialize although he ran sixteen votes ahead of his ticket.

FOURTH WARD, 3d. DIST.

While the unusual figures of last year were not reached, the Republicans managed to practically hold their own in the Third district of the Fourth ward. All the candidates, with the exception of William Newcorn, stayed close with the ticket. Newcorn was knifed but still managed to poll two more votes than C. L. Moffett in whose favor he was chiefly scratched. There was no strength to the Casey boom for councilman and it ran one behind the Democratic ticket. The Republican plurality was 113, as compared with 161 last year, 108 two years ago and a Citizen's majority of ten the year before that. The total vote cast was 337, four ballots being rejected. Grieb, Oberg, Peterson and Cullen each received ten votes for councilman on the Socialist ticket.

Miss Fanny Mills, of East Fifth street, entertained last evening, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fulton, Miss Helen Fulton, Elmer Spencer and William Caldwell, the latter from the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Cards and dancing were the attractions.

ABOUT NEW MEMBERS OF COMMON COUNCIL.

Of Seven Councilmen Elected Tuesday Four Will Hold Over From Present Council.

SOMETHING ABOUT THEM.

REPUBLICAN VICTORY HERE WAS NOT A GENERAL SURPRISE.

Opposition Was Lacking in Unity and Failed to Elect a Single Candidate—All New Members Promise to Take Active Part.

While there were surprising incidents connected with Tuesday's election, the results in this city were not of a nature to cause any general surprise. As was predicted in The Daily Press sometime before election, the Republican ticket was uniformly successful. Its chief points of weakness in the First and Second wards were pointed out and proved to be the most vulnerable spots in its political armor. The opposition was lacking in unity and its efforts expended in disjointed fashion failed to turn the tide.

The election of the seven Republican Councilmen will mean next year a continuation of the present scheme of administration. Of the seven, four are already members of the Common Council, and will simply retain their membership in that body for two years longer. The three new members are all strangers to the public eye and their share in the future proceedings of the Common Council are likely to be watched with much interest.

With the close of this year, Councilman J. B. Dumont retires from the Common Council and Edward E Pray takes his seat. Mr. Dumont has been a very faithful servant of the city and has served it well for many years as a member of the municipal legislature. A man of positive mood, he has always taken a firm stand on all questions of public importance and has played a very important part in the proceedings of the Council. His successor, Mr. Pray, appears to be a man of the same type, firm, aggressive and seemingly likely to figure prominently in the Common Council.

The Councilman from the Third ward, Leslie M. Daniel, who will succeed Charles B. Clifton, is well-known to the old residents of Plainfield. Mr. Daniel is a quiet, unassuming citizen who is likely to take much interest in the city government and proved a hard worker on committee even if he is not a frequent speaker before the Council.

The third of the new trio is Clarence L. Murphy, senior member of the legal firm of Murphy & Blatz. Mr. Murphy has spent much of his career in this city and has a host of friends. He is an easy speaker and likely to be heard frequently in discussion of questions that may come before the City Fathers. As a lawyer, he is likely to be appointed to the committee on laws and ordinances and may also find a place on the police board.

Of the old councilmen who are returned for another term, Councilman J. F. Buckle is probably the best known to the general public. Mr. Buckle is a local business man. He has been successful in his private affairs and tries to conduct the city's business on the same lines. He is one of those men who believe it is the duty of every citizen to devote a certain portion of his time for the benefit of the community. There have been criticisms of Mr. Buckle's acts at times, but no one has doubted his sincerity in pursuing the course he did. This will be his third term in the Council. He is now chairman of the police board, where he has kept in close touch with the existing situation in the city.

There will be a large attendance of Knights from this city, Elizabeth and Newark, and all will take part in a parade. A band of music will be secured to enliven the occasion. After the parade a collation will be served.

WHAT THEY THINK OF RESULT

OPINIONS OF SOMERSET COUNTY LEADERS REGARDING ELECTION.

Republicans Pleased at all But Sheriffalty Contest—Democrats Were Surprised at Governor Vote.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 7.—This place has just about recovered from the excitement of the recent election and some are happy, while others are sad indeed. The county gave Murphy 340 plurality for governor, Hoagland, R., 53 for member of Assembly over Childs, D., and McMurtry, D., defeated Douglass, R., by just 694. These figures are about correct, although the returns have not been all filed with the county clerk yet.

Hoagland's close call and McMurtry's remarkable run are widely discussed. It was a narrow shave for "Wyck" and he may be glad it was no worse. "Cal" is about the happiest man in the county today. The views of the leaders of each party may be of interest.

Ex-Senator Keys, the member from this county of the Democratic State committee, said the result on governor was a complete surprise to him, as he was almost positive Seymour would win in a canter. Mr. McMurtry's run in the county was highly gratifying. "If Childs had only been elected I would not have cared so much."

Ex-Senator Thompson was delighted with the outcome. "I was sure Murphy would be elected, but I hardly expected to see him have such a large plurality. The result in the county might have been worse."

Jacob Shurts, chairman of the county Democratic committee, said nothing pleased him more than the way the Republican majority in Somerset was wiped out. "By the time another election rolls around we will be in a position to leave the enemy in the rear."

William J. DeMond, a popular Democrat, said he was sorry Seymour and Childs were defeated. The result in the State is very unsatisfactory.

F. A. Pope, a leading Republican, said he felt blue about the sheriff being lost to his party. He would rather have McMurtry than any other Democrat.

The Republican candidates for coroner—Drs. C. B. P. Fisher, of Bound Brook, and M. C. Smalley, of Gladstone—defeated Drs. Flynn and Ten-Eyck, the Democrats.

WANT DEATH BENEFIT.

Trial of Case Against Jr. O. U. A. M. by Relatives of Late Harry VanAlstyne.

The case against the State Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., which was brought by the relatives of the late Harry Van Alstyne to recover death benefits alleged to be due from Franklin Council, No. 41, of which the deceased was a member, was tried at Elizabeth, yesterday. G. W. V. Moy represented the plaintiff and N. A. Dennis, of Princeton, the defendant.

The defendant claimed that the deceased was out of benefits when he died by reason of the fact that he had allowed himself to get behind in dues. He was taken suddenly ill and it is said that during this time the family sent his dues to the council. There is a rule in the order, however, that if a member gets out of benefits and although he afterwards pays up he cannot be in benefits again within four weeks. This was part of the defence.

Judge Vail, before whom the case was tried, reserved his decision for a week.

Supper Tonight.

WILL DIVIDE THE PROPERTY.

PARTITION SUIT OVER DRAKE DUNN FARM FINALLY DECIDED.

Attempt to Have It Partitioned Failed and Land Will be Sold and Proceeds Divided.

The partition suit in reference to the tract of land known as the Drake Dunn farm, lying within the city limits, has at last been decided. This matter has been in litigation for a long time. The complainant, Mrs. Cornelia G. Dunn, who owns a one half interest, and Mrs. Ann Janet Blackford, who owns a one quarter interest, sought by proceedings in Chancery to have the property sold and the proceeds divided.

Mrs. Alpharetta D. Suydam, who owns a one fourth interest in the lands, opposed the sale and sought to have the property partitioned among the various owners. The matter was referred by the Chancellor to Nelson Runyon, special master.

Many witnesses were examined on each side and after hearing the arguments of counsel, the Master filed his report to the effect that the lands were not susceptible of partition and that the same should be sold. Mrs. Suydam filed exceptions to the Master's report, and the case was appealed to the Court of Chancery. The case was argued before Chancellor Magie on the first day of the October term.

The Chancellor has just filed his opinion in which he sustains the position taken by Mrs Dunn and Mrs. Blackford. He confirms the report filed by the Master, and orders the usual decree of sale made thereon.

John H. VanWinkle was counsel for the complainant, Mrs. Dunn, Codington & Swackhamer for Mrs. Blackford, and Reed & Coddington for Mrs. Suydam.

Tickets of admission will be free and can be had of Rev. W. M. Downey, rector of the church, or W. E. MacClymont. A collection will be taken, however, during the evening, and a liberal response will be expected. The chorus will be composed of fifty voices in all and lovers of music will be given a rare treat.

BURNS MAY CAUSE DEATH.

FRIGHTFUL INJURIES RECEIVED BY LITTLE ANNIE FORRESTEL.

Only Promptness of Letter Carrier Loughlin Saved Her From an Immediate and Horrible Death.

With frightful burns, which cover almost her whole body, Annie Forrestel, a comely little girl, lies in a precarious condition at her home on Randolph road. She is the daughter of James Forrestel. The accident happened Tuesday morning and since that time the young girl, who is but ten years of age, has been in great suffering.

A bon fire had been started in front of the house and little Miss Forrestel was playing about it, when suddenly the flames swept her garments and in a moment she was enveloped in the fire. Fortunately Robert Loughlin, the mail carrier on the route, was passing at the time. Spying the girl he rushed to her rescue.

Mr. Loughlin immediately proceeded to tear the fiery clothing from her body. In doing so burned his hands badly. He succeeded, however, in saving her from an immediate death, and carried her into the house. Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, the family physician, was sent for at once and he did all in his power to relieve her from the agonizing pain.

The battle against death is a hard one, considering that the victim's body is almost entirely burned, but the physician is hopeful. At the present time it is impossible to tell what her chances for recovery amount to, for at any time she may pass away.

FOUND A BODY.

Corpse Discovered in Woods Near Cranford—Supposed to be Suicide.

The remains of the unknown man found in the woods at Cranford Tuesday noon by gunners, still remains at Cole's undertaking rooms, but will in all probability be interred this afternoon unless some one claims them. The man had evidently been dead at least five weeks and the body was badly decomposed.

A complete description of the body is as follows: Weight about 175 pounds; height six feet; mixed gray hair. It was attired in a black coat and vest, white underclothes, blue and white outing shirt, soft brown hat and yellow socks. The pockets contained $34 34 and a plug of Mayo's tobacco. A bottle was lying near the body, which had contained laudanum, and which bore the label of Mackey Bros., 102 Broad street, Elizabeth.

The place where the body was found is but 500 feet from a much traversed street and it is a mystery how it could have remained in the spot so long undiscovered.

FORMALLY ORDAINED BY ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY

Ordination of Robert Dalzell Schoonmaker Took Place Last Evening.

AT CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH.

REV. CORTNEY H. FENN, OF PEKING, CHINA, PREACHED THE SERMON.

Dr. Elliott Mott, of Elizabeth, Acted as Moderator—The Other Members of the Board—Rev. Mr. Schoonmaker Goes to Africa.

In the presence of a congregation of several hundred people, Robert Dalzell Schoonmaker, of this city, was last evening ordained to the ministry in the Crescent Avenue church by the Presbytery of Elizabeth. He is shortly to begin mission work on the field in South Africa.

The members of the board, who conducted the service, were Dr Elliott Mott, of Elizabeth, who presided as moderator; Dr. Eben Cobb and Rev. John T. Kerr, of Elizabeth; Rev. Dr. W. R Richards, of the Crescent Avenue church; Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel. Elders Fred H. Andrews and William Shotwell, of the local Presbyterian churches, also assisted.

Robert Dalzell Schoonmaker.

At 8 o'clock the exercises were opened with invocation by Rev. Mr. Herring, followed by Scripture reading with Dr. Cobb officiating. A brief introductory speech was made by the moderator after which Rev. Cortney H. Fenn, of the Presbytery of Peking China, was presented and gave the ordination sermon.

Mr. Fenn, who is a most impressive and learned speaker, took for his text the words of the Scripture according to Paul's epistle to the Gallatians, ii:22, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me." From this he drew a powerful lesson of Christ's companionship and His steadfast love for His people, which He shows by dwelling in them and not with them.

When the Son of God took the form of man and appeared on earth, he said, He chose His disciples, dwelt with them, counselled with the leaders and was one of them merely to prepare them for higher purposes. They sorrowed at His departure, but knew not that it was so that He might return and imbue them with His spirit that they might be uplifted, be part of Him and spread His teachings broadcast.

God needed disciples on earth and as He sent Christ, the speaker continued, so did the Son of God send His followers. He beseeched all to realize that Christ dwelt in them and not to sigh over His leaving the earth for His heavenly home and to prepare for their coming. He gives His love freely and bestows knowledge on those who accept. When once this is procured the possessor is equipped for the work Christ intended for him.

In conclusion, he offered advice to the young man about to depart and implored him to first become acquainted with himself and then, realizing his humbleness, present the truths as God wishes they should be.

The constitutional questions were then propounded to Mr. Schoonmaker and, on their being answered in a satisfactory manner, he was given the impressive right hand of presbytery by the officiating members while the ordination prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Richards. The charge to the pastor was then made by Rev. John T. Kerr. The proceedings closed with the benediction pronounced by Mr. Schoonmaker.

* * * * * *

Manager F. F. Proctor is arranging a strong campaign of vaudeville and comedy for the winter season at his theatres in New York, Albany, Montreal and Newark. There will be an enlargement of the vaudeville scope of his amusement scheme as the season advances, and some of the best European acts, as well all the American headliners, will appear in conjunction with the Proctor Stock Company.

By Thanksgiving Day it is expected that his Newark Theatre will be ready to open, and at that house straight vaudeville will hold attention. His Montreal and Albany theatres will also present variety bills exclusively during the next few weeks, while at his four New York houses the Stock Co. will continue the revival of well known comedies, with vaudeville interludes between acts.

Joseph Arthur's celebrated comedy drama, "Blue Jeans," is scheduled for an early revival, with all the original scenery and mechanical effects, while David Belasco's beautiful production of "Mme. Butterfly," with Mlle. Pilar Morin as Cho Cho San, will continue for several weeks as a ruling attraction on the Proctor circuit.

Sandow, the strong man, was one of the first of a long line of great European vaudeville attractions which are booked to appear at these houses, and, with some of the best American specialties already engaged, the vaudeville department will be particularly strong. Sunday concerts have been resumed at all of Manager Proctor's New York theatres and the talent for those occasions is especially selected.

Doan's Kidney Pills will give renewed life.
They will cure the backache;
Cure every kidney ill.
Here is Plainfield proof that this is so.

Mrs. Valentine Utzinger, of 75 Grandview avenue, says: "I suffered from kidney complaint for six years, I doctored and used various kinds of medicine with little or no result. I had almost a constant sharp darting pain across my back, and if I ever exerted myself or took cold I suffered severely. I always felt it most when the weather was damp. While in this condition I saw Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and my son bought me a box from L. W. Randolph's drug store. I started to use them at once, following directions closely. They helped the pain in my back and relieved my other difficulty. I give all the credit for this relief to Doan's Kidney Pills for they are beyond a doubt a grand medicine for kidney trouble."

A STRONG ARGUMENT

Chief Counsel Rayner Closes Plea For Schley.

THRILLING SCENE IN COURTROOM.

A Large Audience Listened to the Brilliant Eulogy of the Admiral. Women Were Moved to Tears. Many Congratulations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The climax of the Schley court of inquiry came yesterday afternoon when Mr. Rayner, the chief counsel for Admiral Schley, concluded a brilliant argument of over three hours with a peroration so eloquent and impassioned that all within the sound of his voice were profoundly touched. This remarkable trial, he said, sought to condemn the man who had brought to a successful termination as great a naval triumph as was ever won. In vivid colors he painted the picture of the Brooklyn with Commodore Schley on the bridge fighting the entire Spanish fleet until the Oregon appeared out of the smoke. The thunders of the Brooklyn, music for the ears of his countrymen, he said, aroused Admiral Schley's envious foes. He pictured the victorious sailor suffering as few have suffered for three long years while the fires of persecution leaped around him and now awaiting the hour of his vindication in the verdict of the court.

"And when it comes," he concluded, "he can, from the high and exalted position that he occupies, look down upon his traducers and maligners and with excellent pride exclaim: 'I care not for the venomous gossip of clubs, drawing rooms and cliques and the poisoned shafts of envy and malice. I await under the guidance of divine Providence the verdict of posterity.'"

The scene in the courtroom as he finished with these words was thrilling. The attendance had been large all day, and at the morning session a lady had fainted from excitement. As Mr. Rayner began his eulogy of Admiral Schley those in the audience, many of whom were ladies, leaned forward in their seats. The spell of his oratory was over them, and when he described the admiral's gallant deeds and the long persecution to which he had been subjected many of them broke down and wept. The members of the court displayed evidences of emotion, and Admiral Schley himself was plainly moved. He sat leaning back, with his hands behind his head. His chin twitched, and as his counsel said he could afford to await the verdict of posterity two big tears rolled down his cheeks. He moved uneasily to conceal his emotion and under the pretense of adjusting his glasses brushed the tears aside. For full thirty seconds after Mr. Rayner closed there was not a sound. Then the tension broke in a loud burst of applause.

Admiral Dewey, after about half a minute, arose to remind the spectators that such a demonstration was out of place. A moment afterward the court adjourned, the judge advocate pleading that he could not well go on then. Then another remarkable thing happened. As soon as the gavel fell the entire audience surged forward to shake the hands of Admiral Schley and Mr. Rayner. But the oncoming spectators fell back a moment as they saw Admiral Dewey and his two associates move around the table as if by a common impulse and congratulate Admiral Schley and his counsel. Even Captain Lemly, the judge advocate, came forward to join in the congratulations. Then the public had its inning, and for fifteen minutes after the court adjourned Admiral Schley and Mr. Rayner were kept busy shaking hands.

Mr. Rayner's argument consumed the whole day of the court except for half an hour at the opening, which Captain Parker, his associate counsel, occupied in concluding.

Mine Workers' Strike Ordered.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 7.—An order calling a strike at the eight collieries of the Temple Iron company was issued last evening from the headquarters of district No. 1, United Mine Workers of America. The order is addressed to the presidents of the local unions at the collieries affected. The eight collieries operated by the Temple Iron company are located in Lackawanna and Luzerne counties and employ about 4,000 men and boys. The company has closed down the Mount Lookout, Harry E. and Forty Fort collieries, supposedly in anticipation of the strike. It is expected the other collieries will be closed down today. The company officials refuse to make any statement.

SIX NEW GOVERNORS

Corrected Returns From Tuesday's Elections.

FUSION'S VICTORY IN NEW YORK CITY

Rebuke to Tammany and Crokerism Even More Pronounced Than at First Announced — Result In Ohio Breaks All Records.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Elections were held in eleven states other than New York Tuesday. In six of these governors were chosen, and the Republicans were successful in New Jersey, Ohio, Massachusetts, Iowa and Rhode Island. The Democrats elected a governor in Virginia.

In five other states, where purely local issues prevailed, the Democrats carried Kentucky by increased majorities, Nebraska remained in the Republican column, the regular Quay Republicans were victorious in Pennsylvania, while Mississippi and perhaps Maryland remain in the Democratic column. This means a gain of two Democratic United States senators from Maryland and Kentucky, should the Democrats in the former state win.

In this state a new assembly and two state senators were voted for. The senators were elected to fill vacancies caused by the death in the Thirtieth and Forty-third senatorial districts. The successor of Senator Michael Russell in the Thirtieth district will be William D. Barnes, a Republican. The successor of Cornelius R. Parsons in the Forty-third district will be Merton E. Lewis, who was one of the Republican leaders in the last assembly.

The election of Messrs. Barnes and Lewis leaves the senate unchanged. There will be 35 Republicans and 15 Democrats in the senate of 1902, which is the same number each party had in the senate of 1901. The assembly of 1902 will stand as follows: Republicans and fusionists, 109; Democrats, 41. This is a Republican gain.

The following candidates for supreme court judges were elected: A. V. S. Cochrane, William M. Adams, Edgar S. Spencer, Charles E. Parker and Garrit A. Forbes.

Charles L. Knapp (Rep.) was elected to congress in the Twenty-fourth congressional district to fill a vacancy.

The fate of the constitutional amendment is not yet known.

Corrected returns on the New York city ticket show that Seth Low, fusion candidate, received a total vote in all boroughs of 294,992 and Edward M. Shepard 265,128, a plurality of 29,864 in favor of Mr. Low. Brooklyn gave the fusion candidate a plurality of 25,539. In Manhattan and the Bronx Mr. Low's plurality was 4,308.

Justice Jerome's plurality over Mr. Unger was 15,880. The vote on district attorney was: Jerome, 163,959; Unger, 148,079.

Edward M. Grout (fusion) was elected comptroller over W. W. Ladd, Jr., by a plurality of 44,976. The vote in the entire city was: Grout, 299,713; Ladd, 254,737. Brooklyn gave Grout a plurality of 30,201, the vote being: Grout, 116,590; Ladd, 86,389.

The three fusion candidates for supreme court judges were elected, as was Justice O'Brien, who ran on both tickets. Mayor Van Wyck, who was a candidate for supreme court judge, ran 20,000 votes behind his ticket.

The presidents of the various boroughs will be: Manhattan, Jacob A. Cantor (fusion); Brooklyn, J. E. Swanstrom (fusion); Bronx, L. F. Haffen (Dem.); Richmond, George Cromwell (Rep.); Queens, Joseph Cassidy (Dem.).

OHIO BROKE RECORD.

Republican Plurality Exceeds That of Former "Off Years."

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—With almost complete returns now in, it is noted that the Republican plurality beats all records in what has become know as the quadrennial "off year" and, with two exceptions, the records of other years. In off years, or those following a presidential election, the Democrats have carried Ohio, the exceptions being in 1881, after the death of Garfield, and in 1885 and 1893, after the Cleveland elections.

In two of these exceptional years the president was a Democrat, and those were considered off years for the Democrats. With the single exception of Hoadly in 1883, the Democrats never elected a governor of Ohio in any other than off years since the Republican party originated, and then they won on a local issue of liquor taxation.

Wherever local issues were paramount this year the Republicans sustained losses, notably at Columbus, on account of local option, and at Cleveland, on account of Mayor Johnson's agitation of "taxation inequalities." Where no such conditions were confronted the Republicans made gains, and they carried some Democratic counties that never before were represented by Republicans.

NEW JERSEY.

Murphy (Rep.), For Governor, Has 14,763 Plurality.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 7.—Franklin Murphy, Republican candidate for governor, has been elected over James Seymour by a plurality of 14,763. The Republicans elect 6 senators and 32 representatives, the Democrats 1 senator and 15 representatives.

The senate will stand 16 Republicans and 5 Democrats and the assembly 44 Republicans and 14 Democrats, the Republicans having on joint ballot a majority of 41.

The independent vote was a large factor in Tuesday's results throughout the state. In Trenton the Republican state ticket was carried by nearly 1,000, while the Republican candidate for tax receiver was defeated by nearly 1,000 and the Republican mayoralty candidate was defeated by 200. Should it prove true that the Republicans have carried old Sussex and Warren counties the victory will go down as the most complete in the history of the Republican party.

Pennsylvania Fusionists Defeated.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—The latest election returns from Pennsylvania indicate that Frank G. Harris (Rep.) has been elected state treasurer over Elisha A. Coray, Jr., the fusion candidate, by between 50,000 and 55,000 plurality. In 1899 Barnett (Rep.), for state treasurer, had a plurality of 110,588 over Creasy (Dem.). William P. Potter (Rep.) has defeated Harman Yerkes (fusion) for judge of the supreme court by about 50,000. The vote polled in the state yesterday was unusually light. Corrected returns show that Henry Budd, candidate for common pleas judge on the fusion ticket, ran 467 votes ahead of his colleague on the ticket, G. Harry Davis, and is therefore elected.

Sedgwick's Election Certain.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 7.—Complete and nearly complete returns from more than a third of the counties in Nebraska increase the pluralities for the Republican state ticket. If the ratio of gain shall be maintained, Sedgwick, Republican candidate for supreme judge, will have a plurality of 12,000. Chairman Lindsay of the Republican state committee says it will not be less than 7,000, and this is conservative. Chairman De France of the fusion committee concedes the election of Sedgwick. He said: "Congratulations are due the Republicans because of the result in the state. We concede the election of Sedgwick by a plurality anywhere between 3,000 and 5,000."

Latest Baltimore Returns.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 7.—Returns received in this city and including every county in the state, partly official and partly estimated, give the Democrats 45 delegates and 7 newly elected senators, which, combined with the 10 who hold over in the senate, assures the friends of Mr. Gorman a total of 63 on joint ballot. The Republicans, it appears, have elected 49 delegates and 6 senators, which, added to their 3 hold over senators, gives them a total of 58 on joint ballot. These figures indicate that the Republicans will be able to organize the house of delegates. In this city Republicans elected their entire ticket.

Massachusetts Returns.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—The complete vote gives Crane (Rep.), for governor, 185,695 and Quincy (Dem.) 115,391. The balance of the state ticket elected is Republican. The legislative returns show that the Democrats lost two members in the senate and gained sixteen in the house of representatives, the actual political division, however, to be determined on the final settlements of several close fights. On the face of the returns the house stands 166 Republicans and 72 Democrats, with two Social Democrats, while the senate is 32 Republicans and 7 Democrats.

Rhode Island's Vote.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 7.—Governor Gregory (Rep.) was re-elected by a plurality of more than 5,000 as against 8,859 last year. The general assembly in both branches is largely Republican, but by a decreased majority. With the single exception of Central Falls the Democrats elected their mayoralty candidates in all five cities of the state.

Iowa's Large Republican Majority.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 7.—Returns are coming in slowly, only one-half of the 2,100 precincts having been heard from. If the same percentage of gain in majority continues, Cummins (Rep.) for governor will have 92,000 over Phillips (Dem.). The Prohibition vote has been largely increased, advancing from 9,000 last year to 25,000 this year.

CAPTURED IN ST. LOUIS.

Man and Woman Caught With Probable Loot of Express Robbery.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 7.—The police have in custody a man and a woman suspected of complicity in the robbery of an express car on the Great Northern railroad near Wagner, Mon., July 3 last, when the safe was blown open and a consignment of unsigned notes for the National Bank of Helena, Mon., amounting to between $50,000 and $100,000 was stolen. Of this amount $8,500 in crisp new notes on the Helena bank were recovered, having been found in possession of the man and woman, who were registered at a hotel as Mr. and Mrs. J. Rose. They arrived at the hotel last Friday and announced that their stay in the city probably would be several weeks.

The man was taken into custody Tuesday night, and yesterday the woman was arrested as she was about to leave the city. Their arrests followed the passing of several notes on the Helena National bank that were supposed to have been stolen and the signatures forged.

Both prisoners were taken before Chief Desmond yesterday and "sweated." A photograph of the man was taken and measurements made according to the Bertillon system. Through these and circulars giving a description of the robbers the police identified Rose as Harry Loughbaugh, alias "Kid" Loughbaugh, alias Harry Alonzo.

The prisoners are being held to await information from the Montana authorities, who have been telegraphed about the arrests.

NEW TRIAL FOR CARTER.

Alleged Embezzler Now In Prison to Have a Civil Hearing.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Oberlin M. Carter, now a convict in the government prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and formerly a captain in the United States engineer corps, is to have a rehearing of his case in a civil tribunal. He now has the assurance of the government authorities that all the evidence is to be reviewed before Judge Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court in this city, the hearing to take place probably within a few months. Carter will be called on as a witness in his own behalf, and for the purpose of testifying in court he will be released temporarily from his place of confinement.

This is the result of the suits brought by the government some months ago in several federal courts for the purpose of recovering the proceeds of $722,582 which, it was proved at the court martial, Carter had embezzled from the United States. His uncle, Lorenzo D. Carter, and his brother, I. Stanton Carter, were said to have reinvested this money and secreted it for the purpose of having a fortune ready for the former army officer upon his release from the military prison.

When the case shall be disposed of finally, these valuable assets will become either the property of the government or of Carter. So confident is Carter of final vindication that he cheerfully joined in this agreement with the government's representative. He told his relatives and his lawyer to turn over to the courts at once the property in dispute, and on the court's decision he will base his chance of being a pauper or a rich man when he shall be outside the prison gates. Attorney Stone visited Carter at Fort Leavenworth a few days ago. He says his client knew nothing of the arrangements that were being made for a rehearing of the case, but when he was shown the papers of agreement he almost cried for joy.

"I will be vindicated," he said. "The public will have the chance of learning of the wrong that has been done me. It will be shown where the court martial erred. I place my faith in the civil courts."

INDEMNITY PAYMENTS.

An American Bank Is Needed In Shanghai.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—W. W. Rockhill, who represented this government in the final settlement with China, conferred with Assistant Secretary Taylor of the treasury department in regard to the representation of the United States on the commission of bankers which by the terms of the final protocol is charged with the duty of receiving and paying over to the several governments in interest the sums to be paid by China as indemnity.

These payments will cover a period of thirty-nine years, and the protocol provides that the several sums and interest shall be paid monthly to a commission of bankers at Shanghai, each member representing one or more of the beneficiary powers. As there is no American bank in Shanghai the question arises as to who should represent this government on the commission.

The American consul at Shanghai recommends that the British Shanghai bank be designated to act for the United States, but Mr. Rockhill does not favor that suggestion. His visit to the treasury department was for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the feasibility of an American banking institution in China of undoubted strength and recognized standing might not be considered by leading financiers at this time. Mr. Rockhill believes that in view of the changed conditions in China such a bank would do a very profitable business. At the same time it would prove a great benefit to American commercial interests in the far east and give the United States proper representation on the commission provided for in the Peking protocol.

The matter will receive the consideration of the treasury officials. The share of the United States in the indemnity to be paid by China is about $25,000,000, with 4 per cent interest.

Rejoicing In England.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The morning papers vie with yesterday's evening journals in expressions of rejoicing over the defeat of Tammany Hall, in the achievement of which Mr. Roosevelt's strong influence is regarded as the mainspring. "President Roosevelt could have wished for no brighter omen for his term of office," says The Daily Telegraph. "Upon this occasion the fusionists have attacked without gloves, and Tammany has received what will probably be a deathblow."

BUFFALO, Nov. 7.—The Alaskan building at the Pan-American grounds was badly damaged by fire last night. The loss is estimated at $15,000; no insurance.

THE PENSION BUREAU

Annual Report of Commissioner H. Clay Evans.

MANY FAULTS IN PRESENT SYSTEM.

Startling Revelations Brought Out Regarding Conduct of Guardians. Spanish War Soldiers Enjoy Special Benefits.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—In his annual report the commissioner of pensions discusses at length the faults of the present system of pensioning and the difficulties in the way of determining the merits of claims for pension and increase.

Attention is invited again to the necessity of repealing the act of June 7, 1888, which swept away all limitations as to the filing of widows' claims under the general law and brought about conditions which are stated to be a standing invitation to file fraudulent claims, the arrearages being so large and the chances of detection so small.

In January, 1900, a rule was adopted requiring guardians of pensioners to render to the bureau annual accounts of their receipts and expenditures of pension money. The rule was followed by disclosures which in some instances were of a startling nature. Guardians were found to be drawing pensions long after the deaths of their wards. Many cases were found where insane pensioners had been placed in asylums and other public institutions as indigent persons, while the guardians had drawn the pensions during the whole period and either diverted it for other purposes or allowed it to accumulate for the benefit of the pensioners' legal representatives. Improper, exorbitant and extravagant items of expenditure were shown which had been authorized and approved by the local courts. Other cases were revealed in which the guardians were appropriating the pensions to their own use, while the wards were being maintained at public expense.

In many cases pension moneys were shown to have accumulated in the hands of guardians in sums ranging from $1,000 to over $26,000, while the intended beneficiaries of the bounty of the government were being cared for in public institutions at the expense again of the public.

The report presents a number of interesting features connected with the filing of claims for pension on account of the war with Spain and the insurrection in the Philippine Islands. It is shown that the soldiers of these wars enjoy much greater benefits than were accorded to the soldiers of the civil war in the amount of pension granted for the same degree of disability. In 1895 the minimum pension was established at $6 per month. Nearly 100,000 soldiers of the civil war received from $1 to $4 per month from 1865 to 1895, and a disability from loss of arm or leg which now entitled the soldier to $45 per month gave him only $8 per month in 1865.

While the civil war lasted for four years and the casualties were enormous and the Spanish-American war lasted only about four months, with comparative few casualties, it is shown that three years after the close of the Spanish-American war claims for pension amounting to about 20 per cent of the number of the soldiers engaged in that war had been filed, while in 1872, or seven years after the close of the civil war, only about 6 per cent of the soldiers engaged in that war had filed claims.

The report shows that the principal officials of the bureau are men who served in the Union army, that 17 of the 18 disbursing agents served in the Union army and that there are now 601 ex-Union soldiers and sailors, 64 widows of ex-Union soldiers and sailors and many sons and daughters of ex-Union soldiers and sailors employed in the bureau and bureau service, each and all desirous, says the report, of doing promptly and generously their duty under the law in giving the full measure of generosity of the government to its lawful beneficiaries.

Swallow Convicted of Lying.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 7.—Dr. Silas C. Swallow has been convicted of falsehood by a committee of the Central Pennsylvania Methodist conference and suspended from the ministry until the next annual conference, which meets at Shamokin next March. The charges against Dr. Swallow were preferred by Rev. Charles V. Hartzell, pastor of the Vine Street M. E. church, this city, and grew out of a controversy between Hartzell and Swallow over a publication in the Pennsylvania Methodist, of which Dr. Swallow is editor. Dr. Swallow was the Prohibition nominee for state treasurer in 1897 and the Prohibition and Good Government candidate for governor in 1898. He was the presidential nominee of the Christian Advocate party last November and was strongly supported for the presidential nomination at the national Prohibition convention at Chicago in 1900.

Postoffice Robbed.

ROANOKE, Va., Nov. 7.—The postoffice at Princeton, W. Va., county seat of Mercer county, has been robbed. The safe was cracked and between $300 and $350 in stamps and $100 in money stolen. Some tools taken from a blacksmith shop were found in the postoffice, and Lewis McNutt, a colored employee of the blacksmith shop, has been arrested.

Boer Prisoners Wanted.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Nov. 7.—At a public meeting of leading men of Jamaica held in Kingston yesterday a resolution was adopted asking the British government to send Boer prisoners to Jamaica.

The New Assemblymen.

Of the three men who were elected Tuesday to represent Union county at the Lower House of the State Legislature, only one has any ability as a public speaker. The platform is not a new thing for William Newcorn and he is perfectly at home there so he may be expected to take a prominent part in the deliberations of the Legislature as soon as he learns the "ropes" of the State House. As the chief officer in the State of one of the prominent fraternal organizations of the country, Assemblyman Elect William Newcorn has a very large acquaintance through the State which is likely to be of much value to him during his stay at the State Capital.

Although William F. Hall, of Cranford, another of the three Assemblymen elected from this county, is not a public speaker and makes no pretence at being one, it is the general concensus of opinion that Mr. Hall will figure quite prominently in legislative affairs before his term is over. Mr. Hall is a man of unusual ability, a deep student and popular withal so that he is very likely to prove an important factor in the Assembly although he cannot make much of a speech.

Exactly what part Frederick Miller, of Elizabeth, is going to play in the Legislature is a matter for considerable conjecture. Mr. Miller has thoroughly demonstrated the fact that there is no career before him in the rostrum while he lacks many of the qualities which promise to make Mr. Hall so important at the sessions of the State Legislature. They will probably find something to amuse him on one of the committees where he will not be in the way.

It was not the Republican party which succeeded in defeating the heretofore invincible forces of Tammany Hall in the election Tuesday. It was a combination of forces working for the better government of the city in which party lines were forgotten. It was a true saying of Abraham Lincoln that you can fool some of the people all the time, all the people some of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time. There is a day coming when the monster political organization in Philadelphia will be wiped out through a great uprising of the people.

Before going into business a methodical man will estimate the demand for his goods or his services, and will regulate the amount of his first investment by this estimate, remarks the Philadelphia Record. Besides this share, however, there is a volume of trade which can be won from other establishments by judicious newspaper advertising, and a still further amount which can be actually created by such advertising. Therefore, the man who fails to advertise boldly voluntarily foregoes the benefits of what might be the largest part of his custom.

Property owners all over the city are beginning to realize the great value of good macadam roads in front of their properties. Under the present arrangement, the city agrees to meet one-third of the cost if the property owners on each side pay the other two-thirds. The latest to take advantage of this proposition are the residents of Spooner avenue who petitioned the Common Council with success. It is now up to the property owners to raise the necessary funds to defray their share of the expense.

It was generally expected that Charles Sutzer, the young Democrat from Elizabeth, would poll the heaviest vote of any of the Democrats on the Union county ticket. It turned out, however, that such an honor fell to Lawyer Charles L. Moffett, of this city. Mr. Moffett made quite a strong run and demonstrated himself to be an active campaigner. His general popularity with all who know him was an important factor in bringing about the result he desired.

Having passed through the election season without a scratch, it will soon be time for Plainfield to awake to the realization that the holiday season is not far off. The local merchants are more than ever prepared this winter to cater to all the needs of the Plainfield public. There is no need to go elsewhere when such excellent opportunities are presented as are constanted noted in the advertising columns of The Daily Press.

The opening of the Casino as a high-class place of amusement seems very likely to secure the best of support. It is now planned to give entertainments of a high-class there every week or so. The Casino is all right in its way, but what Plainfield really needs is an up-to-date little opera house.

The enterprise of The Daily Press in presenting to its readers the news of the election in State, county and city in readable shape was only in line with its policy to give the people of Plainfield the news accurately and impartially told.

Within the last seven days one engineer of the New Jersey Central Railroad has figured in three fatal accidents. He certainly has had more than his share of ill-luck. In none of the cases was the engineer to blame.

Association football has already proved to be a popular attraction for Plainfield audiences. This is particularly the case when Plainfield is represented by as strong a team as at present.

Now the election is over, don't forget to remind the Plainfield Water Supply Company that it is almost time to provide for the general installation of water meters.

A coat of white paint would be a valuable addition to the fence which separates the tracks at the North Avenue station.

DEATH IN DUNELLEN.

Charles Carpenter Passed Away After Residing There Twenty-Five Years

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, November 7—Charles Carpenter, a prominent citizen of this place, died at his home on Grove street, last night at midnight. Mr. Carpenter had been unwell for some time past, and last week caught a cold which developed into pneumonia to which disease he finally succumbed.

Mr. Carpenter was fifty-one years old and has lived in the borough for the last twenty-five years. Up to a few years ago he was connected with the Central Railroad of New Jersey. He was a member and a regular attendent of the Presbyterian church and an earnest christian worker. He was also secretary of the local camp of the Independent Order of Foresters, which organization will attend his funeral in a body. He leaves a widow and two sons, besides a large circle of acquaintances.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

A Court of Claims Proposed For Adjusting Differences.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 7.—Yesterday morning the pan-American congress decided to go into secret session to hear the project of the arbitration treaty proposed by the Mexican delegation. The votes against the secret session were those of Paraguay, Argentine Republic, Bolivia and Peru—4 against 15. The press representatives were compelled to vacate the hall.

After the proposed arbitration treaty had been reviewed in secret session the doors of the conference hall were again opened to hear the proposal of the Guatemala delegation for a convention for the pan-American court of claims. The proposed convention, among other things, provides that, with the object of facilitating the adjustment of controversies which the several governments participating in the convention may have been unable to settle diplomatically, the high contracting parties agree to submit to the court of claims all pending and future questions between governments of any of the participating powers and citizens of any of the other powers provided that the claimants in such cases shall not have served as enemies of the government against which the claim is brought or shall not voluntarily have aided them. It shall be obligatory to present such cases to the court for adjudication, but the claimant must first show that he has exhausted all legal resources in the tribunals of the country against which the claim is preferred when the claim is of a nature to be a proper subject for the action of these tribunals.

LI HUNG CHANG DYING.

Latest News From Peking Gives No Hope For the Earl.

PEKING, Nov. 7.—The physicians who visited Li Hung Chang late Tuesday night found him in good spirits, though extremely weak as the result of sitting up and working in defiance of their instructions. When they called yesterday morning, they found him unconscious and sinking rapidly. It was announced at noon that Li Hung Chang could hardly live three hours longer.

At 9 o'clock last evening Earl Li was still breathing and displaying unexpected vitality. The burial clothes have already been put on. The courtyard of the yamen is filled with life-size paper horses and chairs, with coolie bearers, which his friends are sending, in accordance with Chinese custom, to be buried when he dies, in order to carry his soul to heaven.

Several of the ministers of the powers have called to express sympathy.

The Chinese officials are somewhat uneasy concerning the effect his death will have on the populace, and to guard against a possible antiforeign demonstration the Chinese generals have disposed the troops about the city in such a way as to command the situation. Trouble, however, is extremely improbable.

AN ATLANTA THEATER BURNED.

Fire Discovered During a Performance—Audience Safely Dismissed.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 7.—The Lyceum theater, Atlanta's vaudeville house, has been destroyed by fire. A performance was being given when the fire broke out, but the audience was dismissed in time to prevent a panic. Fred Jones, a fireman, was rescued, badly burned, from an upper window, and Roy Danner, an electrician, was injured by a fall.

Only a portion of the wardrobes of the twelve people playing at the Lyceum this week was saved. All the scenery was burned.

R. Coley Anderson, the lessee and manager of the theater, says the loss will be about $75,000, with insurance of $45,000.

The Japs to Economize.

YOKOHAMA, Nov. 7.—The Japanese government has decided to institute economies and to effect other measures in order to offset the failure to sell bonds in the United States. The issue of exchequer bonds of the value of 10,000,000 yen has been only a partial success.

Ten Perish In Theater Fire.

DRESS NOVELTIES.

Cloth Hats—The Latest Thing In Buckles and Purses.

It is a noticeable fact that very many of the handsomest hats of the season are made of the same material as the costume with which they are to be worn.

The hat may be a Spanish turban or a toque, or one of those queer concerns which I always mentally call "stirabouts," but whatever the shape the foundation is of the same material as the costume. A toque was made to go with a suit of dark red zibeline, and all the trimming on it was a black square buckle and a black quill. One "stirabout" hat was of tan cloth, and the cloth was cut in narrow folds. These began at the center of the crown and turned round and round till the whole crown was covered. The brim was laid in folds in the same way. The trimming was a bunch of the same cloth and a plume made of black cock feathers set along each side of a stem like an ostrich feather. This was long enough to curl nearly two-thirds around the brim. These made plumes are quite fashionable, but it is curious to see so much work put on a thing which, after all, is but a clumsy imitation of the unapproachable ostrich plume.

The Spanish turban is a very becoming shape and lends itself to the flat drapery so well liked. Black velvet is one of the really elegant as well as fashionable stuffs for the foundation of all sorts of hats. The Gainsboroughs are among the favorites, but they are not so big or so flaring as formerly. Naturally they are trimmed with the black ostrich plumes to the exclusion of everything else, though some few have odds and ends of other fancies added. The toque, the three cornered hat, the Spanish turban, which is really a bolero spread out wider and flatter, and the Gainsborough in its variations are the four real foundations of all the millinery, save the little bonnets. But the small bonnets are larger than before and have so nearly the shape of the toque that one can scarcely discriminate. Many rich breasts of birds with changeable plumage, like pheasants and peacocks, are made into side plumes, and often there are two to match—one on each side, with a buckle to hold them together in the center of the front. Few flowers are to be seen this season, but many green and yellow parrots. Grebe breasts are quite well liked on the turbans. Chenille woven cloth is used for the foundation of some stylish hats, and these are always trimmed with ostrich plumes. Indeed, ostrich plumes are very much in evidence, as they should be. Nothing in trimming was ever so beautiful. All the colors are represented. A new fad is to have short tabs of velvet or some other trimming drooping nearly to the neck at the back of the hat. This caprice belongs to the Eugenie styles, which there has been such a strong effort to impose upon us poor women.

ART NOUVEAU TRIFLES.

The new skirts are not all so narrow at the top as the fashion plates would make us believe, for the majority are quite wide enough for comfortable movement, but the upper parts of the skirts do generally fit rather smoothly, while the lower part, which is most often in a shaped flounce, flares widely. The pedestrian skirt is quite as popular as ever, but where are the bicycle skirts? I begin to fear that bicycling as a fine art is going out of fashion—in favor of what? Golf, or is it automobiles? Anyhow, the walking skirts are exceptionally well designed and made, and the material of which they are composed is always in good taste.

There are very many dresses made with the square neck called pompadour, and quite as many in surplice shape. This leaves the neck covered. Many collars now lie flat and leave the neck bare, but, of course, only from the throat up. On the other hand, there are more different kinds of high collars than I have ever seen before.

As necessary adjuncts to all outdoor costumes we find such a collection of fancy leather goods and fine buckles that it becomes a duty to mention them. The purses are for the most part longer and of different shapes. Silver figures wrought in beautiful designs are set upon them. One has an elephant's head in silver, another a seated angel, another, again, has Dickens' little Marchioness, still another a lily. The new art nouveau buckles are really beautiful. The chatelaine bags are of all sorts of fine beadwork, also of different kinds of leather, such as seal, shark, snake and baby alligator skin. Chains of semiprecious stones are seen everywhere and an amount of imitation diamonds almost impossible to believe. Stars, moons, sunbursts and other designs are worn almost universally by all classes.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

"Compose yourself,' said I.

He turned a dreadful smile to me, and as if with the decision of despair, plucked away the sheet. At sight of the contents, he uttered one loud sob of such immense relief that I sat petrified. And the next moment, in a voice that was already fairly well under control, "Have you a graduated glass?" he asked.

I rose from my place with something of an effort, and gave him what he asked.

He thanked me with a smiling nod measured out a few minims of the red tincture and added one of the powders. The mixture, which was at first of a reddish hue, began, in proportion as the crystals melted, to brighten in color, to effervesce audibly, and to throw off small fumes of vapor. Suddenly and at the same moment the ebullition ceased and the compound changed to a dark purple, which faded again more slowly to a watery green. My visitor, who had watched these metamorphoses with a keen eye, smiled, set down the glass upon the table, and then turned and looked upon me with an air of scrutiny.

"And now, said he, "to settle what remains. Will you be wise? will you be guided? will you suffer me to take this glass in my hand and to go forth from your house without further parley? or has the greed of curiosity too much command of you? Think before you answer, for it shall be done as you decide. As you decide, you shall be left as you were before, and neither richer nor wiser, unless the sense of service rendered to a man in mortal distress may be counted as a kind of riches of the soul. Or, if you shall prefer to choose, a new province of knowledge and new avenues to fame and power shall be laid open to you, here, in this room, upon the instant; and your sight shall be blasted by a prodigy to stagger the unbelief of Satan."

"Sir," said I, affecting a coolness that I was far from truly possessing, "you speak enigmas, and you will, perhaps, not wonder that I hear you with no very strong impression of belief. But I have gone too far in the way of inexplicable services to pause before I see the end."

"It is well," replied my visitor. "Lanyon, you remember your vows; what follows is under the seal of our profession. And now, you who have so long been bound to the most narrow and material views, you who have denied the virtue of transcendental medicine, you who have derided your superiors—behold!"

He put the glass to his lips, and drank at one gulp. A cry followed; he reeled, staggered, clutched at the table, and held on, staring with injected eyes, gasping with open mouth; and as I looked, there came, I thought, a change; he seemed to swell; his face became suddenly black, and the features seemed to melt and alter, and the next moment I had sprung to my feet and leaped back against the wall, my arm raised to shield me from that prodigy, my mind submerged in terror.

"Oh, God!" I screamed, and "Oh, God!" again and again; for there before my eyes—pale and shaken, and half fainting, and groping before him with his hands, like a man restored from death—there stood Henry Jekyll!

What he told me the next hour I can not bring my mind to set on paper. I saw what I saw, I heard what I heard, and my soul sickened at it; and yet now, when that sight has faded from my eyes, I ask myself if I believe it, and I can not answer. My life is shaken to its roots; sleep has left me; the deadliest terror sits by me at all hours of the day and night; I feel that my days are numbered, and that I must die; and yet I shall die incredulous. As for the moral turpitude that man unveiled to me, even with tears of pentitence, I can not, even in memory, dwell on it without a start of horror. I will say but one thing, Utterson, and that—if you can bring your mind to credit it will be more than enough. The creature who crept into my house that night was, on Jekyll's own confession, known by the name of Hyde, and hunted for in every corner of the land as the murderer of Carew

HASTIE LANYON.

CHAPTER XI.

I was born in the year 18— to a large fortune, endowed besides with excellent parts, inclined by nature to industry, fond of the respect of the wise and good among my fellowmen, and thus, as might have been supposed, with every guarantee of an honorable and distinguished future. And indeed the worst of my faults was a certain impatient gayety of disposition, such as has made the happiness of many, but such as I found it hard to reconcile with my imperious desire to carry my head high, and wear a more than commonly grave countenance before the public. Hence it came about that I concealed my pleasures; and that when I reached years of reflection and began to look around me and take stock of my progress and position in the world, I stood already committed to a profound duplicity of life. Many a man would have even blazoned such irregularities as I was guilty of; but from the high views that I had set before me, I regarded and hid them with an almost morbid sense of shame. It was thus rather the exacting nature of my aspirations than any particular degradation in my faults, that made me what I was, and, with even a deeper trench than in the majority of men severed in me those provinces of good and ill which divide and compound man's dual nature. In this case, I was driven to reflect deeply and inveterately on that hard law of life which lies at the root of religion and is one of the most plentiful springs of distress. Though so profound a double-dealer I was in no sense a hypocrite; both sides of me were in dead earnest; I was no more myself when I laid aside restraint and plunged in shame than when I labored, in the eye of day, at the furtherance of knowledge or the relief of sorrow and suffering. And it chanced that the direction of my scientific studies, which led wholly toward the mystic and the transcendental reacted and shed a strong light on this consciousness of the perennial war among my members. With every day, and from both sides of my intelligence, the moral and the intellectual, I thus drew steadily nearer to that truth, by whose partial discovery I have been doomed to such a dreadful shipwreck; that man is not truely one, but truly two. I say two, because the state of my own knowledge does not pass beyond that point. Others will follow, others will outstrip me on the same lines; and I hazard the guess that man will be ultimately known for a mere polity of multifarious incongruous, and independent denizens.

I, for my part, from the nature of my life, advanced infallibly in one direction, and in one direction only. It was on the moral side, and in my own person, that I learned to recognize the thorough and primitive duality of man; I saw that of the, two natures that contended in the field of my consciousness, even if I could rightly be said to be either, it was only because I was radically both; and from an early date, even before the course of my scientic discoveries had begun to suggest the most naked possibility of such a miracle, I had learned to dwell with pleasure, as a beloved day-dream, on the thought of the separation of these elements. If each I told myself, could be houser in separate identities, life would be relieved of all that was unbearable; the unjust might go his way, delivered from the aspirations and remorse of his more unright twin; and the just could walk steadfastly and securely on his upward path, doing the good things in which he found his pleasure, and no longer exposed to disgrace and penitence by the hands of this extraneous evil. It was the curse of mankind that these incongruous fagots were thus bound together—that in the agonized womb of consciousness these polar twins should be continuously struggling. How, then, were they dissociated?

I was so far in my reflection when, as I said, a side light began to shine upon the subject from the laboratory table. I began to perceice more deeply than it has ever yet beeu stated, the trembling immaterility, the mistlike transience, of this seemly so solid body in which we walk attired. Certain agents I found to have the power to shake and to pluck back that fleshy vestment, even as a wind might toss the curtains of a pavilion. For two good reasons, I will not enter deeply into this scientific branch of my confession. First, because I have been made to learn that the doom of burden of our life is bound forever on man's shoulders, and when the attempt is made to cast it off, but returns upon us with more unfamiliar and more awful pressure. Second, because as my narrative will make, alas! too evident, my discoveries were incomplete. Enough, then, that I not only recognized my natural body for the mere aura and effulgence of certain of the powers that made up my spirit, but managed to compound a drug by which these powers should be dethroned from their supremacy, and a second form and countenance substituted, none the less natural to me because they were the expression, and bore the stamp, of the lower elements in my soul.

CHANGE IN WATCHES.

The Bull's Eye of a Century Ago and the Modern Machine-Made Timepiece.

The almost total disappearance of the old-fashioned "bull's-eye" silver watches is a source of wonderment to even some watch dealers. It is practically impossible to pick up one now among them. A Chicago Tribune reporter made the rounds of the watch, pawn and junk shops in quest of one of these old timepieces, and did not find it. One dealer said he knew where a single specimen was, but later admitted that the owner either had sold or lost it. A veteran watchmaker, who can make a watch by hand, in referring to the disappearance of the "bull's-eyes," said:

"It is only natural, I suppose, that they should disappear. None of them were first-class timepieces. I mean that the best of them would vary as much as a minute a week. The cheaper machine-made watches keep better time and cost less. The first of these old 'bull's-eyes' carried the regulation Virdge movement. One hundred years ago the Virdge watches were carried by all business men. Later the English watchmakers made 'bull's-eyes' with improvements on the Virdge movement. I haven't seen a Virdge for two or three years. As a matter of fact, those old-fashioned key-winding silver watches are worth only what the silver in the cases amounts to. The metal represents about a dollar in value. The works are worthless. Only one or two small wheels are taken out by the dealers. Sometimes they are useful in repairing family heirlooms. What are they worth? Why, nothing at all as timepieces. The best way to get one is to keep on inquiring among the grandfathers and great-uncles until you run across one, and then beg it or buy it. It is practically worthless, except as a relic."

IN FAR-OFF LABRADOR.

Fur Hunters in That Country Who Have Just Heard of the Death of Queen Victoria.

Reports are reaching civilization of the operations of the past winter in the interior and upon the coast of Labrador. The season was, generally speaking, a mild one, and the fatalities among the Indians fewer than usual, a good supply of furs was secured, but none of such peculiar value as some of those taken during the preceding winter, says the New York Sun.

The highest price paid for a single skin of last winter's catch was $300, which was for a black silver fox, the king of all the fur-bearing animals of Labrador. Exactly double that amount was paid for a skin of the same variety, a very noble specimen, about a year ago. Prices in general are scarcely so good at present as they were this time last year.

Marten skins, which have brought as much as $25 a skin, sold this spring for from $15 to $18. Traders are especially proud of the otters and minks which they obtain from Labrador, which have fur of a peculiar fineness and luster.

The hunters from the interior of Labrador had not heard of the death of Queen Victoria until they emerged from the woods a few days ago. No mail matter can reach them during the winter. Even the residents along the coast had only six mails from autumn till spring, and these had to be conveyed over the snow by dogs, on sleighs, for want of proper roads and other means of conveyance.

CALIFORNIA ORANGES.

Vast Improvement Noted in the Fruit —Effects of the Freeze in Florida.

Everybody who eats them has probably noticed that New York's supply of California oranges has never before been so plentiful and cheap and good as now. You can get big, sweet, juicy navel oranges as low as two for a nickel, says the Sun.

Florida oranges have practically been out of the market since the big freeze in the fall of 1897. They will find things somewhat changed when they get back. A few years ago the superiority of the Florida orange, particularly the Indian river product, was unquestioned. The California orange was coarse-grained, less juicy than the Floridas, deficient in flavor and full of a stringy pulp that was both disagreeable to the eater and hard upon the digestion.

But a wonderful improvement has been made within a comparatively short time. The California orange today is still coarse-grained and still lacks some of the delicate flavor of the Florida or the Messina fruit, but its flavor has been vastly improved, it is brimming with juice and the tough fiber in the best grade of oranges has almost entirely disappeared.

It is not generally known that this horticultural device for doing away with the seeds in the ripened fruit was introduced in this country by an observant American woman who called the attention of the department of agriculture to it. This woman, while traveling in the province of Bahia, Brazil, in 1868, observed that the oranges of that province were much superior to those raised in the United States, and seedless as well. She communicated with the commissioner of agriculture, and as a result 12 young plants were sent from Brazil to Washington.

QUEER WAX CROP.

Insects in China That Produce a Valuable Commodity in a Curious Manner.

The white wax crop exported from China is made by the curious method of using minute insects in its production. These insects are found in brown, pea-shaped excrescences or galls attached to an evergreen tree called the "insect tree." The galls are gathered in May and carried in headlong flight to the market towns by bearers, who travel at night, so that the heat may not force the insects to emerge during the journey, says a London exchange.

They are then placed in a "wax tree," which is a stump varying from three to twelve feet in height, with numerous branches rising from the top, similar to the pollard willow.

The wax insects are made into small packets of 20 or 30 galls, which are inclosed in a leaf of the wood oil tree, fastened together with rice straw. These packets are suspended close to the branches under which they hang. On emerging from the galls the insects creep rapidly up the branches, to which they attache themselves, and begin forming a wax that in about three months attains a thickness of almost a quarter of an inch.

The branches are then cut off, and after removing as much of the wax as possible by hand they are put in a kettle of hot water, when the remaining wax floats on the surface, and the insects finish their usefulness by going to the bottom.

JAPAN'S IMPREGNABILITY.

Bold Crags and Bluffs of the Seacoast Are Protected by the Most Modern Guns.

The coast of Japan, notwithstanding its long shore line and numerous harbors, offers scant allurement to an invading army. There is very little beach; the bold crags and bluffs overlooking every spot where a modern war vessel can ride at anchor are protected by strong fortifications defended by the most modern guns.

Yeddo bay, the most feasible bight for invading purposes, needs careful navigation, even by steamers of moderate draught. When torpedoes are planted it is simply impregnable, says a writer in Collier's Weekly. When the war with China broke out a small steamer was selected to pilot merchant steamers up and down the bay. I remember perfectly the unexpected curves made by this steamer, showing plainly the countless dangers besetting a hostile fleet, regardless of the care that may be used in feeling its way. No invading army could possibly land; and even if it succeeded in doing so, the rice fields, readily submerged as they are, would aid materially in thwarting the advance and in isolating the enemy. A successful invasion of Japan is simply impossible.

Bricks from Coke Ashes.

A European scientific journal reports that the coke ashes of gas works are now manufactured into bricks resembling pressed brick, but considerably harder than the latter. Heretofore these ashes were looked upon as absolute waste, and were often piled up on land which might have been profitably cultivated, so that the innovation is doubly profitable. The manufacture of coke ash brick is a very simple one. The ashes are carefully reduced to a fine powder, mixed with one-tenth part of slaked lime, and, after the addition of water, kneaded until the mass forms a stiff paste. Then it is treated like ordinary clay and formed into bricks by the use of suitable presses.

'TWAS A MISTAKE.

Samuel McGoldrick Appeared in City Court Two Days in Succession—Now He's in Jail.

When Samuel McGoldrick, of West Fourth street, was arraigned before City Judge Runyon, yesterday morning, on a charge of drunkenness, he begged to be released and promised faithfully he would not touch liquor again for a long time. Sentence was suspended on him.

Less than six hours afterward he was returned by Patrolman Saffron, who found him in a state of complete paralysis on East Second street. In addition to his load of the amber fluid he had a gash in his forehead which required the services of Dr. Long and four of his skillful stitches.

When he was arraigned this morning, he had no no other excuse but that he didn't mean to get drunk. He was given a lecture by the Court which would have made the most degraded man feel ashamed of himself, after which he was sent to Elizabeth for forty days in default of a $10 fine.

A LOAD ABOARD.

That Was Why David McCleren Wouldn't Answer Policeman's Questions.

Returning from a visit with relatives at Three Bridges with a load of Hunterdon apple juice aboard, D. McCleren, of this city, fell asleep and was carried through to Fanwood. The juice of the apples made him somewhat surly and when he met Patrolman Meyers on South avenue, at midnight, last night, he refused to answer the questions put to him by that officer He was taken into custody.

This morning his employer vouched for him and he was allowed to go after being warned to respond to a policeman when questioned at midnight.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scrogg of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

Japanese Missionary Here.

Mrs. J. D. Schenck, missionary to Japan, who was granted a leave of absence on account of ill health, and who spent several months at Clifton Springs, N. Y., is now visiting at the home of her brother-in law, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, on West Front street. Her condition is greatly improved and she will return to her field of labor in Japan as soon as her health permits.

History Repeats Itself.

An interesting picture is to be seen in the window at J. Hervey Doane's jewelry store on Park avenue. It represents the funeral procession of the members of Tammany Hall November 10, 1836, when that organization was ousted from power in New York city. A study of the picture reveals many interesting facts quite appropriate to the last election in New York city.

TO AID SCHOOL ATHLETES.

ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN SOMERSET STREET SCHOOL.

Chief Attraction Was John Miller, a Witty Man—Musical Selections and Recitations Given.

Mirth of a degree unlimited made the entertainment given last evening under the auspices of the North Plainfield High School Athletic Association at the Somerset street school building an enjoyable one. The affair was the first of a series to be given for the benefit of the association and the initial number proved to be successful in every way.

The assembly hall was crowded when Miss Alberta Waterbury and Miss Clara VanFleet played the Grand March from "Tannhauser" as a piano duet, which was followed by a recitation entitled "The Legend Beautiful," by Miss Alice Martin. With these as an introductory John Miller, the witty man, started in to make the audience laugh and he found no difficulty in doing so. He was the star attraction of the evening and received unstinted and well merited applause. "Ten Minutes of Fun" did not suffice for the audience and it was necessary for him to tell about the proverbial woman and the mouse in a humorous way.

Miss Winifred Carroll and Miss Bessie Martin sang a vocal duet and then it was time for Mr. Miller to do another turn consisting of impersonations of "My Feller," as related by an old maid, and "Simple Simon," who was indeed simple. A selected solo by Miss Winifred Carroll and a recitation entitled "The Legend of Bregenz," by Miss Ursula Krewson, preceded a number of monologue selections which furnished evidence of the ability of Mr. Miller.

"Wynken, Blynken and Nod," sung as a quartette selection by the Misses Winifred Carroll, Bessie Martin, Arthur Smith and Horace Martin, Jr., wound up the programme with the exception of a final number entitled "Wing Lee on Women Stories," by Mr. Miller. His impersonation of a Chinaman was particularly clever.

The next entertainment will be given by the Rutgers Glee Club, which has been engaged for the evening of January 31.

QUEEN CITY'S BIRTHDAY.

Tenth Anniversary Will be Well Celebrated in a Short Time by the Members.

Robert Humphrey and J. B. Higgins, part of the committee having in charge the arrangements for the tenth anniversary celebration of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., are preparing an excellent programme which promises to eclipse anything in this line given by a local organization. In addition to the best home talent obtainable, a number of artists in the professional ranks from out of town will contribute to the entertainment.

Invitations for the anniversary are now being distributed and there will be a large number of the members' friends in attendance. Monday evening is the time set for the affair.

WANT SEWERS FIRST.

Ask That Spooner Avenue Have Sewer Before Pavement Is Laid.

Now that it appears possible that Spooner avenue is to be placed in good condition the property owners are clamoring for an extension of the sanitary sewer before the permanent pavement is laid. They will in all probability petition the Council to take the matter in hand. This street, although already well built up, is constantly having new homes erected on it and the sewer is becoming more and more needed.

CENTRAL SHOPS WILL SOON BE COMPLETED.

Largest Car Shops in the World Now in Course of Construction at Elizabeth.

DESCRIPTION OF BUILDINGS.

THE BIGGEST THING THERE WILL BE THE MONSTER ROUNDHOUSE.

Details of Some of the Big Structures Which are Owned by The New Jersey Central Railroad—The New Cement Construction.

The largest car shops in the world are now in the course of construction at Elizabethport. They are the property of the New Jersey Central Railroad and eclipse any shops in existence. Large forces of men have been working on the buildings for months past and before a great while they will be ready for occupancy. Cement construction is being used throughout and the experiment is being watched by all the building engineers in the country.

The main building, which is nearing completion, is the machine shop, and it will be one of the largest and absolutely the best equipped railroad machine shop on this continent, as it will contain nothing but the most improved machinery. It is a one-story building of concrete, brick and steel construction, and is 720 feet in length, 160 feet wide and 50 feet high, with three courses of big windows and a lantern top. The base of the walls consists of wide spreading tapered foundation walls of concrete and expanded metal, and a strongly buttressed wall of concrete rises six or seven feet above the level of the meadow, with the brick walls superimposed.

The roof is supported by round columns, and is built of steel, with a covering of pine and a coating of paper, tar and gravel. The floor of the machine shop between the tracks will be laid with three-inch square yellow pine, directly upon the pounded concrete. Traversing the building under the floor from end to end is a watertight concrete tunnel, six feet in height, to carry all of the pipes and wires from the power-house. In the machine shop are seven Shaw electric traveling cranes, running upon overhead ways the width of each open space. Two of these will each carry fifty tons, four are of thirty-five tons capacity and another in the riveting tower at the northeast corner of the building will raise and handle thirty-five tons.

Running in front of the machine shop and the blacksmith shop is the largest and heaviest transfer table in this State. It is built of concrete, and the transfer platform will run upon T rails weighing 100 pounds to the yard, resting upon heavy concrete bases. The transfer table is constructed to move locomotives and cars sideways from one point to the other, connecting with the tracks laid into the big shop. It will be operated by electricity as will every machine in the shops. The blacksmithing shop is built entirely of concrete and expanded metal, and is one-story high, with floor dimensions of 300x60 feet. It stands a few yards north of the machine shop.

Back of the blacksmith shop and northeast of the machine shop is the power-house, which is the most elaborate attempt at the construction of a concrete building in point of ornamentation. The walls of this structure are built of concrete, only four inches in thickness, except on the north side, where twelve-inch walls have been built to carry coal cars, which will dump their hoppers through holes in the concrete roof into a series of rooms facing the boilers. There will be a number of big batteries of Babcock & Wilcox boilers in this house, separated by a large room, in which the direct-connected engines and dynamos will be installed to supply power for the turntables, transfer tables, air compressors and machine tools.

The biggest thing on the grounds will be the roundhouse which is planned to enclose a fuel circle of over 1,200 feet, but at present will stop at half a circle with twenty five pits, each long enough to stable three engines, making a shelter for seventy-five engines in all, with an enormous turntable, working in a concrete well in the centre of the projected circle. The big steel turntable, built by the Phœnix Iron Works, is so nicely balanced upon its roller bearing pivot that a man can move it with his foot. It will be operated by an electric motor.

WHY CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IS ONLY A DELUSION

Rev. Dr. Buckley Lectured on That Subject at First M. E. Church Last Night.

REFERRED TO LIKE BELIEFS.

SAID THAT RELIGIOUS ELEMENT WAS ALL THAT KEPT IT GOING.

Dr. Buckley is Editor of The Christian Advocate, and For Over Forty Years Made a Study of Christian Science.

That many people are interested in the subject of Christian Science was clearly evidenced last evening, when a large number gathered at the First M. E. church to hear Dr. James M. Buckley lecture on "Christian Science—a Delusion." Dr. Buckley, who lives at Morristown, is editor of the New York Christian Advocate, and he has for over forty years made a study of the various kinds of religion that are allied to Christian Science. He was introduced by Rev. Dr. Whitney, of this city. Previous to the lecture, Miss Jessie Utter rendered several selections on the organ.

It was Dr. Buckley's purpose to show that spiritualism, Mormonism, mesmerism, metaphysical healing, Christian Science and other similar beliefs are delusions, pure and simple. He said that he had studied the practice and theories of the exponents of these forms of worship and learned conclusively that there is nothing in them. He related an incident about a German who was converted to Mormonism. He travelled from his home to Utah, where he was met by Brigham Young, who made him believe that a lost leg could be found and put in place, but that he might be subject to the discomfiture of having three legs after he died.

Dr. Buckley, while in London, called at a place where it was claimed hair could be made to grow on bald heads, and the doctor made the proprietor admit that hair falls out because it won't stay in, although his theory was that it was due to a disease which could be cured. Dr. Buckley spoke of pneumonia, pulmonary consumption, typhoid fever, and the treatment of the same. He believed that in each case it is proper to have a good nurse and a wise doctor.

He said that Christian Science would never have existed had it not embraced a religious sentiment. He thought it would be short-lived, only to be supplanted by another delusion. He spoke of the eclipse, trade winds, tide, gravitation and electricity as being true and sure, but that there is nothing in the various theories advanced. He said he knew a woman who did not want her daughter to study physiology, because she did not want her to know what was inside of her. He also knew a woman who would not kiss her own child for fear of microbes. He said that he sympathized with the Irishman who said that he would as soon be a morgue as an aquarian.

In conclusion, Dr. Buckley spoke directly concerning Christian Science and its chief exponent, Mrs. Eddy. He said that the principal theory is that people are not here nor there, but immaterial. He affirmed that the followers of the belief would die one by one, and another form of superstition would take its place. He urged all to have a simple faith in God, and put no faith in the superstitious forms of religion now prevalent.

Major Pond's Opinion.

Major J. B. Pond, whose experience and opinion is well known, says of Charles Battell Loomis and Miss Sally Frothingham Akers, with her "Singing Girls," whom he will have the pleasure to present at the Casino next Thursday night, that they are "the best I ever handled. They seemingly have achieved great success, and their entertainment is said to be one of much merit." Reserved seat tickets will be on sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Saturday.

GUESTS GATHERED AND BROUGHT MANY THINGS.

Very Successful Harvest Home Was Given at Muhlenberg Hospital Yesterday.

HELD IN THE NURSES' HOME.

ROOMS WERE PRETTILY DECORATED FOR THE OCCASION.

School Donations Were Late in Arriving—There Was Also a General Offering From Friends in All Quarters.

The annual harvest home at Muhlenberg Hospital was held in the Nurses' Home yesterday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock, and like other similar occasions it was a great success. The people have in times past been generous in their support of the worthy institution and this year was no exception to the rule. From the richest to the poorest, donations were received, comprising a varied list of useful things that will fill the hospital larder much to the satisfaction of those in charge.

Not only from private individuals and other admirers of the hospital, but from the public schools, there were donations. Through some misunderstanding the donations from the schools did not arrive until yesterday afternoon and much inconvenience was caused the assistants at the hospital, who were obliged to carry the various articles in while the Nurses' Home was crowded with guests. During the past two days donations were received from all parts of the city and the borough, showing that not one of the many friends of the hospital had forgotten the institution. The donations included fruits, jellies, vegetables, flour, coal, linen, potatoes, cereals, etc.

The rooms in the Nurses' Home were appropriately and attractively decorated by Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, a faithful and earnest supporter of the hospital. The decorations consisted of cornstalks, pampas grass, corn, beets, pumpkins, turnips and other products of the field. They were all arranged about the rooms where they would show to the best advantage.

During the afternoon tea was served by members of the Woman's Auxiliary Board. Those who presided at the table were Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Thomas Minford, Mrs. Daniel Ginna, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. Chas. Schwed, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke. Among the other members of the Auxiliary who assisted in receiving were Miss Elizabeth Cook, president; Miss J. M. Van Buren, Miss Emilie Schipper, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. Josephine Lapsley, Mrs. B. M. Stover, Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, Mrs. F. W. Butler, Mrs. Hugh Hastings, Mrs. Edward Love, Mrs. Edgar S. Hyatt, Mrs. A. M. Wilcox and Miss Walduck.

During the afternoon the Home was thronged with people, and nearly all brought a donation. Most all of the physicians in the city and the borough were present, while the occasion afforded an opportunity for the graduate nurses to meet and renew their acquaintance not only among themselves, but with their many friends who help to support the hospital. Although the event was a great success in every respect, and those in charge of the hospital are grateful for the generous response to the invitation sent out.

POOR CONDITION.

Combination of Events Has Compelled Street Department to do More Work.

The continued dry weather, the heavy teaming and the laying of water and gas mains all combined, have left West Front street, below Grant avenue, in a very poor condition. No repair work has been done to it in some time but the street committee, of the Common Council has taken the matter in hand and will have it in first class shape before cold weather sets in. Street Commissioner Gavett will commence the work as soon as matters can be arranged.

A Fine Residence.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane has issued a permit to Mrs. A. D. Thompson for the construction of a frame dwelling on West Seventh street, near Hobart avenue. The cost of construction is estimated at $10,00. Oakley & Son are the architects. Seaman Williams will do the mason work and J. Manning & Son have the contract for the carpentry.

He was discovered in a Front street hallway at midnight by Patrolman Vanderweg who took home to police headquarters. This morning he tearfully promised City Judge Runyon he would go home and submit to punishment when he deserved it.

Elaborate Plans for Big Time to be Given by Members of St. Joseph's Church Next Week.

Under the auspices of the members of St. Joseph's church a bazaar and entertainment will be given in Saengerbund Hall Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings. For some time past the affair has been in preparation and the parishioners will bend all their energies to make it a success. In charge of the entertainment will be Miss Mine E. M. Bartlett.

The principal feature on the programme will be a sketch entitled "A Japanese Tea Party." The chief character is the Mikado who is a victim of spurned love, but who succeeds in making the scene ridiculous throughout. Vaudeville attractions are introduced in the play, drills, songs, dances and recitations being among them. Some of the vaudeville parts promise to receive applause. Grecian and Delsarte movements will also form part of the bill.

In the bazaar almost everything of useful and fancy natures will be on sale and refreshments will not be neglected.

MILLS CHARGED WITH HAVING TWO WIVES.

His Borough Wife Has Had Him Arrested on the Charge of Bigamy.

WERE WEDDED THIS YEAR.

ALLEGED THAT HE HAD MARRIED NEWARK GIRL THREE YEARS AGO.

Could Not Give Bail and Held For Hearing Before Justice Smalley This Evening—J. W. Mills is a Blacksmith.

James W. Mills, a blacksmith, whose place of residence is quite uncertain, is confined in the borough lockup awaiting a hearing on the charge of bigamy. He is a man not over thirty-five. It is alleged that in the space of three years he has taken unto himself two wives in a manner forbidden by the law.

As the story runs, some three years ago Mills married Miss Mamie Donovan, a Newark girl, and they lived together for a short period. His love apparently grew cold, for it is said that last fall he started to court Miss Minnie H. W. Fries, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fries, of Whitewood avenue. The affair led to a marriage ceremony which took place, it is alleged, Jan. 13 of this year.

Mills and his wife No. 2, lived together in the borough for at least six months, the latter it is said having no knowledge of the legal status of her husband. Early in the fall, it is claimed, Mills saw fit to desert his second spouse and recently it was discovered by Mrs. Mills No. 2, that there was another woman claiming to possess the right and title of wife to James W. Mills. The result of the matter was that Mrs. Katherine Mills, the mother of wife No. 2, consulted Counsellor James P. Powers, of Elizabeth, and Wednesday, on his advice, she procured a warrant for the arrest of Mills, charging him with bigamy.

Constable Pangborn took Mills in custody while the latter was at work yesterday in the shop of W. T. Kirk, of East Fourth street. Last evening the prisoner was taken before Justice D. D. Smalley and given an opportunity to furnish $500 bail. This he was unable to do.

This evening the formal preliminary hearing will take place in the Borough court room before Justice Smalley. It is said that Mills made the remark since his arrest that he supposed that Mrs. Mills No. 1, was dead or had gone away, and therefore, he thought he could marry another woman.

GERMANS IN SESSION.

Gesang and Turn Verein Met and Arranged For Opening of Enlarged Hall.

The regular monthly meeting of the Gesang and Turn Verein was held last evening and the matter of the formal opening of the new Saengerbund Hall, which takes place Monday evening, Nov. 18, was discussed at some length. Arrangements were made for the proper decoration of the interior and exterior of the hall for that occasion.

A programme committee has been appointed and it will meet Sunday afternoon in the hall, when final plans will be made. The society accepted an invitation from the Liberty Singing Society, of Elizabeth, to attend a celebration to be held Thanksgiving evening.

FATAL FLAMES.

Little Elizabeth Forrestel Could Not Survive Her Injuries and Died Yesterday Noon.

Unable to survive the terrible burns she received Election Day, Elizabeth May Forristel, the little daughter of James Forristell, of Randolph road, passed away yesterday noon. She was burned over four-fifths of her entire body and lingered until the end in agonizing pain. But for the heroic action of Letter-carrier Robert Loughlin, who beat out the flames, her death would have followed a few moments after the accident.

The funeral services will be held from her parents' home this afternoon and will be private. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Lost His Mind Somewhere.

George Evans, who claimed to live in Westfield, was arrested on East Front street last evening for begging. He told City Judge Runyon this morning that he must have been out of his mind, as he didn't remember doing it. Sentence was suspended.

LITERARY.

The Century's promised series on the Great West will begin in the November number with a paper by E. Hough, author of "The Story of the Cowboy," on "The Settlement of the West: A Study in Transportation." Mr. Hough shows how the course of empire, in the early days, moving ever westward, followed the pathway of the waters. "It was a day of raft and boat, of saddle-horse and packhorse, of ax and rifle, and little other luggage." The article is illustrated with full-page and smaller drawings by Remington, printed in tint, and with portraits, maps, etc.

The publishers of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly are celebrating the twenty-fifth birthday of their magazine by issuing an extraordinarily large and handsome number. The magazine, which consists of 168 pages, is profusely illustrated, no single page being left without a decoration of some kind, while scattered through the issue are several handsome full pages in colors. The text has a number of really notable features; an authoritative article by Nansen, on the half-dozen expeditions now racing for the Poles, the opening chapters of a new novel by Maurice Hewlett, the first considerable work he has done since the publication of "Richard Yea and Nay," a new animal story by Charles G. D. Roberts, author of "In the Heart of the Ancient Wood," "How Tammany Wins," written curiously enough, by an outspoken spoilsman, "The Great Automobile Race from Paris to Berlin," and "The American Diary of a Japanese Girl," a wonderfully naive and spontaneous narrative which makes a brand new departure in magazine literature. The number is sold at the usual price of 10 cents.

Modern Surgery Surpassed.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, "says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unnecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Astamalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

Rev. Dr. Morris Wechsler,
Rabbi of the Cong. Bnai Israel.
NEW YORK, Jan. 3, 1901.

DRS. TAFT BROS'. MEDICINE CO.,
Gentlemen: Your Asthmalene is an excellent remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever, and its composition alleviates all troubles which combine with Asthma. Its success is astonishing and wonderful.

AVON SPRINGS, N. Y., February 7, 1901.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.
Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 130th street, New York, I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the first of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her Asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease.
Yours respectfully, O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO. February 5, 1901.

LI HUNG CHANG DEAD

Peaceful End of the Great Man of China.

THE FAMOUS COFFIN USED AT LAST.

Strange Heathen Preparations For Transportation of His Soul to Heaven—Career of China's Great Statesman.

PEKING, Nov. 8.—The end of Li Hung Chang, which occurred at 11 a. m. yesterday, was quiet. His vitality slowly ebbed. For a time he lost consciousness, but he showed great tenacity, rallied at midnight, became semiconscious, partook of nourishment and appeared to recognize his relatives.

The flames of the procession of paper effigies, chairs, horses and bearers burned in the courtyard of the yamen to carry his spirit to heaven told the crowd of officials who were gathered in the narrow street outside the yamen that the end had come. Soon afterward a procession appeared bearing a costly coffin of teakwood beautifully lacquered. This coffin Li Hung Chang took on his trip around the world, and he brought it from Canton when he came to Peking to settle the Boxer troubles. Since that time it had been kept in a temple here.

The body was placed in the coffin this morning with the customary rites. On Sunday there will be a ceremonial corresponding to a lying in state, and all the Chinese officials will pay their respects. A separate day will be designated for the ministers of the powers.

The interment will be at the birthplace of the deceased statesman, a little village in the province of Anhui. The time has not yet been decided upon.

A memorial was telegraphed to the court announcing his death and a circular letter sent to the ministers of the powers.

LI HUNG CHANG.

There are no signs of mourning in the city, although the populace is considerably excited. The ministers of the powers consider Yuan Shi Kai the strongest man in China after Li Hung Chang, and they think his presence here would have a good influence on the court, but they fear the rank of a marquis, which title will descend to his eldest son.

The ministers of the powers are personally sending messages of sympathy. The first letter received at the Chinese foreign office came yesterday morning from Mr. Conger, the United States minister, saying that Secretary Hay had instructed him to tender the regrets of President Roosevelt and the United States government at the imminent death of the great viceroy.

The death of Li Hung Chang is doubly regretted because he was the only influential Chinaman who could deal with foreign governments with an appreciation of the foreign point of view.

Li Hung Chang, whose many sided characteristics won for him the various appellations of "the Talleyrand of Asia," the "Machiavelli of Chinese diplomacy" and the "Grand Old Man of China," was in all respects the most remarkable product of the peculiar civilization of his country. Three thousand years of darkness followed Confucius. Then Li Hung Chang came into being, and through him the regeneration of China was effected, and it became more to the occidental understanding than a mere blur of queer people and quaint customs.

The viceroy was born in 1822, the same year that saw the birth of General Grant, a fact to which the Chinaman often referred with singular pride. Next to "Chinese" Gordon he regarded General Grant as the greatest man that ever lived outside of China. When he was in the United States in 1896, Earl Li reverently and affectionately planted the two small trees that may still be seen on the north lawn of Grant's tomb on Riverside drive, and he never lost an opportunity to pay a tribute to his friend.

Although he began with neither fortune nor influence, Li Hung Chang accumulated during the vicissitudes of his official career a fortune estimated at about $400,000,000. Through every turn of fate he managed to hold on to his wealth. Repeatedly stripped of his honors and the double eyed peacock feather and yellow jacket that denoted that he was of the highest rank in the kingdom, he accepted his humiliations with true Confucian philosophy and calmly waited, knowing that ere long China would need him in an hour of trouble.

So often was he stripped of his rank and restored to power when the kingdom was endangered and his steady hand was needed at the helm of the ship of state that his name is inseparably linked with every crisis in the kingdom. As a matter of fact, since he entered public life in his youth Li Hung Chang indelibly stamped the impress of his personal character on China.

BREAK FOR LIBERTY

Mutiny of Convicts at Leavenworth Penitentiary.

PRISON GUARDS ARE SHOT DOWN.

Twenty-six Government Prisoners Make a Daring Escape and In Their Flight Seize Clothing and Horses.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 8.—One man was killed, three others dangerously wounded and twenty-six convicts are at large as a result of a mutiny late yesterday afternoon at the site of the new United States prison, two miles southeast of here, where 400 prisoners from the federal prison, in charge of thirty armed guards, were at work.

When the trouble began, the rebellious prisoners had only two revolvers. These had been secreted in one of the walls of the building by some unknown person. Two walls are partly completed, and the remainder of the site of the building is surrounded by a high wooden stockade. Gus Parker of Ardmore, I. T., one of the ringleaders of the mutiny, under pretense of a necessity, walked to the corner of the stockade where the revolvers were concealed and under cover of some weeds secured them without being detected. He returned to the gang and passed one of the revolvers to Frank Thompson, a negro from South McAlester, I. T., who secreted it about his person.

When T. E. Hinds, superintendent of construction, and three armed guards prepared to round up the men at the end of the day's work, the two armed convicts covered them with the revolvers and, encouraged by the other mutinous convicts, forced the men to walk before them to the northwestern corner of the stockade, where they expected to make a rush through the opening. On the ouside of the stockade was an armed guard, and the convicts were met at the opening by C. E. Burrows, a guard, who fought them back, but who received two shots in the neck.

The convicts then rushed over to the south wall to another opening and were met by Arthur Treelford, an armed guard, who is in charge of all the convicts. Treelford resisted the convicts and was shot twice, but not dangerously wounded. Defeated in their attempt to escape at this point, the men rushed to the guardhouse, a temporary structure, where the arms are kept.

The guards from the outside rushed in at this point and drove the convicts away from the guardhouse. J. P. Waldrupe, a guard, shot and killed Ford Quinn, from Ryan, I. T. The prisoners then made a grand rush for the main entrance, and twenty-six of them succeeded in escaping. Most of the escaped men are from Indian Territory. Closely followed by the guards, the men ran to a nearby forest and succeeded in evading their pursuers.

The men went in the direction of Easton, Kan., and it is reported here that they have held up many farmers, taking horses and clothing.

The convicts in their flight compelled F. E. Hinds, superintendent of construction, to go with them, and he was not allowed to return until they had gone almost two miles. W. F. Peaslee, one of the fugitives, who has only fifteen months more to serve, deserted the band a few moments after Superintendent Hinds was released. The two men reached here almost simultaneously. They reported that the fugitives after holding a consultation decided that they would form themselves into several small parties, so that some might escape though others should be captured. It is the intention of all to attempt to reach the rough country southeast of here.

Twenty-four members of the Fourth cavalry hastened to the scene of trouble, but when they arrived the convicts had escaped, and the soldiers could not participate in the chase without orders from their superior.

Forty armed guards from the federal prison are in pursuit of the fugitives.

Delegates to the congress, which will continue through to Wednesday next, will include men who have attained great prominence because of their work in the cause of prison reform.

Diamond Brooch Stolen.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Mrs. William S. Cowles, wife of Commander Cowles of the navy and sister of President Roosevelt, was robbed of or lost about ten days ago a diamond brooch valued at about $5,000. It is believed that the loss occurred during Mrs. Cowles' recent trip to New England, and detectives of several cities through which she passed are working on the case.

The Jear's Seal Catch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—Not including the comparatively few fur sealskins which were brought directly to this port, the total catch in the north this season was 24,127. The Bering sea catch was 10,314, the Copper island catch 3,838, the coast catch 8,985 and the approximate Indian catch 1,000 skins. The world's catch for this season is approximately 54,000 skins.

NORTHWESTERN RAILROADS.

Evidence of a Settlement of Troubles Has Leaked Out.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The Times says today:

"The first tangible evidence of the settlement of the northwestern railroad situation became known yesterday, when it leaked out that E. H. Harriman, James Stillman, Jacob H. Schiff, Norman B. Ream, Robert Bacon and H. McK. Twombly had been elected into the board of directors of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad at the stockholders annual meeting held in Chicago last week. An attempt was made to withhold the names of the directors elected at this meeting until the adjourned meeting of the board, to be held next Thursday.

"All the various interests are represented in the list given. E. H. Harriman and Jacob H. Schiff represent the Union Pacific interests.

"James Stillman is generally supposed to represent the interests of the Rockefellers, who are closely identified with the Harriman syndicate. Norman B. Ream represents the interests of James J. Hill and the Great Northern railroad. Robert Bacon is a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. H. McK. Twombly is the personal representative of W. K. Vanderbilt and as such of the Vanderbilt interests in the Chicago and Northwestern."

Close Election In Maryland.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8.—The supervisors of election in the various counties of the state commenced yesterday at noon the official canvass of the vote cast last Tuesday, and until it is finished no positive figures can be given as to the complexion of the next legislature. It will require two and perhaps three days to complete the count in Baltimore city, but enough is known to make it certain, in the absence of unexpected changes in the official count, that the Democrats will control both branches of the legislature. It will also require the official vote to decide the fate of the state ticket, and the present indications are that neither of the successful candidaes will have a majority of 1,000, the indications pointing to the election of Hering (Dem.) for comptroller and Parran (Rep.) for clerk of the court of appeals.

The President's Callers.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Four Republican members of the ways and means committee of the house, Messrs. Payne of New York, Russell of Connecticut, Grosvernor of Ohio and Steele of Indiana, were at the White House yesterday afternoon in conference with the president. They were extremely reticent regarding the interview, and each asserted that he came to Washington on some business connected with the departments. It was learned, however, that the president discussed with them some features of his forthcoming message which relate to the revenues and to the tariff. Many of the Republican members of the ways and means committee already have expressed themselves as opposed to any revision of the tariff at the coming session of congress.

New Western Railroad Projected.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 8.—The Oklahoma, Texas and Gulf railway, to run from Kingfisher, via Oklahoma City and Coalgate, I. T., to Paris, Tex., has been incorporated here by Alfred T. Yerkes of Chicago, Harold Berry of New York, assistant counsel of the New York Central, and local capitalists. Mr. Yerkes is a consin of Charles T. Yerkes of Chicago and London, and Mr. Berry is a relative of William C. Whitney of New York. It is said Mr. Whitney and Alfred Vanderbilt will furnish the money to construct the road. The road will run a distance of 180 miles. Kingfisher, the northern terminus, is situated in the center of the Oklahoma-Indian territory country, and Paris is in the northwestern corner of Texas.

Fatal Lamp Explosion.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 8.—Mrs. Guy Pimbell of Norwalk early last evening attempted to replenish the oil in a lighted lamp, and an explosion resulted, which scattered the oil in all directions. Mrs. Pimbell and her three children were covered with the burning liquid, and two of them, Rose, aged eight years, and Louis, aged five, were burned to death before assistance arrived. The mother and another daughter, Catherine, were also terribly burned and were removed to the Norwalk hospital, where it was stated that neither would live.

Miller's Lawyer Arrested.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Robert A. Ammon, counsel for William F. Miller, head of the defunct Franklin syndicate, which promised 520 per cent interest to all who invested with it and which failed owing something in excess of $1,000,000, was arrested during the progress of the hearing to determine what had become of the money. He was taken into custody by two central office detectives, McConville and Savage. The charge against Ammon is said to be the receiving of stolen goods.

Close Vote In Ulster County.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Two votes will determine the control of the next board of supervisors of Ulster county. The Republicans and Democrats claim the election of one city supervisor by two plurality. The successful candidate will decide whether the board is Democratic or Republican. Whatever may be the decision of the city board of canvassers, the unsuccessful candidate says he will obtain a mandamus for a recount.

Death From Bubonic Plague.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 8.—A seven-year-old child suffering from the bubonic plague, who was isolated a fortnight ago, is dead of exhaustion. The other patients under treatment here are out of danger.

SCHLEY COURT ENDED

Judge Advocate Lemly Makes Closing Argument.

THE INQUIRY LASTED FORTY DAYS.

"No Signs of Cowardice or Personal Misconduct" Claimed, but Lack of Push and Unsteadiness of Purpose.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—After sittings covering forty days and with a record which when completed will cover about 2,000 pages the Schley court of inquiry yesterday at 3:45 p. m. adjourned its last public session. To Captain S. C. Lemly, the judge advocate had been assigned the duty of making the closing argument in the case, and soon after he had completed his speech Admiral Dewey, bringing his gave down upon the big flat table, said, "There being no further business the court is adjourned."

As was the case Wednesday when Mr. Rayner spoke, the attendance was large. There was only one session during the day. It began at 2 o'clock, and the entire time was devoted to Captain Lemly's address. He read his speech in clear and distinct tones and was given careful attention. The speech in the main was an analysis of testimony, but occasionally a conclusion was drawn and frequently there was criticism of the course pursued by Schley. Speaking of his conduct, Captain Lemly said:

"From my knowledge of the man having served under his command on two cruises, I have never believed, nor do I claim from the evidence, that personal misconduct—or, to call a spade a spade, cowardice—was exhibited by Commodore Schley in any part of his career as commander in chief of the flying squadron. But I submit with regret that in the passage from Key West to Cienfuegos, while at the latter port, en route to the southward of Santiago without settled destination in the retrograde movement, in the return to the vicinity of Santiago and in the affair of May 31 the commodore exhibited unsteadiness in purpose and in push and failure to obey orders."

This statement was made toward the close of Captain Lemly's remarks. After adjournment the members of the court, Admiral Schley and counsel lingered for a time about the hall in which they have recently spent so much of their time, and there were many affectionate words of farewell spoken. Admiral Schley, as usual, was called upon to receive the greetings of a number of admirers, and a hundred or more people waited at the door of the building to bid him adieu.

Silver Service For Schley.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Admiral Schley expects to make a visit to Memphis, Tenn., in January at a date to be determined upon later, when he is to be presented a silver service by the people of Memphis. He made this promise to Mr. Crawford of the Memphis Commercial Appeal company, who called on him to extend the invitation and to assure him of an earnest desire of the citizens of Memphis to have him make them a visit.

Big Money For Shorthorns.

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—Cicily, a Shorthorn cow, recently of the Queen Victoria herd in England, was sold here for $5,000 to J. J. Robins & Sons of Horace, Ind. The animal cost Queen Victoria $4,000 a few years ago. Twenty other cows and bulls realized an average price of $1,320. These are record figures for Shorthorn cattle for the past twenty-five years. The sales were made by W. B. Flatt of Hamilton, Ont., who recently imported the herd from England.

Russia to Hold Manchuria.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—"A secret dispatch passed through this city today," says the Shanghai correspondent of The Standard, "reputed to be from the Chinese minister in St. Petersburg, warning the empress dowager that Russia is determined to retain possession of Manchuria and that, if the Manchurian convention is denounced, other terms will be exacted which will gravely menace China's independence."

Accidental Shooting.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Dr. C. H. Stalter of this city was accidentally killed in Long Island sound off New Rochelle by Dr. Edward E. Tull, also of this city. The two physicians, who were keen sportsmen, were duck hunting in Dr. Tull's naphtha launch. Dr. Tull was passing a gun to Dr. Stalter, and in some manner it was discharged, Dr. Stalter receiving the load of shot in the head and dying instantly.

Human Body Found.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 8.—While Percy Young, son of Postmaster Young of Tallmans, Rockland county, was gunning in a marsh he stumbled over the dead body of a man finely clothed and havnig a gold watch and chain. All the flesh was gone from the head and face, and there was nothing on the body by which it could be identified.

A Probable Train Robber.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 8.—Laura Bullion, whose arrest here Wednesday created a sensation, began to make admissions to Chief Desmond last night which, he says, amount to a confession that her male companion, also under arrest here, is the bandit, Henry Longbaugh, who is known to have been one of the Great Northern train robbers.

Great Demand For Relics.

EASTPORT, Me., Nov. 8.—The hull of the old frigate Minnesota, recently burned at Broad Cove, is being broken up with dynamite, the wreckers being anxious to get through with her before the cold weather sets in. It is estimated that a cord of wood has been carried away by relic gatherers.

Over in Somerset.

Somerset county has managed to supply many peculiar things in its political situations of the last few years. This year has proved no exception. Although the Republican ticket and its candidate for governor received a plurality of the votes, numbering 340 according to the latest returns, a Democratic sheriff was elected by a plurality of fully double that size. Now there must have been reasons of some kind for such a remarkable variance in the county's vote.

To the impartial observer, there appears to be two important factors which were largely instrumental in bringing about the victory of Calvin D. McMurtry, the Democratic candidate, over Thomas Douglass, the nominee of the dominant party. Douglass went into the fight almost unknown outside of his own township. When he was nominated, the question was asked on all sides, "Who is this man Douglass?" And but few appeared able to answer it. McMurtry was a man of remarkable popularity, well-known throughout the county by the voters of both parties. It would have been difficult, indeed, for the Democrats to have found a stronger candidate.

But even the popularity of a man like Mr. McMurtry could not have made the difference in the vote had there not been other influences at work. This factional trouble has long been apparent in Somerset county. Two years ago, it brought about the victory for Sheriff Schoonmaker, Democratic, over Van Doren, Republican, although the rest of the Republican ticket was elected. The balance of power for either party in Somerset county is such that neither can expect to have any split in its ranks without inevitable disaster. The Thompson faction appeared at the last county convention, but the friends of Senator Reed were much in the majority. The choice made was the one favored by Senator Reed although Mayor Smalley's name was used by the Senator's lieutenants until just before the convention. Had Smalley been nominated, the result might have been a different story.

However that may be, there is no doubt but the Thompson faction worked directly for the defeat of Douglass. There was no secret about it in some parts of the county. The Democratic candidate's pasters were used freely and without concealment. As a result the story went abroad that it meant that Senator Reed had lost his grip on the county, that he was no longer the leader of the cohorts of the Grand Old Party there. Such is not the case. It will require a long time before such a thing can be brought about. Mr. Reed has his friends throughout the county and they are just as loyal today as they ever were. When the two factions meet in convention again there is likely to be another struggle for supremacy, but it is also quite likely the Reed faction will win out in the contest for control of the gathering.

There is one point, however, wherein neither faction will be able to succeed. As already mentioned, the balance of power is too easily disturbed in Somerset to make it possible for either side to stir up any party strife without bringing defeat to the candidate who is bitterly opposed by any one faction. With a great popularity to bank on the Republicans might defy their factional troubles and elect their candidate, but a man, practically unknown, appears doomed to defeat.

The danger of allowing children to play in the close proximity to a bonfire has been frightfully emphasized by the fatal accident which befell little Elizabeth Forrestel Tuesday morning. There is no law at present against the building of bonfires, but it is the duty of every citizen to see that they are properly cared for when built. When so many children are running about the streets, no bonfire should be left alone without some proper person in charge.

The new pastor of Hope chapel appears to have auspiciously opened his acquaintance with the members of his congregation. Although he was formally welcomed at the reception which marked the beginning of his pastorate, the congregation has now arranged to give him another reception. The sister chapel, Warren, is also to do its share in making the new pastor feel at home and will entertain in his honor.

There seems much justice in the request of the people of Spooner avenue that the sanitary sewers, if they are ever to be laid in that thoroughfare, be put down before the street is macadamized. Delay will make it necessary to tear up the surface of the road, which is not always conducive to a smooth surface afterward.

The response to the public invitation to send donations to Muhlenberg Hospital was a generous one, and that worthy institution has been greatly aided. If, however, there are any who have not yet sent anything, but desire to add their offering, it can be sent at once, and will be right welcome despite the delay.

Cranford has a mystery. The body of a well-dressed man, with money in the pockets of the suit, was found near that place by some hunters Election Day. There was a bottle of poison by its side. From what little evidence there was it seemed likely that the man had come from Elizabeth or vicinity.

Public opinion in Somerset county does not seem to agree regarding the results of Tuesday's election in that county. For the second time the Democrats have succeeded in electing a sheriff.

Every patron of the New Jersey Central Railroad is favorably impressed with the idea of painting white the fence separating the tracks at the North Avenue station.

It looks as if, strange to relate, New Jersey would go Republican by even a greater vote than was claimed by the Republican State committee.

The return of Elizabeth to the Democratic camp was probably the most important feature of this fall's election in Union county.

We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

Dunellen, November 8.—Commencing this month, the Defender Fire company, of this place, will hold monthly drills in military tactics, so that if the company should in the future take part in any parade, Dunellen may make a good showing.

The street lights in the borough have been giving very poor satisfaction for the last few weeks and some action is likely to be taken. A good many lights are not lit at all at night and those that are give such a dim light as to make them useless.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 10, "Our National Bondage"—Text, Hab. i, 13-17; Amos vi, 1-6.

"They catch them in their net."

The curse of intoxication is not a modern evil entirely. There is not an age that has not been crippled in its progress by it. And in ancient times those who loved their land and fellow men and served God opposed the use of strong drink and pointed out its disastrous effects upon the individual and society.

Amos saw and deplored the results of the appetite for alcoholic liquors which had made such havoc both in the land of Judæa and in the northern kingdom of Israel. Habakkuk notes the connection of wickedness of many kinds with the idolatrous practices of his times.

The worshipers of God are now, as in the days of the prophets of Israel, opposed to all the corruption which follows indulgence in intoxicating drinks. Righteousness and goodness, happiness and prosperity can never exist where drunkenness prevails. Intoxication deranges all the functions of the body, diseases its tissues, debases the inner nature and destroys intellectual powers. It is deadly to all that is distinctively excellent and valuable in human nature. Yet it is fascinating in the extreme and especially difficult to resist when appetite has once been acquired for its peculiar effects.

Our own nation is to a great extent bound by the power of the liquor traffic and drinking habits. One of the worst features of the situation is the connection of the government with the business through the revenue it derives from the manufacture and sale of alcoholics. The wrong of this is clearly seen by our own people and by all those who are alert on temperance reform. There can be no halt called and no compromise made. The issue is clearly made, and we shall spare no effort to change the situation from governmental protection of and participation in the profits of that business which ruins citizens and society to governmental proscription and prohibition. "The liquor traffic can never be legalized without sin."

The matter of the army canteen has awakened great interest and earnest discussion. No lover of good order objects to every army post having a pleasant reading room with sale of refreshments and appliances for recreation. The soldier should have all the helpful influences possible. What we do object to and firmly oppose is a drinking saloon for soldiers run by the government or any one else. Great manufacturing concerns have fitted refreshment rooms for their employees where food can be had at cost and rest and recreation had in hours of leisure. But no establishment, not even a brewery or distillery, ever opened a saloon for its employees. Even these establishments will not permit drunkenness in their workmen and prefer men who do not drink. Many railroads and manufacturers will not employ drinking men. The laboring man is learning that he must be sober to be skillful, and skilled labor is what has put the United States in the world's van in industry. The soldier is no longer a loafer or a ruffian. He is a skilled and trained expert in military science and art. He must be a sober man to get and keep his place. We must abolish the saloon and banish drinking customs for our industrial protection as well as for our religious advancement. We must be a sober people. May we also be a saved people to Christ.

Communion With God.

Worship is communion with God. Communion is that mysterious commingling of souls which makes them one and gives to each the gifts of the other. We feel it in human love or friendship. It is deeper than words and larger than sympathy. It is the opening and giving of heart to heart. Thus we commune with God. He dwells in us and we in Him. The world fades away. Our sorrows are forgotten. We are uplifted by new aspirations and holy impulses. We go forth into the world again with new light on our faces and new joy in our hearts. We have been with our God.—Churchman.

An Unbalanced Memory.

It is so easy to forget a kindness and to remember a kick. We are apt to forget completely a hundred little kindnesses and courtesies which one has shown us and to remember a single careless slight or thoughtless word. Often we hear it said of some wrong or foolish deed: "I have never thought so well of that man since then. It was there he showed his real character," as if a man's real character appeared more in one separate deed to which, perhaps, he was sorely tempted, than in the striving and overcoming of many days and years.—Sunday School Times.

The Source of Assurance.

Obedience is the testimony to the soul as well as to the world of the saving knowledge of the Master, and Christlikeness bears witness to renewing communion with Him. This fellowship is no mere doctrine or imagination or feeling. It is the power that works in us, the perfecting of the transforming love of God. Forgiveness and fellowship in Christ are proved to the soul and to the world by the obedience and the Christlikeness that they make possible. The renewed life is the proof of sincerity, the source of assurance.—Evangelist.

The Hour Draws Near.

The hour draws near, howe'er delayed and late,
When at the eternal gate
We leave the words and works we call our own
And lift void hands alone

For love to fill. Our nakedness of soul
Brings to that gate no toll;
Giftless we come to Him who all things gives
And live because He lives.
—From John Greenleaf Whittier's Last Poem.

Which? The choice really rests with the purchaser. If you choose to buy inferior fuel you have an excess of ashes. If you buy our LEHIGH COAL you have little ash and much heat. Tests of the output of various mines shows this coal to possess the largest percentage of carbon.

BOICE, RUNYON & CO.,
PARK AVE. AND RAILROAD

A young Philadelphia barber has been under a cloud of trouble: "At my trade," he says, "you have to catch your meals when you can, and in busy hours we must eat quickly, so as to get back to our work. Well, here's just where my trouble began. I ate my meals quickly and did not chew them long enough. The consequence was I had a dull feeling at the stomach, felt languid and tired, and had what is generally known as heartburn and those pains around the heart that make you believe you have heart trouble. I had often noticed the Kipans ads in the Philadelphia Record, but never read them through until one day I happened to read one about such troubles as mine, so I determined to try the Tabules. The first bottle relieved me. After the second no more heartburn or pains around my heart. And that dull feeling of my stomach disappeared. After the third bottle I felt all right again and stopped using them. About five weeks ago the same trouble returned, same symptoms, except this time my face broke out in small pimples and I thought it high time to get the Tabules. Noticing the ad in the same paper I sent for some Tabules, and must say the five-cent cartons are much more convenient than the glass bottles. I have used four cartons and my trouble is gone. I usually take one at noon and one before going to bed. They keep my bowels regular and in every way make me feel like a different person. One thing I have noticed is that on working steady all day Saturday I usually woke up Sunday morning tired and felt unfit for work. Since using the Tabules I wake up sound and refreshed; in fact, I can't say too much for them, and every chance I get to recommend them I do so."

Personal Tidiness Among Women

So I left my chickens in care of a neighbor, who looked after them for the sake of the eggs, and lent my little Jersey cow Pet to an orphan asylum. The neighbor who cared for the chickens agreed to water the flowers. Dog or cat I have none. Then I went traveling. I started on my journey at a time of much confusion and going to and fro up and down the land of excursionists. Quickly my penetrating eye observed that more than half the tourists were women. The first city in which I landed had a larger mouthful of the excursionists than it could swallow. It could not accommodate them; it just laid them around anyhow. I had my choice of rooming with others, which I especially detest, or of sitting up all night. So I bunked in with a lot of strangers—over twenty women of us in all—and made a night of it.

Not having much practical experience in the matter, my conviction has always been that women are always tidy, daintily clean and sweet and that men without them would be a mob of dirty folk. Well, since I have been on my travels that conviction is staggered. It got its first blow last summer when I was wont to frequent a swimming bath by the sea, and I saw women throw wads of their combings—brown, black, white and red—into the tank where the rest of us were swimming.

I am going to speak to women on a subject which the etiquette books have neglected—namely, the care of their hair; not hair upon their heads, but that which comes off. There was once a great statesman who declared that if he had his way he would make all women shave their heads and keep them shaved because of their slovenliness in the matter of loose hairs. I am not sure but he was right. At any rate, many persons agree with him, in their minds at least. It made this statesman quiver all over with disgust to get a woman's long hair upon him or to find one tightly hugging a piece of soap. Being a family man, the statesman was liable to encounter these happiness marring obstacles, small but awful. Women who are careless and slovenly in this respect have no idea what a horror it is for a person on whose head that snaky, crawly hair did not grow to get it upon his clothing.

I am mentioning this matter because nobody else will do so. I hate abominably to make myself disagreeable, but—The woman who lets her combings lie about loose is a sloven and unclean and untidy, no matter how fine she thinks herself. I have seen a woman who would almost faint at the thought of a grease spot on her gown, yet shamelessly leave her loose hair in the comb or, worse yet, throw it upon the floor. You can distinguish a lady instantly by the disposition she makes of her combings.

My fellow sisters, never, never, throw a hair upon the floor. Burn it if you can; if you cannot, then dispose of it in some other way. I suppose we women will always have long hair, because it is so fine in poetry and novels, but I'm blest if it's æsthetic in the wear and actual tear of life. And horrible, trailing hairs where they ought not to be grate terribly on the nerves of cleanly, refined men. My fellow sisters, again, look sharp after the hair that is off your heads. Have always a bag to put these nightmare combings into and see that no guilty one escapes. So shall you deserve a good husband and the blessings of the human race. Other things yet more unpleasant, if that could be, I encountered on my journey for recreation. I have seen members of my sex who pat themselves on the back as mirrors of that virtue which is next to godliness yet wash their hands in the common basin others had to use and leave the soiled water for another to empty; likewise to rinse out the bowl after them. One more tableau in the chamber of horrors wherein I bunked a night and I am done and I hope never to mention this theme again—I actually saw women brush their teeth in the common wash basin that we all had to use. No lady can possibly do a thing like that.

JANE STORY.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

I hesitated long before I put this theory to the test of practice. I knew well that I risked death; for any drug that so potently controlled and shook the very fortress of identity might by the least scruple of an overdose or at the least inopportunity in the moment of exhibition utterly blot out that immaterial tabernacle which I looked to it to change. But the temptation of a discovery so singular and profound at last overcame the suggestions of alarm. I had long since prepared my tincture; I purchased at once, from a firm of wholesale chemists, a large quantity of a particular salt which I knew, from my experiments, to be the last ingredient required; and late one accursed night, I compounded the elements, watched them boil and smoke together in the glass, and when the ebulition had subsided, with a strong glow of courage, drank off the potion.

The most racking pangs succeeded; a grinding in the bones, deathly nausea, and a horror of the spirit that can not be exceeded at the hour of birth or death. Then these agonies began swiftly to subside, and I became to myself as is out of a great sickness. There was something strange in my sensations, something indescribably new and, from its very novelty, incredibly sweet. I felt younger, lighter, happier in body; within I was conscious of a heady recklessness, a current of disordered sensual images running like a mill race in my fancy, a dissolution of the bonds of obligation, an unknown but not an innocent freedom of the soul. I knew myself, at the first breath of this new life, to be more wicked, tenfold more wicked, sold a slave to my original evil; and the thought, in that moment, braced and delighted me like wine. I stretched out my hands, exulting in the freshness of these sensations; and in the act, I was suddenly aware that I had lost in stature.

There was no mirror, at that date, in my room; that which stands beside me as I write, was brought there later on and for the very purpose of these transformation. The night, however, was far gone into the morning—the morning, black as it was, was nearly ripe for the conception of the day—the inmates of my house were locked in the most rigorous hours of slumber; and I determined, flushed as I was with hope and triumph, to venture in my new shape as far as to my bedroom. I crossed the yard wherein the constellations looked down upon me, I could have thought, with wonder, the first creature of that sort that their unsleeping vigilance had yet disclosed to them; I stole through the corridors, a stranger in my own house; and coming to my room, I saw for the first time the appearance of Edward Hyde.

I must here speak by theory alone, saying not that which I know, but that which I suppose to be most probable. The evil side of my nature, to which I had now transferred the stamping efficacy, was less robust and less developed than the good which I had just deposed. Again, in the course of my life, which had been, after all, nine tenths a life of effort, virtue and control, it had been much less exercised and much less exhausted. And hence, as I think, it came about that Edward Hyde was so much smaller, slighter and younger than Henry Jekyll. Even as good shone upon the countenance of the one, evil was written broadly and plainly on the face of the other. Evil besides—which I must still believe to be the lethal side of man—had left on that body an imprint of deformity and decay. And yet when I looked upon that ugly idol in the glass, I was conscious of no repugnance, rather of a leap of welcome. This, too, was myself. It seemed natural and human. In my eyes it bore a livelier image of the spirit, it seemed more express and single, than the imperfect and divine countenance I had been hitherto accustomed to call mine. And in so far I was doubtless right. I have observed that when I wore the semblance of Edward Hyde, none could come near to me at first without a visible misgiving of the flesh. This, as I take it, was because all human beings, as we meet them, are commingled out of good and evil; and Edward Hyde, alone in the ranks of mankind, was pure evil.

I lingered but a moment at the mirror; the second and conclusive experiment had yet to be attempted; it yet remained to be seen if I had lost my identity beyond redemption, and must flee before daylight from a house that was no longer mine; and hurrying back to my cabinet, I once more prepared and drank the cup, once more suffered the pangs of dissolution, and came to myself once more with the character, the stature and the face of Henry Jekyll.

That night I had come to the fatal cross-roads. Had I approached my discovery in a more noble spirit, had I risked the experiment while under the empire of generous or pious aspirations, all must have been otherwise, and from these agonies of death and birth I had come forth on angel instead of a fiend. The drug had no discriminating action; it was neither diabolical nor divine; it but shook the doors of the prison-house of my disposition; and like the captives of Philippi, that which stood within ran forth. At that time my virtue slumbered; my evil, kept awake by ambition, was alert and swift to seize the occasion; and the thing that was projected was Edward Hyde. Hence, although I had now two characters as well as two appearances, one was wholly evil, and the other was still the old Henry Jekyll, that incongruous compound of whose reformation and improvement I had already learned to despair. The movement was thus wholly toward the worse.

Even at that time, I had not yet conquered my aversion to the dryness of a life of study. I would still be merrily disposed at times; and as my pleasures were (to say the least) undignified, and I was not only well known and highly considered, but growing toward the elderly man, this in coherency of my life was daily growing more unwelcome. It was on this side that my new power tempted me until I fell in slavery. I had but to drink the cup to doff at once the body of the noted professor and to assume, like a thick cloak, that of Edward Hyde. I smiled at the notion; it semmed to me at the time to be humorous; and I made my preparations with the most studious care.

I took and furnished that house in Soho, to which Hyde was tracked by the police; and engaged as a housekeeper a creature whom I well knew to be silent and unscrupulous. On the the other side, I announced to my servanrt that a Mr. Hyde (whom I described) was to have full liberty and power about my house in the square; and to parry mishaps, I even called and made myself a familiar object, in my second character. I next drew up that will to which you so much objected; so that if anything befell me in the person of Dr. Jekyll I could enter on that of Edward Hyde without pecuniary loss. And thus fortified, as I supposed, on every side, I began to profit by the strange immunities of my position.

Men have before hired bravoes to transact their crimes, while their own person and reputation sat under shelter. I was the first that ever did so for his pleasures. I was the first that could thus plod in the public eye with a load of genial respectabiiity, and in a moment, like a schoolboy, strip off these lendings and spring headlong into the sea of liberty. But for me, in my impenetrable mantle, the safety was complete. Think of it—I did not even exist! Let me but escape into my laboratory door, give me but a second of two to mix and swallow the draught that I had always standing ready, and whatever he had done, Edward Hyde would pass away like the stain of breath upon a mirror, and there in his stead, quietly at home, trimming the midnight lamp in his study, a man who could afford to laugh at suspicion, would be Henry Jekyll.

The pleasures which I made haste to seek in my disguise were, as I have said, undignified; I would scarce use a harder term. But in the hands of Edward Hyde, they soon began to turn toward the monstrous. When I would come back from these excursions, I was often plunged into a kind of wonder at my vicarious depravity. This familiar that I called out of my own soul, and sent forth alone to do his good pleasure, was a being inherently malign and villainous; his every act and thought centered on self; drinking pleasure with bestial avidity from any degree of torture to another; relentless like a man of stone. Henry Jekyll stood at times aghast before the acts of Edward Hyde; but the situation was apart from ordinary laws, and insidiously relaxed the grasp of conscience. It was Hyde, after all, and Hyde alone, that was guilty. Jekyll was no worse; he woke again to his good qualities seemingly unimpaired; he would even make haste where it was possible, to undo the evil done by Hyde. And thus his conscience slumbered.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 10—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Our national bondage.—Hab. i, 13-17; Amos vi, 1-6. (Temperance meeting.)

Nations come into bondage unto sin as well as individuals. Every nation of the past has had its besetting national sins, and so has every nation in the world today. Sometimes the sin of nations has been an insatiate desire for glory in war, sometimes greed for territory and sometimes one of the vices to which its people have most universally and readily yielded. One of the greatest of the national sins today in the civilized nations of the world is the sin of intemperance. Intemperance is a national sin of France, Germany, England and America. The drink traffic is extended and protected by law. Thousands in high places and in low places are moderate or habitual indulgers in intoxicating drinks. The greatest woes of the people are the direct or indirect result of the wide prevalence of this gigantic evil, and yet the nations seem powerless in its grasp. It is national bondage indeed and, to our shame, "our national bondage."

The forbearance of God toward nations as toward individuals will some time come to an end. How wonderfully patient God is—patient in the creation of the world, patient in its preservation! God is far more patient and forbearing with evil than man is. Habakkuk's burden was a burden of complaint at God's seeming slackness and indifference toward the prevalence and power of evil, but God's forbearance cannot last forever. The purpose of his forbearance is to arouse repentance, but if sin is not repented of and abandoned it will be punished, even the national sin of intemperance. The curse of God has been pronounced against intemperance, and it will be executed. "Woe to them that are at ease in Zion and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came * * * that drink wine in bowls and anoint themselves with the chief ointments, but they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph."

Unless the national sin of intemperance is overcome it will bring a direful punishment upon our land. We are sowing the wind, and no power can prevent our reaping the whirlwind. The future is great with opportunities. It is also fraught with great dangers. To take advantage of our opportunities and to avoid our dangers physical, mental and moral strength of the finest caliber is demanded of us; but whence is it to come if we become a nation of drunkards? It cannot come under such conditions. The very life and perpetuity of our nation depend upon our breaking the bonds of intemperance, which are fastening themselves about us and in becoming free from this national sin. May God help us as Endeavorers to do our part both in prayer and in service to bring about such a desirable condition of affairs.

THE PRAYER MEETING.

Have a special temperance address on the topic.

BIBLE READINGS.

Ex. xx, 13; Lev. x, 8, 9; Judg. xiii, 1-14; Prov. xiv, 34; xx, 1; xxiii; 29-32; Ps. xxxiii, 12-20; Math. xviii, 7; xxvi, 41; Luke i, 13-15; Gal. v, 19-26.

To the Eye of Faith.

Only to the Christian is the world very fair today as well as yesterday. He knows that change must come and knows not what a day may bring forth. But the reflection does not disturb him, because it is accompanied with the knowledge that his Father still rules and does according to His will among the children of men. He alone has the assurance that "all things"—yes, every event—shall work together for his good. To the eye of faith the world is very fair today, and tomorrow or some other day not distant will surely usher in one that is fairer and brighter, even a morning without clouds.—Episcopal Recorder.

Power Against Sin.

We have no power against a sin until we are able to see that it is forbidden by one of the commandments of the word of God. But having realized that it is so forbidden we at once have great power against it, the Lord's own omnipotent power which He gives in His commandments. It could not be that in the letter of the word there should be forbidden every sin of love, thought and deed to which man is heir, but when the light is allowed to shine forth out of the earthern covering then it will be seen that there is not one sin we are ever tempted to do but has its warning commandment, "Thou shalt not," in the word.—Helper.

This Life and the Next.

In considering the relations of this life to the next, of the life that now is to the life that is coming, the first thing of which note must be taken is the continuity of life; that there really is but one life; that death is not a break in the soul's existence, but only an experience in its continuous life. Death is like sleep in that we live while we sleep. We live right on through a night's repose into a new morning; so we live right on through death into the new day and the new world.—Universalist.

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Alls team has arranged to play a game with the Princeton Elm Club eleven on the Hope chapel Common, Thanksgiving morning.

There is no truth in the rumor that Leal's football team is going to disband. The members of the team deny the report wholly. Tomorrow the team will play a game with the team from Dobbs Ferry.

There has been some talk of organizing a football team among the members of the North Plainfield High School, but inasmuch as the season is far advanced it is improbable that any definite action will be taken at present.

The association football game between the P. A. F. C. and the Steamship Oceanic eleven will be called tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 sharp. It will take place on the grounds at the corner of South Second street and Clinton avenue. The members of the visiting team will be entertained by the local association tomorrow evening.

GOLF.

The weekly competitions for the Mellick and Golf Committee cups will be the only two events on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course Saturday.

The end of this month will probably see the close of the golf season at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds. The present season has been the most successful in the history of the club. All the events have been interesting and exciting and have attracted a large number of contestants. There remain two or three events to be decided, after which the devotees of the game will take a rest for a few months.

ROD AND GUN.

Dr. C. R. Thiers, H. C. Compton, John Huntsman and R. F. R. Huntsman, of this city, have returned from a successful hunting trip through Sullivan county, New York. They brought back a large bag of game.

Hunters of game in this city and vicinity find that they are not well rewarded in their efforts to find rabbits, etc., hereabouts. There is a scarcity of game this year about Plainfield and even those who have sought other counties and States are complaining over a lack of game.

LAWN TENNIS.

The work of laying out tennis courts at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds is about completed.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." It the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. SMALL BOY LOSES A LEG.

LITTLE ACCIDENT IN PLAY HAS ASSUMED SERIOUS PROPORTIONS.

Brought About Blood Poisoning And Made Amputation Necessary—Operation By Dr. J. Carman.

Necrosis of the bone, resulting from some cause as yet undetermined, rendered it necessary Wednesday for physicians to amputate the left leg, just above the knee, of Geo. Patterson, the ten-year-old son of James Patterson, of West Front street. The operation was performed at Muhlenberg Hospital, and was conducted by Dr. J. H. Carman, assisted by Drs. Hedges and Pittis. On its completion the young patient rallied, but is not yet entirely out of danger.

The trouble first made its appearance a month ago, a small lump becoming apparent below the knee. Beyond applying the usual home remedies the boy's mother took no especial notice of it, thinking it was the natural result of a fall from a tree or a kick inflicted by companions in play. It steadily grew worse, however, and three weeks ago the boy was forced to take to bed.

Dr. Carman was called and treated the trouble but it was already far advanced and his removal to the hospital was found necessary. A consultation showed the impossibility of saving the member as blood poisoning was threatened and amputation was decided upon.

CORIELL TO BE NEXT PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL

Stated on Good Authority That He Will Succeed Mr. Dumont as President.

CHANGES IN COMMITTEES.

MR. BUCKLE WILL REMAIM AT HEAD OF POLICE BOARD.

Probable That Mr. Tolles Will Continue as Chairman of Street Committe—Places for the Three New Councilmen.

It is stated on excellent authority that the president of the Common Council for 1902, to succeed President J. B. Dumont, who retires this year, will be B Frank Coriell, who is now serving as a councilman from the Third ward. By reason of the fact that he is thoroughly acquainted with the workings of the Council in its various details and has served the city for several years, it seems reasonable and likely that he will be chosen.

It is yet premature to make any accurate calculation regarding the make-up of the committees for next year. A caucus will be called during December, when these committees will be decided upon. It is quite likely, however, that Mr. Buckle, who is now chairman of the police committee, will remain at the head of that committee. He has made an excellent head for the police department and has devoted much time to the work of that department.

Whether Mr. Tolles will remain at the head of the street committee is not known. He has filled that position in a most efficient manner and has given a great deal of his time to the work of the committee. Some other ward may want the chairmanship of the committee and the First ward may yield, but it would not be surprising if Mr. Tolles continued as the chairman of the committee.

There are many committees, however, and there will no doubt be several changes to take in the new members of the Council, Clarence L. Murphy, Leslie M. Daniel and E. E Pray. Just what committees they will be appointed to cannot be told at this time, but no doubt their wishes will be considered to some extent when the committees are made up.

As most of the employes of the city are now under the tenure of office act there are very few appointments to be made, and no doubt those holding appointive offices will be retained in them. It is predicted that the Council for next year will be a harmonious and good working one.

TO OWN THEIR OWN DISHES.

Three Societies of Trinity Reformed Church United For That Purpose.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church has long wished dishes with which to serve refreshments, instead of hiring them, as it has been in the habit of doing. With the assistance of the Endeavor Society and Young Women's Mission Band, the society has ordered through Woodhull & Martin a complete outfit, embracing several hundred pieces of white stoneware, which will be placed in the kitchen. They will be used the first time at the "Modern War of Roses" supper of the Young Women's Mission Band, Nov. 21 and 22.

LEHIGH'S NEW SIGNALS.

That Road is Now Entirely Equipped With Hall Automatic Signals.

The work of equipping the Lehigh Valley Railroad with the Hall automatic signal, which has been in progress for several years, has been completed, and the entire main line between Jersey City and Buffalo is now protected in this way. The bulk of the work of introducing the signals has been done under the present management. When it took charge the signal service was in operation on only 237.82 miles of track, leaving 633.7 miles of main line still to be covered.

Fireman Resigns.

Frank Day, of West Fourth street, who for the past four months has been a regular fireman attached to the West Second street house, has resigned from the service, owing to ill health. In all probability a successor will be appointed by the Common Council from the call firemen.

Red Jacket Expected.

The Red Jacket Company, of Elizabeth, will pay a fraternal visit to Warren Engine Company some evening next week. The Elizabeth company will disband Dec. 1, and this will be its last public appearance.

M'KINLEY SERVICE AT PARIS.

DESCRIBED IN LETTER FROM REV. T. LOGAN MURPHY.

Written to a Friend in Bucks County, Pa., Concerning the Memorial Exercises at American Church.

The McKinley memorial services held at the American church in Paris forms the subject of an interesting letter from Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of this city, to an old friend in Newportville, Bucks county, Pa., where the Plainfielder spent his early days.

An extract from the letter containing a description of the service, as published in the Bucks County Gazette, is as follows:

"On the day of the burial of our late President McKinley, at Canton, Ohio, a grand memorial service was held in our church here. There never were so many people inside of this magnificent church at one time. It was a a beautiful day. Hundreds were turned away unable to gain admittance. One half of the pews were reserved for the different embassies from foreign countries They appeared in gorgeous uniforms. The church will comfortably seat 1 200 people. In addition to this every inch of standing room was occupied. The long corridors at the outside were crowded. All the English colony, as well as American and many French people were present.

"It was the only church open in this city for this sad occasion. The music was superb. The twenty clergymen and surpliced choir entered the end of the church and proceeded up the centre aisle. This white-robed procession was very imposing as it moved through this crowded throng. I had the first part of the service, Dr. Parks, of Boston, had the next, and Dr. Morgan, the rector, took the rest, we three doing the honors of the occasion. It occupied one hour. Many said it was the finest church service they had ever beheld. I think I can truthfully say the same. It seemed that all interested in the President who were in Paris felt it their duty as well as privilege to be there. It would have done your heart good to have been there and joined in the favorite hymns that McKinley loved. Two funeral marches and a special anthem for the occasion were reverberated throughout the building. I am thankful that I was privileged to take part in this memorial service."

LAID CORNER STONE.

Somerville's Hook and Ladder Company Started a New Building Of Its Own.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 9.—Central Hook and Ladder Company laid the cornerstone for their new home here Thursday, and when it is completed, the building will be one of the finest fire houses in the State. In the cornerstone was placed a history of all the fire companies in town, some money, copies of the local papers, a copy of The Daily Press, of Plainfield, and some of the city newspapers.

The structure will be three stories in height, and will be of brick. The front room on the first floor will be for the truck, and in the rear will be sanitary stables for the horses. On the second floor a pool and billiard room will be conducted for the public. The meeting room will be located on the third story.

The company is erecting the building by its own efforts, and may well feel proud of its work. The town will pay a nominal rental.

A WORTHY CASE.

Wants a Chance to Earn His Own Livelihood.

The Organized Aid Association makes an appeal to the citizens of Plainfield in behalf of a young man, twenty years old, who several days ago lost his leg below the knee by an accident. He is ambitious to become self-supporting, but at present is helpless, and lives with his mother, who is aided by the city If he had an artificial leg he could earn his own living and help his mother and little sister.

He and his friends have already collected about $11. The leg will cost $50. Twenty-three dollars has already been offered to the agent, Miss Van-Bookerck, who will give any further information at the office, 544 West Front street. About $17 more is needed. All contributions will be publicly acknowledged in this paper.

Bride Once Lived Here.

The marriage of Miss Marie Antoinette Reuter, of Red Bank, and Walter McManus, of Newark, which took place at St. James' church, in the latter city, Monday evening, is of local interest inasmuch as the bride was formerly a resident of North Plainfield, having lived on Linden avenue for a number of years.

UNION VETERANS WILL GATHER NEXT WEEK.

Annual Encampment of U. V. U., of New York and New Jersey, to Be Held Here.

AN OPEN CAMP-FIRE FIRST.

THE MEETINGS WILL BE HELD IN WASHINGTON HALL.

They Commence Tuesday Night and Continue All Wednesday—Will Have Headquarters at Hotel Plainfield.

The annual encampment of the Union Veterans' Union, of New York and New Jersey, will be held in this city Tuesday and Wednesday. This will be the first time the Union has met in this city and preparations are being made to make the affair a great success. It is expected that there will be nearly two hundred delegates in attendance.

The convention will be called to order Tuesday afternoon in Washington Hall, where all meetings will be held. After the business meeting there will be a parade through a few of the principal business streets of the city and borough. The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will lead the procession, escorting the veterans and the high officers.

Tuesday evening there will be an open camp-fire in Washington Hall to which the public is invited, especially all soldiers. There will be a fine programme of music, recitations, addresses and other features to make the evening one of much pleasure. Wednesday morning the convention will meet and conclude the transaction of all business.

Arrangements have been made by the members of Antietam Command, of this city, under the direction of Col. Charles Stephens, to care for the visiting delegates at the local hotels. The officers of the Union will establish headquarters at the Hotel Plainfield, and prominent members will be entertained at the Hotel Kensington.

It is sincerely hoped by the members of the local organization that persons of a patriotic nature decorate about the centre of the city, so as to give the veterans a cordial reception. Antietam Command is nearly the youngest branch of the Union and the members are making an extra effort to entertain the visiting delegates to the best of their ability. They will be assisted largely by the Woman's Auxiliary to the Command.

STRONG ATTRACTIONS.

Good Entertainment to be Given at Casino Thursday Evening.

Charles Battell Loomis, author-humorist, who is to appear at the Casino Thursday in conjunction with Miss Sally Frothingham Akers and her "Singing Girls," is a resident of Fanwood, having moved there within the past few months. He is a well-known writer and author of "Yankee Enchantments," "The Four-masted Cat-boat," "Some Americans Abroad," "Just Rhymes," etc., etc, published by the Century Co.

Mr. Loomis recites his own sketches. They are all short—so are his speeches. Mr. Loomis delivers an original and very funny lecture on "Unnatural History," illustrated by colored cartoons of his own imagining. Mr. Loomis is a master of several dialects and made a reputation as an impersonator before he began to write—he can now read and write.

Of Miss Sally Frothingham and her "Singing Girls," David Bispham, the famous singer, says "They are the best looking and best singing quartette I ever saw or heard."

Reserved seat tickets are on sale at Armstrong's pharmacy.

TO PREVENT FREEZING.

Will Lower Water Pipes at the Hillside Cemetery.

The officials of the Hillside Cemetery Association have ordered the lowering of the water pipes at the cemetery to prevent freezing this winter. Prior to the time that Superintendent Smith occupied the residence at the cemetery the water was shut off every winter. Now that Mr. Smith resides there the year round he is obliged to have water in the house, and to prevent freezing the pipes must be lowered.

Took Prominent Part.

Among the men prominent at the laying of the corner-stone of the new Chamber of Commerce building, at Liberty street and Liberty place, New York, yesterday afternoon, was Augustus Shepard, of "The Gables," Fanwood.

WERE MARRIED.

Then Returned to Bride's Parents and the Parental Blessing Was Forthcoming.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, Nov. 9—Miss Edith Fisher, of this place, and Frank Howard, of New York, were married in the Twenty-first street Presbyterian church, New York city, last week.

They left town without the consent and knowledge of her parents and nothing was known of their whereabouts until they returned to town yesterday and were forgiven by the parents of the bride. They are going to spend a week at her home, after which they will leave for a trip through the south, going to California, where they will spend the winter.

Mrs. Howard, as she now is, is a daughter of John Fisher, a well-to-do carpenter of this place, and was a society leader.

When questioned about the step she took she said she and Mr. Howard were to be married sometime and she knew her parents would not consent to her wedding for some years to come. So she just got married, and—was forgiven!

BOROUGH COUNCIL ORDERS BOND ISSUE.

Cost of Improving Somerset Street to be Met by Borrowing $3,000.

BENEFITS TO BE ASSESSED.

IMPROVEMENT CALLED FOR EXPENDITURE OF $3,196.87.

Commissioners of Assessment to Sit and Hear Interested Property-Owners — Bonds to be Sold at Par or Above —Face Value of Each $500.

Proper provision was made to cover the expenses incurred in improving Somerset street, by a measure calling for the issuing of a sufficient number of bonds, at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council held last evening. The entire cost of widening, regrading and macadamizing the thoroughfare from Green brook to Jackson avenue was exactly $3,196.87. Included in this figure is $75 allowed for surveying and the necessary cost of making the attending assessments. This does not include the bill for the storm sewer, which has already been arranged.

Although the meeting was set for 8 o'clock, as usual it was quite late when Mayor Smalley called the body to order. As it was ten minutes only were consummed in transacting the business. Robert Clark, Jr., the energetic chairman of the street committee, submitted an itemized account of the total cost of the improvements, and his report was approved. Subsequently the Council approved his resolution which recommended that the sum mentioned be allowed for surveying and making the assessments.

Mr. Clark introduced a resolution favoring the issuing of bonds to the amount of $3,000 to meet the expense. These bonds, according to the resolution, are to be in the sum of $500 each, payable five years from date. The rate of interest is five per cent., and the purchaser is vested with the privilege of receiving redemption at any time after one year from the date of the sale should he so desire. In a few moments the resolution was approved.

It is the duty of the mayor and the clerk to attend to the formalities necessary to the issuance of these bonds, which are to be sold at any figure not falling below the par value. Another resolution was passed, which instructed the borough clerk to deliver a copy of the resolution for the bond issue to the commissioners of assessment, which body is composed of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Dr. J. H. Cooley and William Smith. The commissioners will sit at a time and place hereafter to be designated for the purpose of hearing parties interested in the improvements. Due notice must be given through the newspapers circulating in the borough once a week concerning the time and place of the sittings of the commissioners, who are empowered to proceed to make such assessments for benefits against those property owners having land benefitted by the improvements made.

Another matter, which occupied the attention of the councilmen, was the subject of making allowances on delinquent tax bills for rent collected by Collector George F. Brown on property owned by those in default. The allowances made were as follows: On the tax bill of Henry Ruppert, for 1899, the sum of $25, being the amount of rent collected, and on tax bill of Catherine Ruppert, for 1900, the sum of $17.32, and on the tax bill of J. B. Mills, for 1900, $14.75 for rent collected on the property, No. 95 Summit avenue A resolution was passed remitting one-half the accrued interest on the Fritz property, now owned by the First National Bank, of this city.

Before adjournment Chairman Lee, of the police, fire and lamps committee, moved the confirmation of the appointment of Frank G. White as a special marshal for Saengerbund Hall, and this resolution was adopted.

Well Cared For.

Ned Gaston, of Grant avenue, returned Wednesday from a hunting trip, with a party of friends, who shot forty-three rabbits, ten quail and seven gray squirrels since Saturday, near Chester, Morris county. The firemen at department headquarters were Mr. Gaston's guests at a rabbit stew supper Wednesday evening.

HELD ON CHARGE OF BIGAMY.

PRELIMINARY HEARING OF JAMES W. MILLS BEFORE JUSTICE SMALLEY.

Alleged Wife No. 1 Not Present—Claim That Arrest Was Illegal.

Principally on the strength of a certified copy of records of the Register's office, in Union county, setting forth that one William Mills and a Miss Mamie Donovan, of Newark, were married December 24, 1898, Justice D. D. Smalley at a preliminary hearing conducted in the borough court room last evening, held James W. Mills, of North Plainfield, in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of bigamy.

The arrest was made on a warrant issued on an affidavit of Mrs. Katherine Fries, of Whitewood avenue, the mother of Miss Minnie H. W. Fries, who was married to the defendant on January 13, 1901. The latter ceremony was performed by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, and at the time it took place, the alleged wife, No. 2, according to her story was unaware of the legal status of James Mills.

At the hearing Francis J. Blatz represented the defendant and he moved for the dismissal of the case on the ground that the arrest was illegally made, inasmuch as the defendant was taken in custody in Union county and was brought into Somerset county, without first being brought before Justice Moffett, in this city, who endorsed the the warrant issued by Justice Smalley, of the borough. The justice declined to sustain the motion.

The alleged first wife of Mr. Mills was not produced at the hearing, and Willis Sweeney, representing counsel for the complainant, offered the certificate mentioned and also the testimony of the alleged wife No. 2, concerning conversations between Miss Mamie Donovan and Miss Minnie Fries to prove the fact of the first marriage and also that William and James W. Mills are the same person. With this as evidence Justice Smalley, after listening to witnesses proving the marriage of the alleged wife No. 2, held the prisoner in $500 bail, and he was led to his cell.

GISSER WILL IN COURT.

Judge Schenck Grants Petition For Hearing and the Matter Was Bitterly Fought in the Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, November 9 —The Charlotte A. A. Gisser will case was again before Judge Schenck in the Orphans' Court yesterday. In opening court Judge Schenck said: "The petition in this case it seems to me is sufficient to justify me in holding a tender on the part of the caveator for the purpose of hearing what the former will is. I think she would be entitled to be heard on the caveat if she can establish by evidence that there was such a will and that she was a beneficiary in the same."

The hearing lasted the greater part of the day and was bitterly fought by the lawyers on both sides. The principal witnesses examined were Lawyer Charles L. Moffett and Miss Wilhemina Vroom, of Plainfield. Judge Schenck has postponed the matter for another week.

MAY START SCHOOL.

A Prospective Tenant Has Old Harned Academy Under Consideration.

There is a possibility that the old Harned Academy, on Park avenue, owned by James E. Martine, may shortly be opened as an academic school. J. B. Blanchet, of Scotch Plains, head master of the Fair Oaks School, recently inspected the property and was very much pleased with its advantages. The building is thoroughly equipped with all modern improvements and contains many light, airy classrooms completely fitted up by the former tenant.

Mr. Blanchet has arranged a meeting with Mr. Martine and if matters can be satisfactorily arranged, he may open it as a boys' school.

WORK DELAYED.

Some Wrong Sized Pipe Was Sent to Contractor For Local Work.

Patrick Plunkett, Jr., of Jersey City, son of P. T. Plunkett who was awarded the contract for installing the extensions of the sanitary sewer, was in this city yesterday to arrange the preliminary work. He stated that but one carload of pipe and a number of branches had been received, but the latter were of a wrong size. They will be returned and others made, entailing a week's delay. In consequence actual excavation cannot be commenced until at least a week from Monday.

MISS CALANTHE GREETED WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM

Perseverance Lodge, K. of P., Received Much Heralded Guest Last Evening.

BIG PARADE OF PYTHIANS.

VISITING DELEGATIONS ENTERTAINED IN WASHINGTON HALL.

Miss Calanthe is From Bangor, Maine—Now Touring the Country in State—Has Paid 88 Fraternal Visits—Another Entertainment.

With the aid of plenty of pyrotechnics and martial music, "Miss Calanthe," at present the most famous goat in the country, was formally introduced, last evening, to the expectant Plainfielders. If Her Ladyship was one of the plebian Nanny de Harlem variety, the demonstration she received would have turned her head, but although of a diminutive size she conducted herself in a becoming manner and viewed her surroundings with a nonchalant air.

According to schedule "Miss Calanthe" was to have reached this city at 9 o'clock, but the stringent rule of the trolley company forbidding the carrying of animals on its cars could not be stretched a point even for her sake, and she came an hour earlier by way of the New Jersey Central. She was immediately placed on a float and with Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., as an escort, was taken to East Second and Richmond streets, where at the appointed time the visiting lodges arrived.

The visitors included delegations from Henry Clay, Etnic and Black Prince Lodges, of Newark; Volunteer and Unity Lodges, of Elizabeth; Eureka Lodge, of Bloomfield, and others from Jersey City. Members from Friendship Lodge, of New Brunswick, and the Pythian Lodge, of Somerville, came earlier in the evening and with Unity Lodge, No. 102, of this city, assisted Perseverance in receiving the newcomers In all there were about 300 visiting Knights.

Without any delay the procession was formed and with "Miss Calanthe" and the visiting lodges in the lead, a triumphal march about the city was commenced. Vice Chancellor William N. Runyon, with Aides Samuel Clouston and Fred Wharton assumed charge while the way was made clear by Roundsman William Mattox, himself a Pythian of nineteen years standing.

All along the route there was an abundance of red fire ignited while many homes were brilliantly illuminated. Of course "Miss Calanthe" received unstinted attention on the part of the throngs which lined the sidewalk, eagerly waiting for a chance to view her.

Incidentally during the march, intricate drilling figures and manouvres were executed by uniformed ranks No. 3, of Elizabeth and No. 13, of this city, which received merited applause. Viewed by the aid of hundreds of torches their exhibition was quite interesting.

The parade terminated at Washington hall where Vice Chancellor Runyon again assumed charge as master of ceremonies. In the limited time at hand, the visitors were given a hearty welcome and shown the hospitality which only Perseverance Lodge knows how to extend. While the assemblage was disposing of surpassing coffee and sandwiches, speeches were made by Colonel Shanley, of the second regiment, of Jersey City, Deputy Allen, of Eureka Lodge, Deputy Cuenan, of Henry Clay Lodge, Past Deputy Savadge, of Ethic Lodge, Past Deputy Searles, of Volunteer Lodge, and Past Grand Chancellor Rockefellow, of Somerville. Other features on the programme were vocal selections by Vice Chancellor Runyon, German dialect selections by John Carney, banjo solos by Joseph Loughead and an excellent demonstration of canine intelligence by "Indy," guided by his master George O. Stevens, aptly introduced as "the most wonderful man and the most wonderful dog in Plainfield."

The demonstration concluded at midnight with rousing cheers on the part of the local organizations for "Miss Calanthe" and the visitors, after which the latter left for home. "Miss Calanthe" was taken in charge by Joseph Robinson, of Perseverance Lodge, who will be responsible for her for the next two weeks, when she will be turned over to Friendship Lodge, of New Brunswick. Her next appearance before the public will be Friday evening, when she will assist

TEA TABLE TALK

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

This is the season for church suppers and naturally some peculiar happenings mark these affairs. The story is told that at a supper recently given in the borough, the members of the church had contributed eleven cans of beans. When everybody had finished the repast there were exactly ten cans remaining.

* * * * * * *

The extraordinary amount of "cutting" was one of the features of Tuesday's election in this city. Some of the "knifing" is probably unexplainable, but there was one consistent voter in the First district of the Second ward, who understood what "cutting" really stands for. This voter's mind reverted to the great cutter of all cutters and in applying his ax to the ticket he saw fit to place the name of Carrie Nation on the ballot for city judge.

Rev. Dr. Fenn, who preached the ordination service at the Crescent Avenue church Wednesday evening when Robert Dalzell Schoonmaker was ordained, was in the siege at Pekin, and several months ago he told of his experiences at that time in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church. Dr. Fenn is one of the most rapid talkers ever heard in this city, being exceedingly difficult to report. He has wonderful powers of expression and what he has to say is always of the deepest interest.

EARL LI DID NOT SIGN

Russia's Designs on Manchuria Frustrated.

VIOLENT DISPUTE HASTENED DEATH.

Empress Dowager Instructed Li Hung Chang to Sign Treaty and Then Retracted—The City of Peking In Mourning.

PEKING, Nov. 9.—A violent dispute with M. Paul Lessar, Russian minister to China, over the Manchurian treaty appears to have been the immediate cause of the death of Li Hung Chang.

The diplomatic events preceding this tragic climax have enabled Japan for a moment to frustrate the designs of Russia. A fortnight ago the Japanese legation secured a reliable outline of the terms of the treaty and thereupon demanded that the Chinese plenipotentiaries officially lay before them the text, basing this demand upon the allegation that Japanese interests were involved in any change of the status of Manchuria.

The Chinese plenipotentiaries refused to comply with the demand. Thereupon the Japanese government from Tokyo communicated with the southern viceroys and induced them to use their influence with the empress dowager against the treaty. In the meantime the empress dowager instructed Li Hung Chang to communicate the treaty after certain modifications to the ministers of the powers and if they did not object to sign the same.

Li Hung Chang visited M. Lessar and explained to him the instructions. The Russian minister strongly objected to revealing the text of the treaty to the ministers of the other powers, and a stormy interview ensued. Li Hung Chang went home in a violent passion and had a hemorrhage, which the doctors attribute to the overexertion of a weakened system.

While these things were happening in Peking the southern viceroys sent to the empress dowager a memorial against the treaty. On receiving it she telegraphed Li Hung Chang countermanding the order to sign.

This instruction came after Li Hung Chang had become unconscious. When M. Lessar endeavored to have Li Hung Chang's seal affixed to the treaty Chou Fu, provincial treasurer, had arrived from Paotingfu and taken charge of the seals as the temporary successor of Earl Li.

The flag of the United States legation was the only one half masted in Peking yesterday. The mourners and the family of Li Hung Chang will burn paper offerings today in accordance with custom for the use of his spirit in the other world. The street is hung with mourning emblems. All the attendants at the yamen are richly attired and many of them gaudily dressed. Yesterday musicians beat drums about the house.

Li Hung Chang's estate will remain intact for the use of his eldest son, who will provide for the other members of the family.

Telegraphic communication with Prince Ching has been obtained. He is hastening to meet the court. After consultation he will return with Wang Wen Shao, who is accompanying the court, which is now five days' journey from Kaifongfu.

The Manchurian Convention.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Hankow correspondent of The Times supplies what he alleges is a correct translation of the authentic text of the Manchurian convention proposed by Russia. The convention stipulates for the gradual withdrawal of the Russian forces within three years "provided no other rebellion occurs and the powers do not interfere."

The number and stations of the Chinese garrisons must be settled in concert with the Russian military authorities, and Russian assent must be obtained for any railway construction in southern Manchuria.

"No mention is made in the text sent by the grand council to the southern viceroys of mining, commercial or other exclusive privileges," says the correspondent, "and the viceroys believe the convention contains other clauses which the grand council is not willing to disclose."

Irishmen Welcomed In Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—The Irish envoys, John E. Redmond, M. P.; P. A. McHugh, M. P., and Thomas O'Donnell, met with a great reception as they landed at the terminal station last night. They had come over from New York on the express. The station platform was a mass of men, held in check by a cordon of officers. Within a roped inclosure were the members of the reception committee of the United Irish league. As the train came to a stop and Mr. Redmond was seen on the car steps cheers rang out loud and long and were repeated as Messrs. McHugh and O'Donnell appeared. Then there was a rush and scramble which swept away the officers and nearly carried the visitors off their feet.

FIGHT WITH CONVICTS

Three of the Escaped Prisoners Killed; Four Retaken.

REWARD OFFERED FOR CAPTURE.

Balance of the Mutinous Inmates of Government Prison Believed to Be Making For Oklahoma and Indian Territory.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 9.—Seven of the twenty-six convicts who escaped from the stockade of the new federal prison here Thursday afternoon have been accounted for. Three of the number are dead. They are James Hoffman, aged twenty, white; J. J. Poffenholn, aged twenty-five, white, a soldier convict, and John Green, aged twenty-one, white. A fourth, William Drake, white, aged nineteen, is wounded and recaptured, and a fifth, Fred Moore, aged sixteen, a negro, is recaptured unhurt.

Two other convicts, Donald Norie and R. L. Davenport, were captured in a field two miles north of Jarbale. They were hiding in a ravine, and, being unarmed, they surrendered without resistance.

Five of the men were discovered in the barn of Fay Welshaar near Nortonville, Kan., about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Welshaar went into the barn and was ordered out at the point of guns. He rushed to Nortonville and gathered a posse of men who, with revolvers, shotguns and a few Winchesters, hastened to the scene. The convicts saw the men coming and rushed from the barn. They had two shotguns and revolvers. The posse pursued them, and a running duel resulted.

The convicts were at a disadvantage, and their shots had no effect, while at every volley from the posse one of the convicts fell. After two of them had fallen two of the others gave themselves up, one being wounded and the other unhurt. The fifth was fully 200 yards away when a man with a Winchester drew a bead on him and fired. He evidently had been hit, but tried to go on. A volley was fired at him and he fell. None of the citizens was hurt.

Reports come from numerous points of the arrest of men supposed to be fugitive convicts, but none of the suspects has been identified. The oldest of the fugitives is aged twenty-eight.

Quinn Fort, who was killed Thursday, was nineteen years old. One of the convicts still at large is a military prisoner, and the remainder were serving terms for robbery or assault. One is an Indian and two are negroes. Nearly all came from Oklahoma and Indian Territory, and they are supposed to be making for that country. They are hardy men, used to firearms and horses. Some have obtained both, but others are on foot and defenseless.

Warden McClaughry says he will capture every one of the men. In the districts around the city every road and river crossing that the fugitives might be expected to use is guarded by armed men, the farmers having turned out to earn the $60 reward that will be paid for the return of each convict. Those of the men who are armed are likely to be shot on sight.

Bought Morphine Tablets.

BOSTON, Nov. 9.—A special to The Traveler from Wareham, Mass., says: "The first positive bit of evidence that would tend to show that Miss Jane Toppan bought drug or poison has just been discovered here. It is learned that last July Jane Toppan, then attending the Davis family at Cataumet, ordered morphine tablets of a local druggist. The order came by telephone from Cataumet to Benjamin Waters' drug store on Main street, Wareham, and called for a bottle of morphine tablets, the strongest possible. The order was received by the proprietor over the telephone, and the order was filled. The message instructed Waters to send the tablets inclosed in a paper wrapper to Miss Toppan to be delivered to her at Cataumet. The druggist says that the bottle contained enough poison to kill a score of persons."

Morgan & Co., is made a companion of the Bath.

The Montana Oil Fever.

HELENA, Mon., Nov. 9.—The interest in the Kintla Lakes (Flathead county) oilfields is increasing. More than 1,250 claims of 160 acres each have been filed with the county clerk, and records of more claims will be filed soon. It is predicted that 3,000 claims will have been taken by next spring.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 9.—Two of the city's fire cisterns connected by a hundred foot tunnel in Arsenal avenue have been wrecked by a gas explosion, and two members of the city repair gang were fatally injured. The middle of the street for a distance of about 150 feet was torn up.

LAWS VIOLATED.

Railroads East and West Have Not Observed Interstate Rules.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Evidence of flagrant violations of the interstate commerce and the antitrust laws by railroads east and west of Chicago was adduced at the session of the interstate commerce commission. Traffic managers of lines in the Central Freight association and the western trunk line committee admitted that export rates on grain and grain products are constantly cut and that officials of the roads meet at stated periods and agree upon rates, which are then promulgated by the individual lines interested. The principal witness of the day was Traffic Manager George J. Grammar of the Lake Shore road, and his recitation of the conditions of affairs relative to grain eastbound aroused the deepest interest of the commission.

In the opinion of the commission the condition shown by the evidence is the strongest argument that could be adduced for the passage of a bill by congress giving the commission the power to make rates after a thorough investigation upon complaint and also the power to punish violators of the commission's rulings.

Traffic Manager Grammar admitted that the exports on grain and grain products were constantly cut; that the tariffs were seldom maintained; that the export rates were always secret; that little grain had been moving as domestic grain; that an association existed the members of which met at regular periods and in violation of the antitrust law agreed upon rates and percentages and kept a record of the same. When asked why the roads did not publish their export rates the same as domestic rates, he replied that if they did the press of the country would charge that the railroads were favoring foreign countries and foreign markets at the expense of the home markets and home producers.

TURKEY TO COMPLY.

Sublime Porte Agrees to All French Demands.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The sultan has notified France that he agrees to all the French claims.

The Turkish embassy in Paris confirms this.

M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, has informed the Turkish government that the French squadron will leave Mitylene as soon as he receives official communication that the sultan has ratified the decision of the sublime porte.

The Matin declares that the country would refuse to follow the government in a conflict with Turkey. If Turkey should make any movement in the direction of respecting the French flag, says the paper, the difficulty must be settled.

Several papers publish a Constantinople telegram stating that the sultan has issued an urgent summons for a meeting of the council of ministers in order that his wish to comply with all the French demands may be carried out.

Situation at Panama Unchanged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The state department has received a message from President Scrymser of the cable company which connects at Colon denying the reported capture of Panama and saying that his information from that place represents no change in the situation. There are about 1,000 insurgents within fifteen miles of Panama. The state department, in view of the continued reports of insurgent movements near Panama, through its consuls on the isthmus, has taken steps to warn the public that under no conditions must there be interference with free transit across the isthmus.

Mother Superior Shot.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Nov. 9.—Enraged because of his discharge from the position of caretaker of the Academy of St. Mary of the Lake and maddened by the persistent refusals of Sister Superior Agnes to see him, John Lawler finally secured admittance to the academy yesterday and in the presence of several of the sisters shot the superior, the ball entering her left shoulder. The bullet was extracted from the wounded woman's shoulder by Dr. C. L. Lindley, and it is believed that the patient will recover.

Pennsylvania Election Figures.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—Complete returns from every county in the state have now been received. Many of the counties give the figures as officially computed by the courts. The total vote for the leading candidates for state treasurer and supreme court justice is as follows: State treasurer—Harris (Rep.), 433,488; Coray (fusion), 385,120; Harris' plurality, 48,368. Justice of the supreme court—Potter (Rep.), 431,443; Yerkes (fusion), 385,107; Potter's plurality, 46,336.

Disastrous Fire In Bradford, Pa.

BRADFORD, Pa., Nov. 9.—One of the worst fires in the history of this city occurred yesterday. It originated in the livery stable of Frank P. Beamer and consumed a dozen buildings, including the thirty-five thousand dollar city hall. Thirty-seven horses in the livery stable perished in the flames, and the ten thousand dollar library of Brown & Schoonmaker, city attorneys, was totally destroyed, together with valuable maps.

Trying to Sell Steamers.

AMERICAN SHIPPING.

The Past Year One of Great Growth and Prosperity.

THE MAXIMUM TONNAGE ATTAINED.

Our Fleet of Ocean Steamers Still Unworthy of Comparison With Other Nations—Trade Largely Carried by Foreign Ships.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The report of Mr. Chamberlain, the United States commissioner of navigation, says that the past fiscal year has been the third successive year of notable prosperity and growth in American shipping, exceeding the two previous years. The extent and nature of the work under way or projected in shipyards promises an even greater growth for the current fiscal year.

American tonnage now has attained practically the former maximum of 1861. The figures of 1901 compared with 1861 show an increase in coasting trade vessels from 2,704,544 tons to 4,582,683 tons (two-thirds of this increase being on the great lakes), a decrease in foreign trade vessels from 2,496,894 tons to 879,595 tons and a decrease in whaling and fishing vessels from 338,375 tons to 61,940 tons.

Of our total tonnage 3,623,201 tons are wooden vessels and only 1,901,017 tons are iron and steel. In 1900 Great Britain launched 1,440,000 tons of steel vessels.

Porto Rico appears in the returns with 25 vessels of 5,297 tons and Hawaii with 64 vessels of 37,149 tons. In the Philippines 2,340 vessels of 102,581 tons, of which 149 vessels of 43,598 tons are steam vessels, are under American protection. Until congress has so enacted, the report says, Philippine vessels are not vessels of the United States.

Although registered American vessels increased 62,435 tons during the year, American vessels carried only 8.2 per cent of our exports and imports, the smallest percentage in our history.

Our fleet of ocean steamers in foreign trade, the report says, is too small to be compared with those of foreign nations. The fleets of each of the four large British and German steamship corporations exceed the American fleet in tonnage, mileage and business.

The tonnage built and documented in the United States during the past fiscal year comprised 1,580 vessels of 433,460 gross tons.

The steel vessels under construction or under contract during the current fiscal year will much exceed similar tonnage built in any previous year. The bureau is advised of 89 such merchant vessels of 355,645 tons, to be valued at about $36,000,000. Besides these, 71 naval vessels of 281,148 tons displacement are building. In this work 44 plants, with a capital of $68,000,000, employing about 46,000 men, are engaged.

May Revoke Dr. Walker's Pension.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The pension bureau is investigating utterances attributed to Dr. Mary Walker, the ex-army nurse, who has worn masculine attire in recent years and who is alleged to have called the execution of Czolgosz, the late President McKinley's assassin, a murder and the late president himself a murderer on account of his policy in the Philippines. A special examiner of the pension office is at Oswego, N. Y., investigating the matter, and his report will be kept on file at the bureau here in readiness for submission to congress in case that body should call for it. Commissioner Evans explained that he had no authority to revoke the woman's pension, but that congress could do so if it desired.

McKinley Monument Plans.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The plans of the two associations formed for the purpose of erecting memorials to the late President McKinley—the monument at Canton and the memorial arch at Washington—were the subject of an informal conference yesterday afternoon between Senator Hanna and Secretary Cortelyou, representing the Ohio organization, and Commissioner H. B. F. MacFarland of the Washington Memorial association. There was a general comparison of notes regarding the work undertaken by the two bodies and an exchange of ideas as to the methods adopted for raising money.

Made Prince of Wales.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Duke of Cornwall and York has been created prince of Wales and earl of Chester. By conferring the title of prince of Wales upon the Duke of Cornwall and York King Edward is following precedent, the example having been set more than 500 years before by Edward III., the most famous of the Edwards, who in 1337 created his eldest son, Edward, duke of Cornwall and later conferred the title of prince of Wales upon him.

The Burning of Leaves.

Public attention has been called to the burning of leaves by the death of little Elizabeth Forristel, whose clothing caught fire from a bonfire and caused the fatal injuries. A year ago the advisibility of public disposal of leaves was seriously considered here in the city and the plan had some strong advocates. The chief arguments against the wholesale burning of leaves in the city streets are the danger to the small children and the smudge which almost inevitably follows the bonfires.

The way in which many of the heaps of burning leaves are left to take care of themselves is carelessness, almost criminal carelessness. While the schools keep the children indoors most of the morning and part of the afternoon, the streets are almost crowded with them when on their way to and from school at certain periods. These blazing leaves have their fascination for the little ones and they soon gather about the blazing heap. The danger they are thus exposed to is a serious one. Let every parent think what it would mean to see the little one brought home burned beyond recognition, perhaps, or suffering fearful agonies.

The complaint is made that it often requires too much time to stand and wait for the leaves to burn. They often smoulder for hours. But this is the result of going about their destruction in the improper manner. Like everything else, there is a right way and a wrong way. If properly attended to the leaves can be consumed in a very brief space of time. Then there need be no excuse for leaving such a menace to the lives of the many small children who roam the city streets.

The proper way to burn leaves is well explained by the Elizabeth Journal in a recent editorial on this same question. It says:

But there are different ways of burning the leaves. There is a right way and a wrong way. Some people rake them all up in great heaps and set fire to them. This is the wrong way. The leaves pack, and smoulder, and smoke; burning slowly for hours at a time. Particularly is this the case if the heaps are made up and set on fire in the morning, when the leaves are more or less damp. There is another way of burning leaves and it is far less objectionable. After they are raked together into the place where they are to be burned, spread them out into a kind of loose covering, not more than six inches or so in thickness. Then set fire to them and they will burn very quickly. Let those who have no other method of getting rid of leaves try this way of burning them. First see, however, that they are thoroughly dry. It will prove far more preferable to burning them in heaps, as so many people now do.

The troubles at Paterson and Passaic in securing the election returns until many hours after the balloting was over has caused a renewal of the interest in voting machines. There is no doubt that a voting machine is the ideal method of registering the ballots It is only a question as to when these machines can be brought down to a practical basis and built at a price which is not practically prohibitive. Such machines have been used in the past and found to be failures. The failure was not in the theory, but rather in the actual working of the machine itself.

According to the predictions of the Trenton correspondents, Senator Joseph Cross, the Union county representative in the Upper House, will be elected president of that body while Senator Charles A. Reed, of Somerset county, will be the leader of the Republican forces on the floor of the Senate Chamber. There is no county in all New Jersey which is better represented in the Senate than either Union or Somerset. Both are particularly able men.

A New York advertiser is quoted by the Philadelphia Record as saying: "A man may or may not read a poster in a way to receive a distinct impression, for the mind is not always receptive. A man may read a circular or he may toss it into the scrap basket. The daily newspaper, however, he buys voluntarily because he wants to read it. He may not read my advertisement the first day or for many days, but some day he will read it, and will take it all in. That is why I regard the newspaper as the one efficient medium of publicity."

Do not let an opportunity slip by to impress upon the officials of the Plainfield Water Supply Company that meters should be installed in this city. There is no fairness in this present method whereby the charge is made according to the number of taps. Suppose you had to pay for your gas according to the number of burners? Let the water company officials explain the difference if they can.

Special attention has been given by the men at the head of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association to the men's meetings which are held every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Good speakers are secured and special musical features are provided. They have proved one of the best attended series of meetings given under the auspices of the association.

One of the most remarkable victories in the last election was of Mark Fagan, the Republican candidate for mayor of Jersey City. Right in the heart of Robert Davis' bailiwick he succeeded in winning out from the Democratic choice. But the struggle was such a severe one that the Mayor-elect is now compelled to go away to recuperate.

A number of communications lacking the name of the authors have been received at this office. It should be remembered that even if the communication is published with an anonymous signature, it is absolutely necessary for the editor to know who was the writer. Anonymous communications will be given no consideration.

For those who are completing their winter outfit, there was much interesting reading in the advertising columns of yesterday's Daily Press. Today's issue also contains some excellent offers that are worth reading carefully.

A Hunterdon county newspaper gives its readers to understand that the Pan-American Exposition was a financial loss to the amount of $400,000,000. There is evidently something the matter with the arithmetic of that editor.

Having passed through the critical times of election the people of the State will soon be preparing to give thanks to the Almighty for all the good things which have come their way during the past year.

The Pythian goat, "Colanthe," made quite a sensation when she visited here last evening.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

REVENUE REDUCTION.

Plans Formed to Lower the Receipts of Government.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Plans for reducing the receipts of the government and thus preventing the accumulation of a very large surplus in the treasury have taken definite shape. President Roosevelt, Secretary Gage and leading Republican members of the ways and means committee of the house hold the same view in regard to the one important feature of the proposed reductions, and the matter has approached a definite conclusion since Representative Payne and other members of the committee arrived in Washington.

It is proposed to reduce to a considerable extent the gross receipts from internal revenue taxes, and this will be done, if the plans of the leaders are carried out, by repealing certain sections of the internal revenue law at the next session of congress.

It is recognized now that the repeal or amendment of several provisions of the war revenue law last winter will not result in nearly so great a reduction of the gross receipts from internal revenue as was expected. The secretary of the treasury and the chief members of the senate finance committee estimated that the amendments would have the effect of reducing the internal revenue receipts during the present fiscal year by about $40,000,000. Four months of the year have gone, and the reduction in revenues over the amount received last year, when the war revenue law was in full operation, has amounted to less than $8,000,000, which is at the rate of less than $24,000,000 for the whole fiscal year.

CITY HALL WRECKED.

Riotous Mob Breaks Up a Hearing at Salem, Mass.

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 9.—A riotous outbreak which resulted in practically wrecking the interior of the city hall attended the hearing of charges brought against the police by Mayor Hurley. The hearing continued from 7 o'clock in the evening until 4 o'clock in the morning, interrupted frequently by partisan demonstrations on behalf of the principals involved.

The crowd finally poured out through the doors into the corridors, apparently determined to cause as much damage as possible. Chairs and settees were overturned, ceilings and walls were defaced with tobacco stains and finger marks, and windows and gas fixtures were broken and ruined.

The damage done will reach several thousand dollars. The hearing will be resumed next Monday evening, when the defense will present its case. The charges brought by the mayor against the police are not serious in nature, being merely infraction of minor regulations, but they have aroused great interest.

Under Eastern Control.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—The control of the Market Street Railway company has passed to a Baltimore syndicate, represented by G. R. Webb, who has departed for Baltimore in possession of the papers necessary to complete the transaction. Securities representing a value of $250,000 were deposited by Mr. Webb as a guarantee on the part of the purchasers. Messrs. Hellman, Huntington and other large holders of the road's stock have agreed to sell their stock at par value and are to receive the price of their stock on the 1st of next March, when the Baltimore people will be ready to assume charge of the road.

First "Big Four" Game.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—The first of the annual games among the "Big Four" football elevens will be played this afternoon, when the University of Pennsylvania and Harvard teams will meet on Franklin field. The Cambridge players arrived here yesterday, and their coaches announce them to be in almost perfect physical condition for the contest. The Quaker men are also reported to be in fine fettle. Harvard will go into the game serenely confident of victory, while, on the other hand, Pennsylvania expects to be defeated.

Another Car Dynamited.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 9.—A Green Ridge car ran over a stick of dynamite last evening on Capouse avenue near Ash street. The wheel of the car was broken, and all the windows in the car were smashed, as were also the windows in the neighboring houses on both sides of the street. There were no passengers on the car. The motorman and conductor, nonunion men, were thrown from their feet, but not injured. This is the second case of the kind to occur within a week.

BOICE, RUNYON & CO.,
PARK AVE. AND RAILROAD

Those who are compelled by occupation to lead a sedentary life find Ripans Tabules a reliable cure for digestive ills. A Brooklyn, N. Y., stenographer says: "For years I have suffered with what I suppose to be dyspepsia, and what has always been called so by physicians who have treated me. It is peculiar, inasmuch as it comes on periodically every year about October and lasts for two or three months in spite of all the medicines I take, and then goes away, apparently having worn itself out. The symptoms are a sense of distress and heaviness in the chest, amounting to agony at times, and while not exactly a pain is more distressing even than pain, as all the time I suffer my spirits become depressed and my appetite is poor or capricious, and even when I feel like eating the dread of the agony it will cause me keeps me from it. During the spells I usually suffer also from constipation and flatulence. This year the attack came on earlier than usual (about the middle of July) and feeling that I could not stand the combination of heat and dyspepsia I looked around for something that might relieve me. A copy of your book on Ripans Tabules happening to be left in my office, I thought I would try them, and after taking two five-cent boxes I found my symptoms relieved, and while I still suffer somewhat at times, the distress is neither so constant nor so acute, and I have no doubt that in a few days I shall have entirely recovered, and this after having been treated by several doctors and taking quarts of nauseous mixtures that brought no relief. I find the 'tabule' form of medicine much more agreeable to take than liquid and can heartily recommend Ripans Tabules to any who have been troubled with symptoms like those above described. This testimonial is entirely unsolicited and you can use it for publication if you so desire. My trouble is doubtless aggravated by the sedentary life I am compelled to lead."

WANTED—A case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. They are for sale by druggists. Ask a druggist for them. Five P-I-P-A-N-S, 10 for 5 cents, may be had of druggists. The 10-cent carton is now in packages which will be mailed to any address for 12 cents, to be sent to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

LESSONS IN VANITY.

Small Girls Receive Their Teaching Early In Life.

"Children are no longer natural," declared my friend the old fashioned woman. "Even the tiniest of them are full of self consciousness. It manifests itself in their speech, in the way they trip along, in the very manner in which they adjust their curls or tweak their sashes. The small girls especially are miniature old women, and their one idea in life seems to be to eclipse each other as to frocks. It beats me to know how the little things get such ideas in their heads!"

"That's rather easy," I answered. "Let me show you," and I led the way to a corner of the park frequented by nursemaids and their charges. Fortune favored me. We had not been seated more than five minutes before the following little comedy was enacted directly before our eyes: Two smartly dressed maids appeared from opposite directions, each leading a little girl aged between four and five. The mites were dressed in the extreme of fashion, fluffy lace skirts, short silk coats with big collars and cuffs of fur, and great beplumed hats. Evidently the women knew each other, for they stopped to talk.

"Arrah, thin, and how is it wid yez, Norah?" the taller of the two exclaimed. "And would yez luk at the foine dress little Miss Ruth has on! It's her mother has the style! Oho, and this one'll be the great one, too, when she's grown and have all the fellers after her. Luk at the twinkle in thim oiyes! Sure and that's a gr-rand silk! It couldn't have cost no less than foive a yard. Pwhat's it lined wid darlint? Lemme see! Oho, the pretty pink satin! And would yez luk at the fither in her hat! My wur-rd, 'tain't another choild in this town has as handsome a one, barrin' Miss Maudie here. Turn around, Maudie acushla, and let Katie see yer gr-rand new bonnit!"

And the two mites preened and twirled themselves so that they might be admired while the two maids passed criticisms. Finally she whose costume had been declared the more costly of the two stuck her small chin in the air and with an expression which would have done credit to a veteran society leader disdainfully turned her back on her little rival.

The two servants chuckled with delight. "She's just loike her mamma fer all the wurrld!" they declared.

My friend turned to me. "Oh, the pity of it!" she sighed.

MAUD ROBINSON.

What to Say About the Baby.

For the benefit of those who are at a loss to know just what to say on seeing a new baby for the first time and who naturally feel that they must say something we give the following list of expressions, any and all of which are commonly used, there being no patent or copyright in them.

Whether you shall offer to kiss the infant depends somewhat on its age and appearance and the extent to which you are willing to sacrifice yourself in order to please the baby's mamma. The baby itself doesn't care a button for your feelings or your kisses, but you are expected to say:

"What a pretty little thing!"
"Bright eyed little chap, isn't he?"
"Why, how large he is!"
"I don't think I ever saw so young a child look about so."
"How much does he weigh?"
"What lovely, silky hair!"
"Looks very like you."
"What a little rosebuddy of a mouth!"
"How very wise he seems!"
"I really believe the little thing understands every word we say!"
"Oh, what a splendid big boy he is!"

My Lady's Tresses.

The prettiest decoration for the hair at the present time seems to be pearls, strings of which are twisted neatly and artistically amid its coils. The effect is particularly pleasing when the wearer has dark hair and is possessed of a good complexion.

Though this form of decoration for evening dress is spoken of as a novelty, it is in reality a very old fashion, as may be easily proved by a glance at a book of beauty or an inspection of the portraits of our ancestresses.

By the bye, the pearls need not be real. Indeed it would be far better that they should not be so, as contact with the hair would be likely to destroy their beauty.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

Into the details of the infamy at which I thus connived (for even now I can scarce grant that I committed it) I have no design of entering; I mean but to point out the warnings and the successive steps with which my chastisement approached. I met wtih one accident which, as it brought on no consequence, I shall no more than mention. An act of cruelty to a child aroused against me the anger of a passer-by, whom I recognized the other day in the person of your kinsman; the doctor and the child's family joined him; there were moments when I feared for my life; and, at last, in order to pacify their too just resentment, Edward Hyde had to bring them to the door, and pay them in a check drawn in the name of Henry Jekyll. But this danger was easily eliminated from the future, by opening an account at another bank in the name of Edward Hyde himself, and, when, by sloping my own hand backward, I had supplied my double with a signature, I thought I sat beyond the reach of fate.

Some two months before the murder of Sir Danvers, I had been out for one of my adventures, had returned at a late hour, and woke the next day in bed with somewhat odd sensations. It was in vain I looked about me; in vain I saw the decent furniture and tall proportions of my room in the square; in vain that I recognized the pattern of the bed curtains and the design of the mahogany frame; something still kept insisting that I was not where I was, that I had not wakened where I seemed to be, but in the little room in Soho where I was accustomed to sleep in the body of Edward Hyde. I smiled to myself, and, in my psychological way, began lazily to inquire into the elements of this illusion, occasiantlly, even as I did so, dropping back into a comfortable morning doze. I was still so engaged when, in one of my more wakeful moments, my eyes fell upon my hand. Now the hand of Henry Jeckyll (as you have often remarked) was professional in shape and size; but the hand which lay before me on the coverlet was hard and hairy, and of the texture of that I was accustomed to see. It was large, firm, white and comely. But the hand which I now saw, clearly enough, in the yellow light of a mid-London morning, lying half shut on the bedclothes, was lean, corded, knuckly, of a dusky pallor, and thickly shaded with a swart growth of hair. It was the hand of Edward Hyde!

I must have started upon it for near half a minute, sunk as I was in the mere stupidity of wonder, before terror woke up in my breast as sudden and startling as the crash of cymbals, and bounding from my bed, I rushed to the mirror. At the sight that met my eyes, my blood was changed into something exquisitely thin and icy. Yes, I had gone to bed Henry Jekyll I had awakened Edward Hyde. How was this to be explained? I asked myself; and then, with another bound of terror—how was it to be remedied? It was well on in the morning; the servants were up; all my drugs were in the cabinet—a long journey down two pairs of stairs, through the back passage, across the open court and through the anatomical theater, from where I was then standing horror-stricken. It might indeed be possible to cover my face; but of what use was that, when I was unable to conceal the alteration in my stature? And then with an overpowering sweetness of relief it came back upon my mind that the servants were already used to the coming and going of my second self. I had soon dressed as well as I was able, in clothes of my own size; had soon passed through the house, where Bradshaw stared and drew back at seeing Mr. Hyde at such an hour and in such array. Ten minutes later Dr. Jekyll had returned to his own shape, and was sitting down, with a darkened brow, to breakfast.

Small indeed was my appetite. This inexplicable incident, this ceversal of my previous experience, seemed like the Babylonian finger on the wall, spelling out the letters of my doom, and I began to reflect more seriously than ever before on the issues and possibilities of my double existence. That part of me which I had the power of projecting, had lately been much exercised and nourished; it had seemed to me of late as though the body of Edward Hyde had grown in stature, as though (when I wore that form) I were conscious of a more generous tide of blood; and I began to spy a danger that, if this were much prolonged, the balance of my nature might be permanently overdrawn, the power of voluntary change be forfeited and the character of Edward Hyde beccme irrevocably mine. The power of the drug had not been always equally displayed. Once very early in my career, it had totally failed me; since then I had been obliged on more than one occasion to double, and once, with infinite risk of death, to treble the amount; and those rare uncertainties had cast hitherto the sole shadow on my contentment. Now, however, and in the light of that morning's accident, I was led to remark that whereas, in the beginning, the difficulty had been to throw off the body of Jekyll, it had of late, gradually but decidedly, transferred itself to the other side. All things therefore seemed to point to this; that I was slowly losing hold of my original and better self, and becoming slowly incorporated with my second and worse.

Between these two, I now felt I had to chose. My two natures had memory in common, but all other faculties were most unequally shared between them. Jekyll (who was composite) now with the most sensitive apprehensions, now with a greedy gusto, projected and shared in the pleasures and adventures of Hyde; but Hyde was indifferent to Jekyll, or but remembered him as the mountain bandit remembers the cavern in which he conceals himself from pursuit. Jekyll had more than a fatherly interest; Hyde had more than a son's indifference. To cast in my lot with Jekyll, was to die to those appetites which I had long secretly indulged and had of late begun to pamper. To cast it in with Hyde was to die to a thousand interests and aspirations, and to become, at a blow and forever, despised and friendless. The bargain might appear unequal; but there was still another consideration in the scales; for while Jekyll would suffer smartingly in the fires of abstinence, Hyde would not be even conscious of all that he had lost. Strange as my circumstances were, the terms of this debate are as old and commonplace as man; much the same inducements and alarms cast the die for any tempted and trembling sinner; and it fell out with me, as it falls with so vast a majority of my felows that I chose the better part and was found wanting in the strength to keep to it.

Queer Notions of the Maharajah.

The possessions of some of the Indian maharajahs are ludicrous and wonderful sometimes. There is one of the richest rajahs who has a passion for acquiring things in bulk, and during his visit to England he astonished some of the tradespeople by ordering whole showcases of jewels or silver, sometimes a whole trayful of tooth brushes or a windowful of various scented soaps. In art also his purchases were equally expansive, and on one occasion he was so charmed with a picture that he ordered it to be copied three times, so that he might have one hanging on each wall of his favorite room. But perhaps the most extraordinary order which was ever given or undertaken was that for two dressing bags, one the exact duplicate of the other, and each of such enormous size that the two together were a camel's load. They were made of the ordinary brown leather, but inside they were most luxuriously mounted, and they cost $5,000 apiece.—N. Y. Sun.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

Country's Leading Industry Hampered by Lack of Transportation.

Little relief has been afforded the leading manufacturing industry in the matter of transporting facilities. In fact, the situation on the whole is less satisfactory since inability to secure coke has brought about the banking of some furnaces. This in turn tends to harden the market for pig iron, though no actual alteration in prices has occurred, except at Philadelphia, where 25 cents more a ton is readily paid.

As this industry is considered the best business barometer, present conditions and future prospects are certainly most encouraging, for orders are abundant and plants are enlarging capacity in order to handle the growing business. Material is purchased now for much structural work in the spring, and additional contracts are seeking acceptance. Railway needs were never as pressing, every form of equipment being sought, and it is possible that more orders will be placed abroad.

Textile mills in New England are busy, and there is no longer any fear of labor controversy at Fall River.

Footwear is firm at last week's advance, and eastern manufacturers are beginning work on spring orders. Shipments from Boston for the year thus far exceed last year's by half a million cases, according to The Shoe and Leather Reporter.

Weather conditions were the chief factors in determining price changes of staple products. Low temperature in grain growing states brought a higher level of quotations, corn rising 23 cents above the figure ruling at the corresponding date last year and 26 cents over 1899. On the other hand, wheat is moving out freely at both coasts, shipments from the United States for the week amounting to 5,651,472 bushels against 3,210,164 bushels in the same week of 1900 and 3,027,203 in 1899.

Failures for the week numbered 243 in the United States against 201 last year and 23 in Canada against 18 last year.

Arizona Bandit Killed.

PHENIX, Ariz., Nov. 9.—One bandit was killed and one injured as the result of an attempt by three masked robbers to hold up the gambling house of Deel & Co. at Naco, Ariz., a border town. The dead bandit has been identified as Will Cravens of Dog Springs, N. M. A group of gamesters and loungers obeyed when the desperadoes entered the saloon at a late hour and ordered "Hands up!" Cravens approached the roulette table and proceeded to fill a bag with the bank cash, amounting to several thousand dollars. E. Ellis drew a revolver before the movement was detected by the robbers, and Cravens fell dead when he fired. The other bandits were demoralized and fled in disorder. One of them was wounded by another bullet from Ellis' revolver.

Maryland Election Results.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 9.—Almost complete official returns show that Joshua W. Hering, Democratic state comptroller, has been re-elected by a plurality of 458 votes over Herman S. Platt, Republican. Thomas Parran, Republican, has been elected clerk of the court of appeals by a plurality of 1,258 over J. Frank Turner, the Democratic incumbent. The official count in Caroline county elects Jefferson, Democrat, to the house by a majority of four, in place of Stevens, Republican, who was reported to have been elected by a majority of one. This, however, is counterbalanced in Kent county by the election to the house of Kendall, Republican, by a majority of thirty-one over Johnson, Democrat, heretofore reported elected by a majority of five.

Cornell's Good Showing.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 9.—President Schurman of Cornell university today submitted his ninth annual report to the trustees at their meeting here. The report says that in addition to about 100 in special lines of instruction the number of students in all departments for 1899-1900 was 2,766 and for 1900-1901 was 2,980. The report gives the total property of the university, exclusive of the remnant of western lands, as $10,870,209.28. The receipts from tuition fees of the university rose to $172,015, an increase of nearly $30,000 over the preceding year.

Negro Desperado Hanged.

MADISON, Fla., Nov. 9.—Will Jones, a negro desperado, who recently killed three men in one day, two blacks and one white, and shot several other members of the sheriff's posse, was publicly hanged here yesterday. Several hundred people witnessed the execution, a number of whom were negroes. There was no excitement, though extra guards had been provided.

Maher Beats Jeffords.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 9.—Peter Maher put a sudden stop to the championship aspirations of Jim Jeffords of California last night in the second round of what was to have been a ten round contest before the Eureka Athletic club at Germania Maennerchor hall.

Secretary Root's Trip.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Secretary of War Root came to Utica at noon yesterday and left at once by special train for Clinton, where his brother is a member of the Hamilton college faculty and his son a student.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

After Thanksgiving it is not likely that there will be any events at the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. The events remaining to be decided will be concluded by that day. No doubt there will be playing on the course later in the season until the weather makes it impossible to play longer. Then the golf committee will officially close the course for the season. That will have to be determined entirely by the weather. Of late several private dinners on a small scale have been given at the clubhouse and they have been enjoyable affairs.

Funeral Service Conducted This Morning by Rev. Father McGeary, of St. Mary's.

Funeral services were held in St. Mary's church this morning over the remains of Mrs. William Feiring, who died at her home on Watchung avenue, Thursday. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends. Rev. Father J. A. McGeary officiated.

A touching part of the service was the rendering of "Nearer My God to Thee," by Elmer E. Bunyon, it being the request of Mrs. Feiring before her illness terminated fatally. At the close of the service the remains were interred in St. Mary's cemetery. Those who acted as pall bearers were Daniel Shea, Charles Flynn, Herbert Overbaugh, William DeMeza, Walter L. Heitfield, Jr., and David Angerbauer.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

The Mayoralty campaign in New York lasted thirty-two days and cost about $1,500,000. Tammany's share was nearly a million dollars. But the international yacht race cost still more. The New York Yacht Club went to an expense of a million dollars. It costs money nowadays to run municipal election campaigns and hold yacht races.—Newark Advertiser.

Perseverance Lodge in entertaining its women friends.

The committee in charge during the entire evening consisted of City Judge William N. Runyon, chairman, assisted by Donald McInnis, Samuel Robinson, Samuel Clouston and Joseph Blimm.

Since "Miss Calanthe" left Bangor, Me., early in the year, she has been in charge of twenty-six Pythian lodges and has paid eighty-eight fraternal visits. She will continue to call on her K. of P. friends until next summer, when she will attend the annual convention of the order to be held at San Francisco. On commencing her journey she was provided with a shield, bearing the insignia of the Pythian order, on which the lodges she was to visit were instructed to engrave their names. This shield has already been filled and a second was started by Volunteer Lodge, of Elizabeth. Perseverance is the second to inscribed its name upon it. She has also been adorned with various costly emblems which in themselves make a unique collection. These were not exhibited last evening, but will probably be shown on her next appearance.

ALL DESIRE EARLY CLOSING

REV. CORNELIUS SCHENCK MADE SHORT ADDRESS YESTERDAY.

Said That Both Employers and Employes Favor It, But the Decision Rests With the People.

Prior to the regular preaching service at Trinity Reformed church yesterday morning, Rev. Dr. Schenck, the pastor, made a few remarks in reference to the early-closing movement in this city. Members of the Retail Clerks' Association, at whose request the remarks were made, attended the services as they have other similar ones held in the city churches.

Dr. Schenck said that there seems to be no difference of opinion between the clerks and merchants as to the desirability of early closing, that it is not a case of the clerks trying to wrest something that the merchants are not inclined to give. He said that an appeal had been made to the public to assist in this movement, and it rests entirely with them whether it will be a success. He considered the merchants in the light of public servants and it is the public that regulates the attitude of the merchant.

Dr. Schenck spoke of the tendency nowadays toward shorter hours and and referred to mechanics who work eight hours a day. This he considered in the line of progress. The early closing makes it possible for the employe and employer to be stronger and brighter for the next day's work. The speaker thought that, as far as possible, clerks and all employes should have as much of the evening to themselves as possible.

He referred to the women clerks and entered a plea for shorter hours for them. The early closing, he said, keeps the crowds off the streets so that persons may have time for rest and healthful recreation. He likened the streets week-day evenings to a Sunday evening, and he was inclined to believe that temptations are less.

He urged his hearers to be reasonable and rational and to do unto others as they would like to be done by. He said that the remedy is largely with the class that is contending for shorter hours, and he asked those present to see that they make it no necessity for longer hours.

ALL ARE INTERESTED.

In The Entertainment at The Casino For Thursday Evening.

Much interest is being manifested in the forthcoming entertainment at the Casino Thursday night, in which Charles Battell Loomis, the author-humorist, and Miss Sally Frothingham Akers and her "singing Girls" appear, under the direction of Major J. B. Pond.

Mr. Loomis is known all over the country by his contributions to the Century, Harper's, Puck, Life, The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia, and many other periodicals. His long series of fairy tales for people of all ages which ran for nearly a year in the New York Sun under the title of "Yankee Enchantments," and his European series, "Some Americans Abroad," in the Century, brought him many new readers who will be desirous of hearing him on the lecture platform, for he is as charming with his voice as with his pen.

The selections of Miss Akers and her beautiful associates will be new and novel. They are said to be very superior vocalists and have caused a furore wherever they've appeared. Reserved seat sale now progressing at "The Apothecary's"—Armstrong.

SATURDAY WAS GREAT DAY FOR FOOTBALL.

Plainfield Elevens Participated in Some Exciting Contests on The Gridiron.

ROSEVILLE DEFEATED ALIS.

LEAL'S SCHOOL WON EASILY FROM A DOBBS FERRY SCHOOL.

Local Association Team Beaten by Boys From The Oceanic—Alis Second Went Down to Defeat by Westfield School Boys.

The devotees of football were out in force Saturday afternoon for several exhibitions of the game, both Rugby and association. The Leal's School eleven had an easy thing in the team from the McKenzie Academy. The Alis Second met a worthy foe from Westfield. The Alis A. A. succumbed to the Roseville F. C. at Roseville. An exciting game of association football resulted in the defeat of the local team by the boys from the S. S. Oceanic.

LEAL'S SCHOOL, 48; MACKENZIE ACADEMY, 5.

The Leal's school eleven had little difficulty in rolling up a score against the team from Mackenzie Academy, of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., in a game played on the Hope Common gridiron, Saturday afternoon. As it was the final score stood 48 to 5 at the end of the game, but the defeat would have been even greater had not the home team resorted to a kicking game in the second half in order to give the visitors a chance to get hold of the leather.

The Leal's boys outweighed the Mackenzie players, but it should also be said that they demonstrated far greater ability in the game as it should be played. It was easy for the Leal's half backs to smash through the visitor's line at any point and speed down the field for a touchdown.

Donald McGee set the pace within three minutes after the kick off, when he made a touchdown on a run from the centre of the field Ralph Schoonmaker kicked the goal. William Schoonmaker repeated the performance from the Mackenzie's forty yard line about two minutes later, but his brother Ralph failed to send the ball between the bars Then followed two more touchdowns, both made by Ralph Schoonmaker, one on a dash of seventy yards and the other on a run of but ten yards less. He also kicked one goal from a touchdown.

Towards the end of the half the Leal's boys got the ball up the field on a punt dangerously near the Mackenzie goal line, and the visitors' full back attempted to kick, but was thrown and he fumbled the ball. Right tackle Baird, of the Dobbs Ferry team, fell on the pigskin behind the line, and two more points were added to the home team's score by this safety.

At the end of the first half the score stood 24 to 0. When the second half began the home team decided to play an open game in order to give the visitors a chance. Throughout the half kicking was the feature, but it did the Mackenzie players little good. Donald McGee and Ralph Schoonmaker each carried the ball over the visitors' line, and each kicked two goals. In order to make the half a trifle more interesting the Leal's team resorted to attempts at goals from the field and one ended disasterously. The kick fell short, the ball rolling over the line. Quick as a flash Vail, of the visitors, grabbed the pigskin and shot down the field, planting the bal safely behind the Leal's goal posts. West failed to kick the goal.

LINCOLN GRAMMAR SCHOOL, 11; ALIS SECOND, 0.

A snappy game was played between the Lincoln Grammar School eleven, of Westfield, and a local aggregation calling itself Alis Second, on the Hope chapel common, Saturday afternoon. The visitors administered a defeat to the Plainfielders to the tune of 11 to 0.

The game preceded a contest between the Leal and Mackenzie School teams, and because of the short time allowed for this contest the two halves were merged into one of thirty-five minutes' duration without time between. During the whole game the Plainfielders were on the defensive. The Westfield backs broke through the Alis Second line wherever they pleased. Standing out as a feature of the contest was the remarkable tackling of the visitors.

Glick, the left end of the Westfield team, made the first touchdown on a long run and Wilcox, the visitors' fullback, went over the goal line for another as a result of steady hammering of the Alis Second's line. Wilcox kicked but one goal on the two opportunities offered.

ROSEVILLE F. C., 5; ALIS A. A., 0.

The Alis A. A. boys, of this city, met defeat at the hands of the crack Roseville Field Club eleven on Amphere Field, Roseville, Saturday afternoon. While the teams were fairly well-matched as to weight, Roseville's superiority in team play was what turned the tide in its favor.

Cuming's work around the end and Rapalje's line bucking were the chief causes for Alis' gains. Jacobus, of the home team, made the star play of the afternoon, a thirty-yard run around the end.

Roseville kicked off in the first half, but as Alis could not gain T. Smith punted. Waring caught the oval, but was thrown without a gain. On the first play Roseville fumbled and lost the ball, but recovered it a moment later by a fumble of Cuming. The ball was on Roseville's forty-yard line and Roseville started to carry it down the field. Line plunges by Price, Briggs and Edmonston gained thirty-five yards, which brought the ball to Alis's thirty-five-yard line. Jacobus got round the end on the next play and was downed on Alis's five-yard line. Roseville was held for two downs, but on the third attempt Edmonston went over the goal line for a touchdown. Waring missed the goal. Score: Roseville 5, Alis 0.

T. Smith kicked off, and Roseville was carrying the ball down the field and had it on Alis' forty-yard line when time for the first half was called.

T. Smith kicked off in the second half to Joerschke, who made no gain. Roseville started line-bucking, but was held for downs on Alis' forty-yard line. Waring attempted a drop kick, which fell short, and Alis got the ball. After being unable to gain, G. P. Smith punted, and Roseville on successive end runs carried the ball to Alis' five-yard line, where they lost it on downs. Alis gained only five yards and an attempted kick being blocked, Roseville got possession of ball on Alis' ten-yard line, but being unable to gain, Waring again attempted a drop kick. The ball went over Alis' goal line and G. P. Smith kicked it out from the twenty-five-yard line. After a couple of plays Waring kicked and Alis had carried the ball to the middle of the goal when time was called.

The line up:

PLANNED HER OWN FUNERAL.

Mrs. Waldemar Christofferson Passed Away Yesterday After Long Illness.

After an illness extending over a year, Mrs. Waldemar Christofferson passed away at her home on Richmond street yesterday morning. On the Warpath.

The Councilmanic steet committee is after the property owners in this city who should lay sidewalks but have refused to pay any attention to notices sent them. It is the purpose of the committee to lay these walks and charge the expense against the property owners. In the opinion of the committee there should be a substantial walk in front of every property, and board walks are considered worse than no walk at all.

Dropped in to Help.

Miss Anna Metler, of West Second street, was given an agreeable surprise Friday evening, by twenty of her young friends who called to assist her in celebrating her birthday. The hours passed quickly in playing games, after which refreshments were served. Guests were present from Somerville, Westfield, New Market, Oak Tree and this city.

PUTTING THE EMPHASIS IN THE RIGHT PLACE

Sermon to Young Men by Rev. Cornelius Schenck at Trinity Reformed Church.

WHERE EMPHASIS SHOULD BE

TOO MANY YOUNG MEN DEVOTE ENERGIES TO TEMOPORAL MATTERS.

Fritter Away Strength and Energy on That Which is Secondary—A ways a Chance to Put Forth the Best Effort in Life.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, preached a sermon last evening to young men in support of the Y. M. C. A. Previous to the discourse, F. E. Smith read a statement from President Cahoone, of the association, setting forth some of the work accomplished during the past year. The thirty-fifth year of the association's existence commences this month.

Dr. Schenck took for his text, "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." The subject of the sermon was "Is the Emphasis Misplaced?" The pastor said that many young men fritter away their strength and energy on that which is secondary, when primary matters should be considered.

How is it possible to misplace emphasis in life? said Dr. Schenck. "There is always a chance to put forth the best effort in life. The Jew in the time of Christ put his emphasis on the good, but when Christ came He had something better to offer. The Jew was satisfied, however, with the good. Many young men do the same thing. They place the accent in the wrong place. The young man joins the church. That is good, but there is something better. Many young men misplace the emphasis when they devote their entire time to getting on in the world. There are people who labor solely for that purpose, to get money.

"When the cares of the world absorb everything else, then the emphasis is misplaced, and when one spends his days in a desire to laugh and be amused, the accent is in the wrong place. Instead of the question being 'What are we interested in?' it should be 'What ought we to be interested in?' Don't make the last things first. "Seek first the kingdom of God.' Let nothing else come between you and that which is essential above all else.

"Life is short and eternity is long. Seek the real treasures, the 'Pearl of Great Price,' and other things will come in their natural order. Let Jesus Christ be first. It does not make a man small to be a Christian. Seek Christ and put the emphasis where it belongs and, then when you die, your life will be a glorious success."

AT THE THEATRES.

Newark's newest playhouse, which that enterprising manager, F. F. Proctor, is building at Park place and North Canal street, is being rushed along with wonderful rapidity.

It is now only a question of a few short weeks before the decorators shall have finished their labors and the exact date of opening will soon be announced. This will certainly be considerably ahead of the Christmas holidays.

The theatre is being built for Mr. Proctor by the Lawyers' Building Company, composed of Newark's wealthiest and most enterprising business men. It will be the handsomest theatre in the eastern States outside of New York city.

The completed building will represent an outlay of nearly a quarter of a million. The interior will be finished in costly marbles and onyx; the floors will be of mosaic tile and the retiring rooms will amaze most playgoers.

It may be definitely announced that the scale of prices will be very low, a matinee will be given every day in the week and that high class vaudeville will form the character of the inaugural entertainment.

Modern Surgery Surpassed.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, "says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

CAUGHT BY CONVICTS

Kansas Sheriff and Deputy Held by Escaped Prisoners.

RELIEF FORCE BOLDLY OUTWITTED.

Three of the Fort Leavenworth Desperadoes, Using Their Prisoners as Shields, Make Their Escape Between a Cordon of Police.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 11.—Sheriff Cook and Deputy Sheriff Williams of this county were captured by two escaped convicts from the Fort Leavenworth military prison at Pauline, five miles south of Topeka, and held prisoners in the farmhouse of a man named Wooster for several hours. The convicts finally escaped between a line of police sent from Topeka to re-enforce the sheriff and are now at large. Both were slightly wounded. Wooster was badly wounded by one of the convicts when he tried to fire on them. Mrs. Wooster and Sheriff Cook were held before the convicts as a shield by the prisoners in making their escape. A posse is in pursuit.

At 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon some farmer boys near Pauline learned that the convicts were in the neighborhood. Hastily forming a posse, armed with target rifles, pistols and clubs, they gave chase. Neither of the convicts was armed, and they were unable to make a stand. Later Sheriff Cook and Deputy Williams arrived. Coming upon the convicts, both officers fired, wounding the men, but not disabling them.

The convicts then fled through a small opening in the timber and ran into the house of Farmer Wooster. Sheriff Cook telephoned to Topeka for assistance and then took up the chase. Thinking the convicts had run around the house, Cook darted through the open door, intending to surprise them at the rear door. But instead of this the convicts had gone into the house, and the officer almost fell into their arms.

Sheriff Cook was ordered to give up his gun, which he did. Deputy Williams by this time had reached the house and entered without knowing what had happened inside, and he, too, was made captive by the convicts.

In the meantime Chief Stahl of Topeka and eight officers were on their way. They arrived at the Wooster house an hour after the officers had been imprisoned. Chief Stahl immediately began negotiations with the convicts to give up their prisoners and to surrender themselves, but the convicts only laughed. Farmer Wooster then managed to get a gun and was about to make an attack on the convicts when one of them laid him low with a blow from the butt of a revolver taken from one of their captives. The convict broke Wooster's right hand and made an ugly gash in his head.

One of the convicts told Sheriff Cook that he would be killed if he made the slightest move looking toward their capture. In the meantime the police officers on the outside had surrounded the building, but were afraid to make a move for fear that Cook and Williams would suffer.

Mrs. Wooster had fainted during the excitement. She finally revived, and at 7 o'clock the convicts placed the woman and Sheriff Cook in front of them as shields and made for the door.

Then, after exacting a promise from the sheriff that he would not permit any of the officers outside to fire on them, they started for the open.

As they left the house, the frightened farmer, his wife and the submissive sheriff before them, the convicts passed between a cordon of police, who easily could have captured them, and started for the railroad track. The sheriff in turn had exacted a promise from the police that they would not molest the convicts, and they did not.

After covering a considerable distance down the track the convicts suddenly disappeared through a hedge fence, bidding the officers a mocking farewell. One of the police sergeants later said he could have easily touched the leading convict with his hand as he passed.

The convicts had secured a good start before the officers recovered from their surprise. Then some of the policemen wanted to pursue, but Sheriff Cook would not permit it, as he had promised the convicts immunity from arrest.

KEEP YOUR BLOOD CLEAN

Testing a Waiter's Patience.

"Do I have any odd people to wait on?" said the waiter. "Well, rather, and it isn't the cranks and particular sort of people who give the most trouble. They know what they want, and you can find out and give them good service. It's the fresh guys that get us riled. One fellow who comes in here regular and isn't bad on tips, either, gets me crazy. Every night when it's time for his dessert he says:

"'Waiter, have you any mince pie?'

"'Yes, sir,' I answers.

"'Is it good?'

"'Excellent, sir.'

"'Then bring me a portion of Camembert cheese,' he says.

"And he does this night after night. Sometimes he takes a table d'hote dinner, and then when I asks him if he wants roast chicken or stuffed veal he says: 'Yes, please.' He generally gets veal. I thought I had him once, but I didn't. He started his mince pie deal, and I says: 'Yes, sir, the Camembert is good,' and what does he do but say: 'Then I'd like a piece of cantaloupe.'

"Still, there's always a quarter in it for me."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Animals That Cast.

"In India, where I was a cornet of her majesty's hussars, I gave a good deal of attention to elephants," said Murray Garde, a salesman of automobiles, the other night. "What particularly interested me was the bold, original method an elephant has of getting down a hill when the gradient is too steep for walking. He sits calmly down on his hinderlands, you know, pushes off, and—bzz, bzz—he's at the bottom. It hurts, though. The friction, the inequalities of the descent, the tenderness of the hide, don't you know. But I only speak of this because the bears of your country remind me of it. The bears of Utah and Wyoming are the cleverest wild animals I have ever seen. They, too, slide down the precipices and the mountains, but they are more tender of themselves than the elephants. They cut bark from a tree with their teeth and claws in strips big enough to be sat upon comfortably, and on these toboggans they coast down the steeps of their wild country without any evil effects. A strange sight it is, I tell you."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

An Emperor's Genius.

Emperor William of Germany has proved himself a versatile genius, apparently at home in all sorts of fields of endeavor not usually associated with royalty. It is not surprising to note that he is giving close attention to the schooling of his children. While the crown prince is being initiated into student life at Bonn, the three younger boys, Eitel Fritz, August William and Oscar, are hard at work at Pleon, where they are subjected to a daily routine stricter even than that to which they are accustomed while at home. Every day they are up at 5:30, have their cold baths, then their breakfast and forthwith begin work. The eldest of the three younger brothers visits the first class of the cadet school, the second one attending the lower fifth and the third the upper third. They have made plenty of friends at school and take an active part in all the sports, being especially proficient in tennis and bicycling.—N. Y. Sun.

Confesses Bank Robbery.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 11.—John Callahan, who was arrested in the Union Iron foundry after an attempt to hold up the night watchman, has confessed to Chief of Detectives Desmond that he was one of the three men who robbed a bank at Turon, Reno county, Kan., in October, 1899. After the safe was blown the money was divided among the trio. They then rode twenty miles on a Missouri Pacific handcar to make their escape. Callahan, who says his home is in Cleveland, declares that since the robbery he has not seen his comrades. The authorities of Reno county have been notified of the arrest.

American Schooner Seized.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Exchange Telegraph company has received a dispatch from Lisbon announcing that a Portuguese gunboat has seized the American schooner Nettie and Lottie at Horta, island of Fayal, Azores, for clandestinely conveying twenty-six emigrants who were trying to avoid military service.

Three Miners Killed.

DAVY, W. Va., Nov. 11.—John Isaacs and Homer Frowbell, white, and Tom Coleman, colored, all miners, were killed near here by the accidental explosion of several kegs of powder in a shanty.

FULL SATISFACTION.

Sultan Signs Irade Settling All French Claims.

SPECIAL CONCESSIONS ARE GRANTED

France Orders Resumption of Diplomatic Relations and Recalls Admiral Caillard—Considered a Brilliant Victory.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The French foreign office has announced that the sultan has signed an irade for the execution of his engagements with the French government and that the Franco-Turkish dispute is now at an end.

Tewfik Pasha, Ottoman minister of foreign affairs, wrote a letter to M Bapst, councilor of the French embassy in Constantinople, notifying him of the signing of the irade, which, while settling the original French demands, accepts the fresh demands, as set forth in a dispatch to the Temps from Constantinople Friday, together with an additional clause by which the sultan pledges himself to consider as authorized in full right the foundations, extensions, constructions and repairs of the schools and religious and hospitable establishments which France may desire to carry out if the porte is advised of her intentions and makes no objections within five months.

France has thus received full satisfaction, and M. Delcasse on the receipt of M. Bapst's dispatch telegraphed him to inform Tewfik Pasha that diplomatic relations had been resumed and that M. Bapst should consider himself as regularly charged with the affairs of the embassy.

Instructions were also sent to Admiral Caillard at Mitylene to re-embark the marines and to return to Greek waters, which is understood to mean the vicinage of the island of Syra. Admiral Caillard will remain in the Levant some time longer.

M. Constans, the French embassador, will return to Constantinople very shortly.

The additional clause was conceded at the request of France in order to prevent future difficulties, such as the Turkish provincial authorities have often raised either on their own initiative or in consequence of instigation by the porte.

The Temps, which describes the result as "a brilliant victory for French diplomacy," says:

"The great merit of the government was in being able to restrict its action. Very serious difficulties might have arisen had France departed from her reserve. The favorable disposition shown to our representations abroad has been due to the fact that the civilized world has had opportunity during the last seven years to observe the progress of the anti-European movement in the sultan's councils. Frenchmen, Americans, Austrians, Italians and Britons have all been victimized by the sultan and his councilors. After the Armenian massacres and the successful war with Greece they thought everything was permitted to them.

"We hope the sultan will now understand his duties toward the civilized powers and toward his own subjects, unto whom he has taken solemn engagements which he has always disregarded. Otherwise Europe, which, thanks to the energetic action of France, is now able to reassume at Constantinople the authority she lost seven years ago, will applaud the initiative which the signatory powers of the Berlin treaty are reported to be about to take to extort from the sultan the execution of clauses too long fallen into disuse."

The Porte Settles Other Claims.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 11.—Baron de Calice, the Austro-Hungarian embassador, has secured from the porte a satisfactory settlement of several questions that were pending between Turkey and Austria-Hungary.

Iron Company Averts a Strike.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 11.—The community is greatly relieved by the action of the Temple Iron company in reinstating the alleged blacklisted men and thereby averting a strike of its 5,000 miners. What prompted the company to change its position cannot be ascertained, as none of the officials will discuss the matter. District President Nicholls of the mine workers expressed the opinion today that the Temple company made the concession at the instance of the other big companies, who feared the possibility of a general strike being precipitated.

Men Thrown Out of Work by Fire.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 11.—The fire at the works of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke company at Six Mile Ferry was less disastrous than at first reported. When the flames were finally subdued, it was found that enough of the works had been saved to reduce the loss from $100,000, as expected, to $25,000. Five hundred men will be thrown out of employment until the tipple is rebuilt.

Seven British Sailors Killed.

ATHENS, Nov. 11.—A terrible gun accident occurred Saturday on board the British battleship Royal Sovereign outside of Astako harbor. An artilleryman forgot to close the breech before the gun was fired. One officer and six artillerymen were killed outright, the bodies being terribly mutilated, and the captain and thirteen sailors were seriously injured.

Paul Revere Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Paul Revere, vice president general of the Sons of the American Revolution, is dead at Morristown, N. J., aged forty-five. He was a son of General Joseph Warren Revere, who fought in the Seminole and civil wars, and a great-grandson of Paul Revere of Revolutionary fame.

CASTRO DISLIKED.

Venezuela President and His Family Are Accused of Falsehood.

WILLEMSTAD, Island of Curacao, Nov. 11.—Advices received here from Capacho Viejo, dated Nov. 5, say that the report from President Castro to his brother, Celestino Castro, at San Cristobal, to the effect that the United States government "insists upon mediating between Venezuela and Colombia" caused the greatest excitement among the troops on the frontier. General Uribe-Uribe and General Modesto Castro immediately set out for San Cristobal to obtain details.

It seems that General Uribe-Uribe refused to believe the report, declaring that he had no fears as to the future of the Liberal cause, because President Castro had given him a cast iron pledge not to forsake him. "Should President Castro prove untrue to the Liberal cause," exclaimed General Uribe-Uribe, "the result would be his ruin. The war will enter Colombia before Christmas."

There is considerable feeling against the Castro family among the Colombian Liberals and along the frontier in consequence of a widespread rumor that Celestino Castro, who is commander in chief at San Cristobal, has been privately selling cattle to the enemy, the cattle being whisked across the frontier by means of alleged raids of Colombian Conservatives. During one of these raids a dozen soldiers were killed on both sides. It is said that the cattle changed hands at a prearranged price of $30 per head. The blood thus spilled is charged directly to Celestino Castro by the indignant people of Tachira.

From San Cristobal General Uribe-Uribe proceeded for Maracaibo.

Venezuelan Minister Resigns.

CURACAO, Nov. 11.—Dr. Eduardo Blanco, Venezuelan minister of foreign affairs, has resigned his portfolio. He will be succeeded by Dr. Pachano. The cause of the resignation was a disagreement regarding the Columbian question, particularly the answer of President Castro to the pan-American congress in the City of Mexico, which was sent without Dr. Blanco's knowledge.

CHARLESTON EXPOSITION.

Exhibitors and Exhibits Arriving. Buildings Being Pushed.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 11.—Exhibitors and concessionnaires are coming to Charleston in large numbers, and during the past two days a hundred carloads of exhibits have arrived here for the exposition. Mr. S. C. Meade, president of the New York state commission, and four other members and employees of the commission have reached Charleston by the New York Clyde liner Comanche; also twelve members of the advisory board of the architect in chief, Mr. Gilbert. The New York commission has come to inspect the New York state building and Mr. Gilbert's board for the purpose of advising with the architect as to the last few finishing touches on the marvelous work done.

Architect Huston of the Philadelphia building is here also to receive the building from the contractor. It is ready for the Liberty bell, which it will shelter during the exposition. More than 2,000 men are now employed on the exposition grounds, and the Midway city is going up like magic. The housing committee of the woman's department already has secured more than 10,000 lodgings for exposition visitors in private families and boarding houses. The usual rate for lodgings will be a dollar a day and for lodging and breakfast $1.25. Nearly every house in Charleston will be converted for the exposition period into a house of entertainment, and the sentiment of the community is against every attempt to exact heavy tolls of the visitors.

The railroads have agreed on low rates—30 per cent lower than the rates made for Buffalo—and the city council will pass an ordinance next Tuesday night for the protection of the roads from the scalpers. The attendance on the exposition promises to be at least twice what the promoters of the project expected, and the exposition will be the most artistic ever held in the south.

Ice Plant Burned.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Nov. 11.—The plant of the Lawrence Ice and Storage company was completely gutted by fire last evening. The damage amounts to fully $150,000. The plant was only completed and operations begun this fall, and all the expensive machinery was destroyed, only the bare walls being left standing. More than 28,000 pounds of ammonia were stored in the plant, and the fears of an explosion hindered the firemen. The fire started in the oilroom, and the watchman tried to fight the blaze alone until too late.

Freighthouse and Cars Burned.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 11.—The shipping freight shed of the Kentucky Central division of the Louisville and Nashville railway and the freighthouse of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway at Third and Rose streets, with many freight cars and their contents, have been burned. The loss is over $100,000.

Car Mobbed In Scranton.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 11.—An electric car on the Luzerne street line was attacked by a mob with stones. The nonunion conductor, John Kreider of New York, was struck on the head with a stone and badly injured. He was taken to a hospital. All the windows in the car were broken.

Bloodshed at Barcelona Elections.

NEWS FROM MISS STONE.

Her Captors Wax Severe to Compel Acceptance of Terms.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 11.—Information has been received here from Doubnitza that the band of brigands holding captive Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, called about a fortnight ago at the village of Smetchevo and subsequently proceeded to the monastery of Rilo, but the movements of the troops compelled the brigands to flee toward the frontier, where they are now in hiding.

It is also asserted that the brigands have recently been treating Miss Stone with more severity in order to exercise pressure and to compel a more ready acceptance of their conditions.

Consul General Dickinson is inflexible. He insists that the surrender of Miss Stone must precede or be simultaneous with the payment of the ransom. His attitude is justified by the known determination of some members of the band, particularly the captain, Yanne Sandansky, to kill Miss Stone and her companion as soon as the ransom is received owing to the fact that the captives have now acquired information concerning the secret committees.

Competent persons, however, express the opinion that the cupidity of the brigands will overcome their fear of revelations, and all such approve the declaration of Mr. Dickinson.

Saturday Mr. Dickinson made energetic representations to the Bulgarian government against the movements of the Bulgarian troops, reproaching the officials with the fact that notwithstanding their solemn promises to give him all assistance in their power their action was embarrassing the negotiations, retarding a settlement and placing in jeopardy the life of Miss Stone.

He made a definite declaration that the Bulgarian government would be held responsible for the death of Miss Stone and of all the consequences of her death should it be proved that the attitude of the Bulgarian government forced the brigands to kill their captives.

BRITISH WAR PLANS.

To Expel Cape Colony Invaders and to End Struggle Before Coronation.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—In a letter dated Oct. 23 the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail says: "Lord Kitchener and Sir John Gordon Sprigg, the Cape premier, have arranged a scheme for the expulsion of the invaders from Cape Colony. A joint commission of imperial and colonial military chiefs has been sitting here for some days past to draft a scheme. It is understood that this provides for the colony taking a large share in the future of the campaign and contributing largely toward its cost. Apparently a levy of royalists en masse is the idea involved."

According to The Daily News, Major General Ian Hamilton, who sailed Saturday for South Africa to act as Lord Kitchener's chief of staff, takes a plan prepared in London for a more vigorous campaign, with a view of ending the war before the coronation festivities begin.

"General Hamilton's appointment," says The Daily News, "is part of a plan arranged after the king's return from the continent about six weeks ago. Unless Lord Kitchener should decline to be complaisant the new scheme is likely to develop about the beginning of the year."

United States Paymaster Robbed.

PENSACOLA, Nov. 11.—Paymaster Stevens of the United States army arrived from Atlanta Saturday and before leaving that city placed in a hand satchel 200 silver dollars and $4,800 in paper money for the purpose of paying the several hundred artillerymen at Fort Barancas and McRea their salaries for the past month. When he reached the fort here, he opened his grip and found that all the paper money had been taken and only the 200 silver dollars remained. Amazement and surprise followed the discovery, and the news soon spread, becoming known here about midnight. The police were instructed to watch out for the treasure. Paymaster Stevens thinks some professional pickpocket followed him and relieved him during the trip. He cannot recall a single incident of the trip that would throw any light on the robbery, but has an idea the money was taken before he left Atlanta.

Irrigation and Indians.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Governor Murphy of Arizona in his annual report advocates the sale and settlement of the large Indian reservations within the territory, with the possible exception of the Navajo reservation in northeastern Arizona, and the government construction of reservoirs for water storage for irrigation in suitable localities, with canals leading to lands allotted the Indians. The governor says the latter action, in which Indian labor could be largely utilized, would help to make farmers of the Indians and that further maintenance of the tribal relations as now conducted and the retention of reservation agencies around which the Indians cluster and live in idleness on government rations most seriously retard the civilization of the Indians.

Steel Trust to Absorb Another Plant.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Negotiations are being carried on by J. Pierpont Morgan whereby it is expected that the Breaker island plant of the Troy Steel company will soon be absorbed by the United States Steel corporation. The plant, which is the largest in the state, has been idle for five years and is now in the hands of a receiver. At one time it employed over 3,000 men. During the past summer the buildings and furnaces have been repaired at a large expenditure.

COAL FOR OUR NAVY.

The American Product Being Scattered Everywhere.

CONSUMPTION LARGELY INCREASED.

Wonderful Naval Growth Shown by Admiral Bradford's Figures on the Increased Use of Coal For Ten Years.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—A striking illustration of the growth of the American navy is presented in the single statement in the annual report of Rear Admiral R. B. Bradford, chief of the equipment bureau of the navy, that he spent $2,275,111 the last fiscal year for 324,103 tons of coal at an average cost of $7.01 per ton. The report says that this was nearly 95,713 more tons of coal than was used during the preceding fiscal year. Ten years ago the coal consumption was 73,000 tons per annum. The domestic coal costs $6.20 per ton, and the foreign coal, of which there were used 105,066 tons, cost $8.50 per ton.

Admiral Bradford has scattered American coal all over the world wherever suitable storage could be found. He has placed 12,000 tons at Yokohama and 5,000 tons at Pichilinque, Mexico, and he has sent large quantities to Guam and to the Philippines. He carried 9,000 tons by water from the Atlantic coast to Mare island, California, where it came into competition with English Cardiff coal. They have averaged the same in cost—viz, $9.29 per ton, but at present, owing to the scarcity of American freight vessels, the best Cardiff coal is considerably cheaper at Mare island. It is recommended that two large steam 10,000 ton colliers be built to keep depots supplied in time of peace and to accompany the fleets in time of war.

Summarizing the work accomplished at various coaling stations during the year, the report takes up Cavite and says that the bureau is about to open bids for a 45,000 ton coaling station there. Efforts have been made to obtain a site for a coaling station at Cebu, but thus far without success. Coaling stations have been located at Port Isabella, Bassalin island and at Polloc, Mindanao.

A complete station has been established at Yokohama, Japan, and it is now fully stocked with coal. The same statement is true at Pichilinque, Mexico, where through the courtesy of the Mexican government our coal and colliers have been admitted to the station without port or customs duties. In the west a little work has been done at San Juan on the coaling scale, but Admiral Bradford expresses regret that little progress has been made in securing sites for other coal depots in the West Indies.

Tippecanoe Anniversary Celebrated.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 11.—The anniversary of the battle of Tippecanoe was celebrated yesterday with a very large attendance at the new tomb of General William Henry Harrison at North Bend, O., near this city. The late President Benjamin Harrison before his death had a new tomb built over the grave of his illustrious grandfather. Mayor Gleason of Cleves delivered the welcome address, which was responded to by Judge Bode of Cincinnati, the principal address being by Congressman Jacob H. Bromwell of Cincinnati, followed by Judge Connor, Captain McClung and others. A wreath of flowers was placed on the tomb by Carl Schmidt, president of the United German Singing Societies of Cincinnati. None of the members of the Harrison family was present.

Nova Scotia Town Suffers Loss.

PUGWASH, N. S., Nov. 11.—Fire during a gale of wind last night was followed by the complete destruction of every mercantile and several of the finest houses in this town. In all twenty structures were burned, with a loss in the aggregate of $50,000. The insurance is about one-third this sum. The fire was insignificant at the start in the Elliott block, but there being no fire apparatus the wooden structures quickly made a huge bonfire. The fire will be very severely felt, as many families, having lost everything, are homeless, and business will be paralyzed.

American Jockey Disqualified.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—C. T. Durnell, the American jockey and trainer, has been disqualified for life by the Jockey club on the ground that he deliberately remained at the post at St. Cloud Oct. 28 when he rode Londres in the Prix de Marly-le-Roi. Durnell protests that his remaining at the post was due to a misunderstanding. He says he has ridden for years in the United States, but has never been summoned before the stewards.

Gale on the Hudson.

NYACK, N. Y., Nov. 11.—A severe gale blew along the lower Hudson yesterday, compelling the ferryboats plying between Nyack and Tarrytown to discontinue their trips. Smaller craft in some parts of the river were swamped. A little damage was also sustained on land by the wind.

First Monument to McKinley.

TOWER, Minn., Nov. 11.—To this village belongs the honor of having erected the first monument in memory of William McKinley. The little town was filled with people yesterday at the unveiling. Governor Van Sant and other men of prominence were present in honor of the day.

Served The City Well.

Although the City Judge and the members of the Common Council were elected at the November election, their term of office will begin with the new year as before. The Councilmen will, therefore, not take their seats until the first meeting in January. Now, however, as the personnel of the new Council is known, it is not surprising that it should be tacitly decided who will receive the honor of presiding over its deliberations and who will be the chairmen of the most important committees.

The present president of the Council is John B. Dumont. He was entitled to the honor on account of his long term in that body. He has served for a longer time in the Common Council than any other member of that body. During that time, Mr. Dumont has always been a prominent factor in the Council. His intimate knowledge of the city's finances has made him an invaluable public servant. His watchful eye was ever of the alert for any act that would injure the city's financial standing and he has done much for which the people of Plainfield should be truly thankful.

During his service in the Common Council Mr. Dumont has always been a man of decided opinions. There was no doubt as to his position on any question of public import. He was either for or against it. A trifle bitter in his denunciation perhaps, he won the admiration of those he opposed by his ever honest support of his convictions.

It is a subject for much regret that Mr. Dumont has evinced a determination to retire from public life. There are very few men of his ability and character who are willing to devote their time and energies to the city's welfare. When such a man does come to the front a just appreciation of his worth should be shown. Mr. Dumont's services to the city of Plainfield cannot be measured. The city owes him a great debt and we are glad to add our voice to the deserved praise which should come to him now that his active participation in city affairs is almost at an end.

The successful workings of Elizabeth's new paid fire department, organized on the same lines as the department of this city, has not yet been publicly demonstrated. There is, however, no doubt that the county seat made a very good move in following Plainfield's lead. The local department has more than proved its efficiency. There is no city in New Jersey which has better fire protection than Plainfield has today. And what is particular interesting to the property owners, the fire insurance companies have realized that fact and have reduced the cost of insurance here.

The remarkable continuation of the dry spell this fall has had its effect on the city streets and many of the macadam surfaces are now sadly in need of a wetting. Watchung avenue, which was repaired early in the fall, has been affected by the drought. The street railway company stopped sprinkling the streets October 16, according to its franchise, and since then the roadway has been steadily growing worse.

Although the Union Veteran's Union of this city is one of the youngest branches in that organization, it is to be honored this year with the division encampment which begins tomorrow and continues through Wednesday. It promises to be an important affair. Many visitors will be entertained and the veterans are anxious that Plainfield's share of the work should be well done.

The bowlers are once more getting into form. With the opening of the bowling season The Daily Press Bowling League will resume its activity and an interesting contest is promised for the winter months. The Park Club will, as usual, put a team in the league with a determination to win out if possible.

Football has now assumed the position of chief importance among the outdoor sports and will continue its sovereignty until the close of this month. While golf is still being played, the early approach of twilight has prevented many from their usual participation in that game.

When the new Common Council settles down to work, it is possible that Councilman Lee will remember about his weights and measures ordinance and resurrect it. It is likely that when it appears before the Common Council, its old friends will hardly recognize it.

Good water meters are on the market but they are not cheap affairs. The Plainfield Water Supply Company will not put them in unless there is a general demand for them. Let the officials of the company know your desires in the matter.

Let the fence separating the tracks at the North Avenue station be painted white as a measure of safety. It would be better that many fences should be repainted than one life be lost.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and its Citizens.

Well, there was a thorough and practical trial of the Meeker law in the election Tuesday, and its good and bad features were revealed. On the whole, it was a beneficent law. Its radical and arbitrary provisions can be toned down by amendment. It demonstrated its uses in bringing out a full vote and in saving the expense of an extra election in the spring. When the people get biennial sessions of the legislature this law will make less cumbersome at least one election every other year, for then the candidates for the legislature will not be on the tickets. Apparently, all that is needed to make the Meeker law a success is the introduction of voting machines. The delay in the counting of the ballots Tuesday night shows the need of machines that keep the totals of the votes for all candidates complete as the election proceeds, and announce the results when the polls close.—New York Press.

TEA TABLE TALK

Short and Gossipy Sketches That Are Not Always News, But Just as Interesting.

The Laire family, especially the New Jersey branch, seems to make itself popular wherever located. A good example is shown by the election of W. R. Laire, of Belvidere, Warren county, to the assembly, running on the Republican ticket. When it is considered that Warren is a hot bed of Democracy and one of the four counties which gave Seymour a majority, it gives evidence that Mr. Laire is liked by his fellow townsmen. The assemblyman-elect is a brother of J. P. Laire, of LaGrande avenue.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

Chimney Fire.

A chimney fire occurred at the residence of George B. Fairchild, of Grandview avenue. Lafayette Rosenstiehl and other firemen subdued the flames with a chemical extinguisher.

A Physician Testifies

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

stays on the other side of the Atlantic, always finds time to learn a few new points in the game, and several of these were used to good advantage Saturday. The Oceanic men were adepts at passing the ball, and brought out many little moves which kept it in their opponent's territory the greater part of the time. In the first half they made two goals to Plainfield's one.

In the second half Plainfield rallied somewhat and blocked a number of fine plays, excellent work being done by McComb. The mass plays of the Oceanics was too much, however, and the visitors scored two again. Plainfield came to the fore with one. The goals for the locals were made by Campbell and Dodd, the latter shifting from goal in the second half.

Following is the line up:

Flower Farming for Perfumes.

The department of agriculture is anxious to encourage the growing of flowers for perfume-making in this country, and attention is called to the fact that conditions in the southern states, and particularly in southern California, are exceptionally favorable for industries of this kind. It is believed that in California the essential oil, or attar, of roses might be produced on an extensive scale to great advantage. An acre of land will give 1,500 pounds of rose-petals, from which five ounces of the attar may be distilled, and this quantity has a market value of from $45 to $85. The rosewater, a by-product, amounts to 300 gallons the acre, worth from 75 cents to one dollar a gallon.

Lavender gives a net profit of $100 an acre. Pure lard saturated with the scent of flowers (pomade) is worth from six dollars to $7.50 a pound. Cologne of the finest quality (obtained by soaking the saturated lard in alcohol) brings as much as $17 a pint.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Bulky Bible.

Count Otani's representative, who visited China during the campaign, received the Lima scripture, preserved in the Yong-ho-kung at Peking. "Received" is a euphemistic way of stating the fact. It is the expression used by Japanese papers in describing the manner of the scripture's transfer. But the accounts originally transmitted were not of a character to suggest ordinary giving and taking. They spoke of the Japanese Buddhists as very anxious to remove this celebrated scripture, and Gen. Yamaguchi as refusing to sanction the operation. Rumor then represented the volumes as sufficiently numerous and bulky to load 20 pack horses; so, by whatever process the scripture was secured, its transmission to Japan was no small undertaking.—Japan Daily Mail.

Prunes Stewed with Grapes.

Prunes cooked in this way are delicious. It takes a little time to prepare them, but is worth the trouble. Take two pounds of ripe Muscatel grapes, wash, strip from the bunches into a saucepan, add a very little water (distilled) and stew gently until tender, crushing the grapes to extract all the flavor and juice, then strain. Wash a pound of prunes, cover with the grape juice and stew until the prunes absorb most of the juice. Or the prunes and grapes can be stewed together, the grapes crushed and the seeds skimmed off as they rise to the top.—Good Housekeeping.

Publicity for Corporations.

In Great Britain the corporation laws provide for a great degree of publicity in connection with promotion of corporations and their regular management. There is a like degree of publicity for corporations in France, Germany and Austria, and in these latter countries there are such rigid provisions regarding the valuation of property and reports of promoters and directors that stock watering, in the ordinary sense of the expression as used in the United States, is almost, if not quite, an impossibility.—Cassier's Magazine.

Friend in Need.

"Say, pa, what does animadversion mean?"

"Animadversion? Just wait a minute, my boy, and I'll look it up."

"You needn't mind, pa. I only wanted to see if you could say it. That's one of the words I heard ma tell Aunt Mary she was goin' to spring on you when you came home late from the club. Here's the other two—'paraphernalia' and 'idiosyncrasy.' Better practice 'em up, dad, while you've got time."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

How Chinese Became Laundrymen.

Chow Tszchi, the Chinese consul of this city, is anxious to raise the social condition of his compatriots. He believes they could fill clerical positions advantageously to business men as well as to themselves, and obtain a better standing in the country than they now possess. He has given much thought to the subject of why they have made laundry work a specialty here, and believes he has found the reason. "When my countrymen first began to come to this country," he said, "in any numbers, mining was the great industry of California, and they drifted to the mining towns. There, I suppose, they were obliged to do their own washing, and not being strong enough for the heavy work of mining, they gradually undertook to do the washing for the miners, became expert at it, and gradually adopted it as a profession. Work of this kind is never done by men in China." —N. Y. Times.

Weak on Its Foot.

Jimson in a rash moment undertook to plant a new clothes post in the garden, and after much labor he delved out a hole into which he managed at length to coax the post to a perpendicular position, and he went indoors a proud and happy man.

Ten minutes afterward, however, he went out to feast his eyes again upon the spectacle of the family clothes post pointing skyward like a miniature telegraph pole, when to his consternation he found the late erection lying prone across the onion bed.

"You pushed it down, did you?" said Jimson, wrathfully seizing his youthful son and heir, who was playing about near.

"That I never, dad," replied the boy, earnestly; "a sparrow perched on the top an' overbalanced it. I seed him do it."—Spare Moments.

Posing Her Mother.

In an apartment house in this city lives a little girl called Hildegarde. She is very pretty, with yellow hair and blue eyes. To induce Hildegarde to eat bread her mother has often said to her: "Dearest, if you eat lots of crusts your hair will curl beautifully."

The other evening Hildegarde sat in a corner, gravely regarding her mother at her toilet. Finally she said: "Mother, when you were a little girl did you eat lots of bread crusts?"

"Indeed I did," the mother replied.

"Then why is it," said the inductive Hilda, who is only three years old—"why is it that now you have to use a curling iron?"—Philadelphia Record.

Its Use.

While a certain infantry regiment was stationed at Aldershot, it had among the recruits a country yokel who was such a great duffer that the drill sergeant could not beat anything into him.

One day, while the recruits were being inspected by the officers, the countryman seemed more awkward than ever. At last the angry drill sergeant shouted to him:

"Man, what is your head on for?"

"Why, to keep my collar from slipping off," was the ready retort.—Boston Globe.

Impossible.

Ostensible Head of the Family—Maria, there was a canvasser here to-day who wanted to sell me a work on etiquette and good behavior. Teaches it in six lessons. I told him I'd ask you if you thought we wanted it.

Real Head—It's all humbug, John. It can't be taught in six lessons. I've been trying to teach it to you for 16 years, and haven't succeeded yet.—London Spare Moments.

A New Product.

Vegetaline is a new product prepared from the cocoanut, that is being manufactured by a Marseilles firm. It is a kind of butter, which, it is stated, is especially adapted to the uses of bakers and confectioners. The article is harder and whiter than butter, which it only resembles in its fatty nature. It is obtained by refining the oil extract of the dried cocoanut.

Where Air Is Pure.

During the recent scientific expedition to Spitzbergen under the direction of Prof. Nathorst, the bacteriologist of the expedition made careful examinations of the polar atmosphere to determine the amount of impurities it contained. In more than 90 different places on Bear island, Spitzbergen and King Charles Land air was filtered and not a single germ was found in it, although over 20,000 liters of air were subjected to the test. Similar investigations were made in regard to the purity of the water, snow and ice. Even salt water from a depth of 8,000 feet was subjected to the bacteriological test. A few bacteria were found, but they were extremely rare. An examination of the intestines of different polar animals proved that the animals are almost free from bacteria. Only the polar gulls made an exception. In the intestines of polar bears and seals some bacteria were discovered, which resembled the bacteria usually found in human intestines.—Chicago Tribune.

He Was Sick.

"That boy of mine has got to turn over a new leaf," declared the well-known citizen, who it is doubtful really knows how much he is worth. "It isn't so much a question of money as it is teaching him its value. He has been away most of the summer, and the letters he has written home have been short but to the point—more money.

"Growing tired at last of his repeated demands upon my purse I ceased replying to them. Inside of two weeks I received three more demands, but ignored them all. Then he wired me, and I made no answer. "'Send money quick. Am sick.' he wired again.

"'With what?' I telgraphed back.

"'With waiting for cash,' he answered, collect.

"He got it. But I am going to have a talk with him when he gets back. It is time that he was doing something else besides spending money."—Detroit Free Press.

The Mushroom Season.

What is commonly known as the mushroom season is at hand, although there is really no special season, for mushrooms may be obtained almost the whole year through. But it is in the early fall that they are most plentiful and at their best. Those who tarry in the country until late in the autumn and rise at dawn, when the dew is heavy, to gather in the delicate pink gilled mushrooms, have the first right to nature's gift. Numerous rules have been given to distinguish the good from the bad fungus, but they are practically valueless to the amatuer mushroom gatherer. The only rule which can be relied upon is knowledge of the different varieties, gained by study and experience.—Science.

Ought to Be in Practice.

"I've been hearin', John," said the old farmer to the son who had just returned from college, "that ye spent a good deal of yer time in chophouses."

"Well, yes," admitted the boy, "I suppose I did frequent them quite a bit."

"I'm glad to know it, John," asserted the farmer with a sigh of relief. "I was afraid ye might git out of trainin' while ye was away an' fergit how to handle the ax. Our chophouse, John, is in the same old place right back of the kitchen, an' ye can't git to work there too soon to suit me. There's nigh onto six cords o' wood that needs to be cut up right away." —Chicago Post.

The True Source of Woman's Beauty.

A beautiful skin without any blemishes comes directly from good health, and the first step to health and to a beautiful skin is to get and keep the blood pure. The whole blood system is like a gorgeously colored Venice with red waterways, and little boats hurrying to and fro. The latter carry two kinds of messengers, market boys and scavengers. If these are both trained to accomplish their work every day then health and beauty are assured. If the blood is clear the skin is sure to be clear. — Ladies' Home Journal.

The Practical View.

"What is your belief concerning the possibilities in the higher development of the intellectual life?" asked the tall lady with the convex brow.

"I believe in plain loafing and high living," said the gross animal, who had long since lost his waistline and his ideals.—Indianapolis News.

Sittings of the Federal Convention Are Turbulent.

MANILA, Nov. 11.—The federal convention continues its meetings, but these are as a rule of a turbulent character, and very little is accomplished Personal bickerings prevent harmony Senor Buencamino challenged Senor Velasco to a duel, but the latter refused to fight on account of the age of the challenger.

Many provincial delegates have already left in disgust. Senor Sabells Reyes wanted to enter upon the minutes of the convention an expression of the regret felt by the delegates at the lack of interest displayed in the work of political organization. Thrice Senor Buencamino left the room, saying he would never return. In each instance he yielded to the persuasion of his friends that he should go back, and finally he tendered his resignation, but only to put in an appearance again at the evening session.

The question of the friars has been occupying much of the time of the convention. Intense antipathy is shown toward them, and the sense of the convention was practically unanimous that they must go.

According to advices from Catbalogan, capital of the island of Samar Lukban, the insurgent leader, has sent a message to General Smith declaring that he will not listen to negotiations for surrender until all the Americans have withdrawn from the Gandara valley.

General Smith has ordered every American soldier in the islands of Samar and Leyte never to be without arms, even at mealtime. He is determined that there shall be no more surprises, and commanding officers will be held responsible. General Smith also directs that scouting must continue incessantly and that all rice and hemp captured must be destroyed. He considers the capture of Lukban only a question of a very short time.

Incriminating evidence is accumulating against Gibson Easton, the representative of two of the largest firms in Manila, who was recently expelled from Samar on a charge of dealing with the insurgents, and he will probably be arrested and tried.

Lukban's commissary general, who was recently captured, says that both concerns had an agreement with Lukban to furnish 500 sacks of rice each yearly. He has given the dates of the delivery to men now in Cebu. The authorities have not yet decided as to the extent of the liabilities of the firms.

PAVING CONTRACT AWARDED.

Havana Municipal Council Favors a Jersey City Firm.

HAVANA, Nov. 11.—The municipal council of Havana has decided by a vote of 10 to 8 to accept the bid of S. P. McGivney and R. T. Rookeby of Jersey City, which is $10,398,015.99, for the Havana sewering and paving contract. Considerable feeling was manifested during the session over the circulation of a pamphlet insinuating that the McGivney-Rookeby bid was really the bid of the engineer's department.

Michael J. Dady has arrived here. He is still hopeful of being awarded the contract.

The Democratic party has adopted General Bartolome Maso as their candidate for the presidency of Cuba.

The papers assert that Senor Tamayo, secretary of state and government, has been challenged to fight a duel by a member of the Union club whom, it is said, Senor Tamayo and a friend assaulted at the close of the recent banquet given by the Cuban society to the visiting Chileans. Senor Tamayo was detained by the police, but ultimately released by the civil governor.

Light Vote In Ohio.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 11.—With almost half the official returns from the eighty-eight counties in Ohio received, it is estimated that the total vote may be 100,000 less than for governor two years ago, when 920,872 votes were cast, and almost a quarter of a million less than for president last year, when the total vote of Ohio was 1,040,121. Notwithstanding the increase in population during the past thirteen years, the total vote will likely be much less than for president in 1888, when it was 841,941, and probably less than has been cast for governor since that time, with a single exception.

Express Car on Fire.

SPENCER, Mass., Nov. 11.—An American express car attached to a morning train on the Albany division of the New York Central railroad train was found to be on fire at South Spencer, and after it was shunted to a side track the local firemen were called out. The car, which was a sealed one, contained miscellaneous goods, including some exhibits being returned from Buffalo. The losses will total several thousand dollars.

Two Scalded to Death.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 11.—Two steam fitters were killed and two others seriously injured by the blowing out of a valve in the water pumping apparatus at the Schwarzchhild & Sulzberger packing plant in Armourdale, Kan. Nothing could be done to rescue the men until the flow of steam had exhausted itself.

BOICE, RUNYON & CO.,

When a girl is 19 years old she ought to be a stranger to sickness. At that time in life she should be light-hearted, happy and well, but modern civilization seems to be responsible for this generation of weak women. A girl of 19 living in Tuckahoe, N. J., found her health breaking down two years ago. She became pale, thin and had poor appetite. Her stomach seemed to give out entirely. Great pain followed eating. She was also troubled with sore throat and catarrh. Seeing an advertisement of Ripans Tabules in the Philadelphia Record, she sent for some to the drug store and took them six months. "I am not entirely cured," she writes, "but I feel greatly benefited by their use."

WANTED:—A case of bad health that R-I-P-A-N-S will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R-I-P-A-N-S on the package and accept no substitute. R-I-P-A-N-S 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

EVENING GOWNS.

Flower Effects and Princess Dresses of Panne.

Very handsome evening gowns are made of black spangled net over some delicate color.

Flower dresses are among the winter novelties. For instance, supposing the rose to be the flower chosen. The entire gown is made of soft pink liberty silk, much ruffled and trimmed with different shades of the same color, the entire effect being soft and fluffy. Garlands of rose foliage beautifully embroidered appear here and there where they will give the best effect, and a couple of natural looking blossoms nestle a little below the left shoulder strap, and also appear among the folds of the train. In the hair a jeweled flower also appears. These gowns are dainty and youthful beyond all description.

Pin spotted panne, in black as well as all the evening shades, makes very rich princess gowns. These dresses are made almost entirely without trimmings. They depend for style on their exquisite cut and a good deal on the fine figure of the wearer. No woman without an irreproachable figure should venture to wear a princess dress.

The long coat in the illustration is made of fawn colored broadcloth with cuffs, collar and lapels of brown velvet, and also a pocket with a square lap of the same material. The garment is double breasted and is lined down to the waist line with satin of the same shade—a unique feature in the tucked flounce, which gives the decided flare to the lower part. Nowadays coats as well as gowns must flare.

The hat is a simple three cornered affair of brown felt trimmed with pale blue rosettes and a black and white quill. JUDIC CHOLLET.

THE LATEST SLEEVES.

Anything New or Original Is Fashionable.

Many are the vagaries of the fashionable sleeves. The plain tight fitting specimen is seen on all the strictly tailor made gowns, while the baggy kimono effect appears on many of the long garments. One noticeable fact is that the fullness is all below the elbow and that there is no increase in the gathers at the shoulder.

Some of the sleeves in heavy materials widen out suddenly into puffs, which are confined into a tight wristband. The straight sleeve ending in a flare over a wide frill is a welcome change from the small puff. In tea gowns and many evening dresses the sleeves end at the elbow, and at that point are edged with a wide frill of lace or accordion plaited chiffon.

Double and triple sleeves are new features this winter, each sleeve being made of different material. Sleeves and yokes shirred are the newest features of thin, dressy winter gowns. Anything new or original is fashionable providing that the tight fitting upper part of the sleeve is preserved.

A smart hat for a schoolgirl is made of tobacco brown felt trimmed with a twist of brown velvet run through a gold buckle and having two flame colored quills. Our illustration shows a hat of this description. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Poplar Branches.

Every traveler in France has been struck by the sight of multitudes of slender poplar trees growing by the roadsides and brooksides. Two or three times in twenty years the branches of these poplars are trimmed, and the light wood thus obtained is dried and sold to bakers, whose practical science has taught them that the quick, intense heat produced by burning poplar is excellent for giving a thick crust to their bread.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

Yes, I preferred the elderly and discontented doctor, surrounded by friends and cherishing honest hopes; and bid a resolute farewell to the liberty, the comparative youth, the light step, leaping impulses, and secret pleasures that I had enjoyed in the disguise of Hyde. I made this choice, perhaps, with some unconscious reservation, for I neither gave up the house in Soho, nor destroyed the clothes of Edward Hyde, which still lay ready in my cabinet. For two months, however, I was true to my determination; for two months I led a life of such severity as I had never before attained to, and enjoyed the compensations of an approving conscience. But time began at last to obliterate the freshness of my alarm; the praises of conscience began to grow into a thing of course; I began to be tortured with throes and longings, as of Hyde struggling after freedom; and at last, in an hour of moral weakness, I once again compounded and swallowed the transforming draught.

I do not suppose that, when a drunkard reasons with himself upon his vice, he is once out of five hundred times affected by the dangers that he runs through his brutish, physical insensibility; neither had I, long as I had considered my position, made enough allowance for the complete moral insensibility and insenate readiness to evil which were the leading characters of Edward Hyde. Yet it was by these that I was punished. My devil had been long caged, he came out roaring. I was conscious, even when I took the draught of a more unbridled, a more furious propensity to ill. It must have been this, I suppose, that stirred in my soul that tempest of impatience with which I listened to the civilities of Sir Danvers Carew. I declare, at least, before God, no man morally sane could have been guilty of that crime upon so pitiful a provocation; and that I struck in no more reasonable spirit than that in which a sick child may break a plaything. But I had voluntarily stripped myself of all those balancing instincts by which even the worst of us continues to walk with some degree of steadiness among temptations; and in my case, to be tempted, however slightly, was to fall.

Instantly the spirit of hell awoke in me and raged. With a transport of glee I mauled the unresisting body, tasting delight from every blow; and it was not till weariness had begun to succeed that I was suddenly, in the top fit of my delirium, struck through the heart by a cold thrill of terror. A mist dispersed; I saw my life to be forfeit and fled from the scene of these excesses at once glorying and trembling, my lust of evil gratified and stimulated, my love of life screwed to the topmost peg. I ran to the house in Soho and (to make assurance doubly sure) destroyed my papers; thence I set out through the lamplit streets in the same divided ecstasy of mind, gloating on my crime, light-headedly devising others in the future, and yet still hastening and still harkening in my wake for the steps of the avenger. Hyde had a song upon his lips as he compounded the draught and as he drank it, pledged the dead man. The pangs of transformation had not done tearing him, before Henry Jekyll, with streaming tears of gratitude and remorse, had fallen upon his knees and lifted his clasped hands to God. The veil of self-indulgence was rent from head to foot, I saw my life as a whole; I followed it up from the days of childhood, when I had walked with my father's hand, and through the self-denying toils of my professional life, to arrive again and again, with the same sense of unreality, at the damned horrors of the evening.

I could have screamed aloud; I sought with tears and prayers to smother down the crowd of hideous images and sounds with which my memory swarmed against me; and still between the petitions, the ugly face of my iniquity stared into my soul. As the acuteness of this remorse began to die away it was succeeded by a sense of joy. The problem of my conduct was solved. Hyde was thenceforth impossible; whether I would or not, I was now confined to the better part of my existence; and oh, how I rejoiced to think it! with what willing humility I embraced anew the restrictions of natural life! with what sincere renunciation I locked the door by which I had so often gone and come and ground the key under my heel!

The next day came the news that the murder had been discovered, that the guilt of Hyde was patent to the world, and that the victim was a man high in public estimation. It was not only a crime it had been a tragic folly. I think I was glad to know it; I think I was glad to have my better impulses thus buttressed and guarded by the terrors of the scaffold. Jekyll was now my city of refuge; let but Hyde peep out an instant and the hands of all men would be raised to take and slay him.

I resolved in my future conduct to redeem the past; and I can say with honesty that my resolve was fruitful of some good. You know yourself how earnestly in the last months of last year I labored to relieve suffering; you know that much was done for others, and that the days passed quietly, almost happily, for myself. Nor can I truly say that I wearied of this beneficent and innocent life; I think instead that I enjoy it more completely; but I was still cursed with my duality of purpose; and as the first edge of my penitence wore off, the lower side of me, so long indulged, so recently chained down, began to growl for license. Not that I dreamed of resuscitating Hyde; the bare idea of that would startle me to frenzy; no it was in my own person, that I was once more tempted to trifle with my conscience; and it was as an ordinary secret sinner that I at last fell before the assaults of temptation.

There comes an end to all things; the most capacious measure is filled at last; and this brief condescension to my evil finall destroyed the balance of my soul. And yet I was not alarmed. The fall seemed natural, like a return to the old days before I had made my discovery. It was a fine, dear January day, wet under foot where the frost had melted, but cloudless overhead, and the Regent's park was full of winter chirrupings, and sweet with spring odors. I sat in the sun on a bench, the animal within me licking the chops of memory, the spiritual side a little drowsed, promising subsequent penitence, but not yet moved to begin. After all, I reflected I was like my neighbors; and then I smiled, comparing myself with other men, comparing my active good-will with the lazy cruelty of their neglect.

And at the very moment of that vainglorious thought, a qualm came over me, a horrid nausea and the most deadly shuddering. These passed away, and left me faint; and then, as in its turn the faintness subsided, I began to be aware of a change in the temper of my thoughts, a greater boldness, a contempt of danger, a solution of the bonds of obligation. I looked down; my clothes hung formlessly on my shrunken limbs; the hand that lay on my knee was corded and hairy. I was once more Edward Hyde. A moment before, I had been safe of all men's respect, wealthy, beloved—the cloth laying for me in the dining-room at home; and now I was the common quarry of mankind, hunted, houseless, a known murderer, thrall to the gallows.

My reason wavered, but it did not fail me utterly. I have more than once observed that, in my second character, my faculties seemed sharpened to a point, and my spirits more tensely elastic; thus it came about that, where Jekyll perhaps might have succumbed, Hyde rose to the importance of the moment. My drugs were in one of the presses of my cabinet; how was I to reach them? That was the problem that (crushing my temples in my hands) I set myself to solve. The laboratory door I had closed. If I sought to enter by the house, my own servants would consign me to the gallows. I saw I must employ another hand, and thought of Lanyon. How was he to be reached? how persuaded? Suposing that I escaped capture in the streets, how was I to make my way into his presence? and how should I, an unknown and displeasing visitor, prevail on the famous physician to rifle the study of his colleague, Dr. Jekyll? Then I remembered that of my original character, one part remained to me; I could write my own hand; and once I had conceived that kindling spark, the way that I must follow became lighted up from end to end.

LATEST SUMMER DRINK.

It Is Made from the Juice of the Tamarind and Has Been Taking Chicago by Storm.

The summer man who eschews lemonade because it is not up to date can find cooling satisfaction in the newest drink of the year. Tamarindade is just as pleasant and it sounds better. The new drink, which is made from the juice of the tamarind, is an importation from the south, and, while it is a stranger to the palate of the average Chicagoan, it is said to be a favorite drink in states bordering on the gulf. Tamarindade is not yet printed on the restaurant cards, nor have the saloons awakened to the possibilities, but there are fruit stores in the down-town district, says the Chicago Tribune, that have found it necessary to serve the drink to patrons who have heard of the delights of tamarindade. "The beauty of tamarindade," said a fruit dealer, "is that it is tart without being so bitter as lemonade. It needs no sweetening. Southerners take it because it heads off fever. Chicago people may take it because it is the best substitute for lemonade and does not cost so much. It is made by soaking the tamarind seeds in water and pressing out the juice. Lemonade may have been the proper beverage when men rode out to the croquet grounds on tricycles and grew thirsty, but in the days of golf links and automobiles lemonade must give way. Tamarindade is the thing." Incidentally it is recalled that the lime, once despised as a thing of no marketable worth, is now as much of a necessity where drinks are served as is its bigger brother the lemon. A like career is predicted for the tamarind. Gin rickies have made the lime an article of commerce, and now at certain seasons of the year the market is almost barren of them. A dozen years ago the fruit growers of California merely tolerated the lime. It comes from a hardy tree and little cultivation is needed. That is why it was not rooted up in favor of some more profitable growth. Now there is big money in the lime.

THE LUSCIOUS TAMARIND.
(It Makes a Summer Drink Quite the Equal of Lemonade.)

PRINCESS VICTORIA.

Old-Maid Daughter of King Edward May Become the Heir of Lord John Revelstoke.

Princess Victoria Alexandra, who, it is reported, will soon be married, is the third child of King Edward, and was born on July 6, 1868. The name of the future husband of the princess has not yet been announced, but it is hinted that Victoria's fiance is Lord Revelstoke, who, as John Baring, was a child friend of Victoria and her brothers and sisters. He was often a guest at Marlborough house and

PRINCESS VICTORIA.
(King Edward's Old-Maid Daughter, Said to Be Engaged.)

grew up to manhood in the society of royalty. One day he told Princess Victoria that he loved her, but she at once advised him that such a passion was worse than folly. The young man came to America, where he remained until he was "cured" of his love for a princess. He succeeded his father as Lord Revelstoke in 1897. Several times since then his name has been coupled with that of Princess Victoria as a probable match. It is this affair which is supposed to have restrained the princess from marriage. On the other hand, it is said that she is afflicted with epilepsy, which would also account for the fact of her having remained single so long.

Timely Word of Caution.

After a revival service in Cardiff, Wales, Rev. John McNeill announced that he would answer any question about the Bible. In a few moments he received this query from a young man: "Kindly tell me who was Cain's wife?" The clergyman made this reply: "I love young men, especially young inquirers for light, and I would give the young man a word of advice: Don't lose your soul's salvation looking after other people's wives."

WRAGE ARRESTED.

Former Plainfielder Charged With a Crime at New Orleans.

The Detective, a western paper devoted to police news, in its last issue, contains a picture and an account of the arrest of a former Plainfielder, Edward Wrage, at New Orleans. He was taken into custody last August on a charge of breaking and entering in the day time and grand larceny. There is no mention of any sentence.

Wrage left this city a year ago, previous to that time being employed by Hillier & Company at the local laundry, from which he was discharged. He had been short in his accounts, it is alleged, and also pilfered money from a pocketbook belonging to Miss Mary Brown, the store manager. Wrage's parents reside in Flemington, where his father is an influential builder and contractor.

SAVING HIS PENNIES.

So The Judge Let Him go to Prepare For His Trip to Scotland.

William Fisher, a West End character who is the hero of the small boys in that section of the city by reason of his nomadic life and disregard for manual labor, was a prisoner in the city court this morning, charged with vagrancy.

He admitted he wasn't over fond of working and also that he sometimes begged for a living. He declared that he was now devoting his energies to laying by enough pennies to take himself to Scotland where his parents live. Not wishing to stand in the way of his proposed visit, City Judge Runyon suspended sentence on condition that he left town.

A Fairy Cradle.

THE HOLD-UP MAN.

The Up-to-Date Bill Sikes Shocks His Victims Into Submission by an Electric Current.

The old-fashioned jimmy may do for the burglar who operates in remote country districts. The up-to-date Bill Sikes has moved with the times, and in order to relieve his neighbors of their goods uses his brains as well as brute strength. What may be called the electric confidence trick, as recently practiced in the streets of Madrid, shows that its inventor is a man of genius as well as crime.

This thief, who has just been arrested, was distinguished above others of his profession by the perfection of his garments and appearance. In a pocket of his elegantly fitting coat was concealed the secret of his success. It was a powerful little electric battery, joined by wires to a metallic plate, which he held in the palm of his right hand. Approaching his intended victim with outstretched hand he would greet him with the fervor of an old friend. Woe betide the unlucky man if he accepted the proffered handshake. A sharp electric shock rendered him powerless, and with a few deft movements he was stripped of watch, purse and jewelry.

Travel to the West.

More and more each year Americans are finding out the attractions of our own country, and as they grow to realize the charm of life among the Colorado mountains or in the Yellowstone park the tendency is toward greater travel west instead of east for health and recreation. The railroads, too, are alive to the new conditions and have made lower tourist rates this year than ever before. And then the train time has been vastly improved, so that now it takes only one night on the road between the Atlantic coast and Denver, that is, by using the Burlington's fast train from Chicago.

FRENCH IDEAS OF NEW YORK.

According to Them Steam Is Discarded and Electricity Considered Out of Date.

Le Matin, a Paris paper of considerable circulation, recently printed an article on New York city and the wonderful things to be seen there. Some of the statements are a trifle tall, as will be seen from the following extracts:

"The Americans are decidedly insatiable. While we are still using steam engines for our railways they have long ago tasted of the benefits of electrical traction, and now they are commencing to abandon electricity for compressed air.

"The New York line of Manhattan uses now, to the exclusion of all other modes, compressed air engines, and it appears that the results are so marvelous that the transatlantic papers proclaim steam as a thing of the past and electricity old-fashioned.

"The air is compressed in what the American calls a 'power station,' something like a gas factory. It is compressed until it attains an expansive power of 1,500 to 2,000 kilos per square centimeter that it occupies. It is then transferred on board the locomotive, where it is stored in a large steel tank, which replaces the boiler. There it is furthermore compressed by the use of reduction valves, and, reaching a certain pressure, it gets heated. It is then ready for use.

"In brief, to listen to the Americans, it is the locomotive long dreamed of."

THE MAN FROM THE COUNTRY.

He Is Sometimes a Little Smarter Than He Appears to Be as This Case Proves.

"The country visitor is no longer the easy mark he is pictured," said a policeman to a Chicago Inter Ocean reporter. "Time was when the farmer-looking person or the man with the village air was always the victim of city confidence men and bunko dealers. That time has passed. The people from the country have grown sharp and it is no unusual thing for the bland confidence man to find himself the victim of his own confidence.

"I remember a case of that kind which was very amusing. A steerer managed to get a man wearing a soft hat, ready-made clothes and boots into a poker game where the brace was all right, as was supposed. The thing did not work, however, and the countryman won in spite of the odds. Then the gang grew desperate and attempted to take the money by force. The granger whipped out a big, old-fashioned gun and frightened them so they were glad to get rid of him.

"The story got out and the police concluded that the stranger was himself a crook from some other city. Investigation proved that while he was really a farmer from the southern end of the state, he was well known in the villages thereabouts as a first-class card sharp and handy with his gun."

BAD NAME FOR A BOAT.

Naval Superstition in England Concerning Names of Ships of War —Tragic Fates of Many.

Nothing is ever likely to shake the naval superstition that ships named after things that sting are doomed to loss, says the London Chronicle. Besides the Viper and Cobra, the Serpent was lost with nearly all her crew, the Wasp was wrecked with heavy loss off Tory island, and a second Wasp, a gunboat, disappeared in a typhoon, never to be heard of again. In consequence of this double disaster to ships named Wasp that name has been struck out of the admiralty list of available names. In the past we have lost a Rattlesnake, Gadfly and Hornet. Probably a new Viper and a new Cobra will be built, but should anything happen to either of them the name of the other is almost certain to be changed by the authorities in deference to the sentiment that prevails afloat concerning unlucky names. The only exception that obtains is the Resolution. The present ship is the tenth. No less than eight of them have had tragic fates, and the present one some years since very nearly met disaster at sea. Most of the old Resolutions, however, earned glory first in battle, hence the perpetuation of the name.

Mice May Cause Baldness.

A barber had been giving the writer much information about the hair, and then remarked that not long since quite a young man had come into his shop who had lost all his hair. It had come off very suddenly and for no apparent reason, says the London Spectator. The barber said: "You have a cat?" "No," he replied, "we have no cat in the house." "Then you have a terrier that catches mice, and it comes in contact with your head?" "Yes," said the man, "I have; and its favorite seat is on the top of my arm-chair, close to my head." The old barber then explained that his sudden baldness was a disease belonging to mice, that could be passed on to human beings by contact with an animal that touched them. Whether there is anything in this or not I cannot say.

Fruit for Breakfast Fad.

The latest fad in cures is the "fruit breakfast cure." Nothing but grapes, apples and oranges may be eaten before 12 o'clock, nor is tea, coffee or other liquid permitted before that hour. Of the fruit, however, especially grapes, the quantity is limited only by the appetite. It is asserted that this regimen, pursued for a month, will effect a marvelous improvement in any complexion.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE DUTIES OF GOVERNOR.

Some of the Powers Which Will Pass Into the Hands of Franklin Murphy.

HE HAS A LARGE PATRONAGE

THERE IS NO EXECUTIVE MANSION BUT GOVERNOR HAS HIS ROOMS.

Governor's Salary is $10,000—An Emergency Fund For Public Service—Only State Officer Elected By the People.

When casting their ballots on election day the voters well knew which office they had to fill, but there are many who did not and do not know what duties devolve upon the incumbent of the gubernatorial chair. The chief executiveship of the great State of New Jersey is no sinecure. While the great mass of citizens see the official head of the State only when he is performing some duty of a public nature or when he is at leisure, yet the great proportion of his time is devoted to irksome duties.

The governor must be thirty years old, a citizen of the United States and a resident of New Jersey for seven years previous to his election. His term begins on the third Tuesday in January and expires three years later, and there is always an interregnum of about fourteen hours.

The governor's duties are to be commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the State; to make such nominations and appointments as the Constitution and law direct; to communicate matters of public importance by message to the Legislature; to examine, approve or disapprove by veto all acts of the Legislature; to act as one of the Court of Pardons, and to suspend sentences pending action by the court.

The governor receives an annual salary of $10,000. He has various minor duties, such as the approval of many accounts, and the business of his office requires much of his time.

The governor's power of appointments, on patronage, is very great. He appoints, with the advice and consent of the Senate, all the principal judicial officers of the State; the members of the commissions which carry on much of State's business; the Secretary of State, clerks of the Supreme and Chancery Courts, the militia officers, and a number of other officers. He is a member ex-officio of some of the commissions, and is altogether endowed with powers which place him at the head of the State government in duties as well as in the dignity of the position. The State of New Jersey collects all its taxes for the maintenance of State government directly from corporations, instead of obtaining the money by tax on the several counties, and the governor has much to supervise in this matter.

The fact that the governer is the only State officer elected by the people of all the State, and the only one except the legislators elected by any part of the State, also adds to the importance of the place. Its dignity is great and it is desirable that the governor should be a fair public speaker and should make a proper appearance upon the many public occasions in which he is called upon to participate.

The State provides no executive mansion for the governor and he uses his own home wherever it may be. It is not asked of the governor to do much entertaining, although, perhaps, this has been largely because many of the executives have been of moderate means. Governor Voorhees is a bachelor, but the other governors have been married men and both the present candidates have adult children. The governor's rooms at the State House in Trenton consist of a large and handsome reception room, a large private office room, and two rooms for clerks and stenographers. The governor generally lunches in one of these rooms—at his own expense. There is a very small allowance made for expenses.

The governor has an emergency fund of $10,000, which he may use for exigencies in the public service, but not for private purposes. He has a private secretary, a clerk, a stenographer and a water-man, and occasionally employes other assistance. His office hours at Trenton are usually from 10 to 4 on Tuesdays of each week. He makes visits to the capital at such other times as may be necessary, but transacts much of his business at his home or private office. During the sessions of the Legislature he custom-

QUEEN CITY'S FRIENDS ATTENDED ITS BIRTHDAY

Musical Entertainment Given by the Odd Fellows in Honor of the Anniversary.

MANY FRIENDS ENTERTAINED

GOOD TALENT GAVE A VERY PLEASANT AND ENJOYABLE PROGRAMME.

Affair Marked Tenth Anniversary of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F.—The Committee in Charge of the Programme.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., celebrated the tenth anniversary of its organization last evening, by entertaining its members and friends with musical and other features. In all, 200 people enjoyed the delightful programme arranged by a committee consisting of Robert Humphrey, J. B. Higgins and R. J. Neal.

It was opened with an address of welcome from Guillermo Thorn, of Queen City, who took occasion to recall a few facts in regard to the lodges. It was organized by Grand Master Sutphen and staff, of Elizabethport, October 26, 1891. There were then thirty-five members initiated into the mysteries of the order and this number has increased to 138. The organization has always enjoyed prosperity, both financially and otherwise, and the outlook for the future is for a successful career.

In the programme which followed, the hit of the evening was made by the Edgar sisters, two little girls whose repertoire of songs, dances and musical accomplishments seemed to be inexhaustible. A piano selection, entitled "The Storm," rendered by Miss Lydia Edgar, excited the admiration of her hearers and gave evidence that she is a complete master of the instrument. Her touch and admirable execution are seldom found in a pianist of her age.

In company with her sister, Miss Madeline Edgar, she sang a laughable little ditty styled, "A Quaker Song." Other numbers given by these two were a typical southern cakewalk, a fancy dance and a vocal selection, "I'm Only a Big Wax Doll," by Miss Lydia Edgar.

Among the other numbers on the programme were violin selections by Miss Allie Barbour, vocal selections by Miss Clara Mears, Dutch witticisms by John H. Carney, who was loudly encored, mandolin selections by Professor Joseph Longhead and a descriptive song, "The Hen Convention Show" by James McMullen Gray, in which the barnyard fowls were cleverly mimicked. For an encore he gave "Gobble, Gobble" which introduced the turkey's call. The closing song was an original song, "The Three Links" written by Guillermo Thorn and rendered by Miss Clara Mears. It was set to the music of "Auld Lang Syne" and was very well received.

UNION COUNTY'S VOTE IS OFFICIALLY FIXED.

Figures in State and County Election Announced by County Board of Elections.

ERRORS AND OMISSIONS.

TWO DISTRICTS IN PLAINFIELD SENT NO RETURNS FOR CORONER.

Board Is Now Compiling Results of the City Elections—Complete Vote for the Different Candidates in This County.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 12.—The official figures in the election of State and county officers have been prepared by the Union county Board of Elections and were announced yesterday afternoon. The board met Friday, Saturday and yesterday to receive and compile the returns for the county. It is many years since the board has had so much trouble with errors and commissions. Today the board is again in session compiling the votes for the city candidates.

According to the figures prepared by the board the total vote cast in the county was 19,861, of which there were fifty one rejected. For governor the vote was as follows: Murphy, R., 10,215; Seymour, D., 8,856; Brown, P., 200; Vail, S., 206; Wilson, S. L., 150.

The vote for Assemblymen was as follows: Miller, R., 10,362; Hall, R., 10 618; Newcorn, R., 10,018; Sulzer, D., 8 691; VanDoren, D., 8,366; Moffett, D., 8,765; Reeve, P., 211; Brookfield, P., 223; Myles, P., 209; Taake, S., 181; Rahm, S., 182; Koch, S., 183; Kunobe, S. L., 147; Brandt, S. L., 147; Mesquelin, S L., 147. For coroner the vote was: Livengood, R., 10,652; Walsh, D., 8,437; Karner, P., 182.

There were many small errors of a clerical nature. The vote for Charles L. Moffett in one district of the Third ward, of Plainfield, being credited to Clarence L. Moffett. No returns for coroner were received from the First district of the First ward and the First district of the Second ward, of Plainfield, and five districts in Elizabeth. It was necessary to bring the election officers from those districts before the board to obtain their figures.

A recount will undoubtedly be made in the Ninth ward of Elizabeth, where there were five rejected ballots and the Democratic candidate for the Common Council was elected by one vote. Application will be made to the courts in that case, but the recount, if ordered, will not affect the vote for the State and county officers. An application for a recount will be made in one of the Rahway wards.

FELL DOWN STAIRS.

Mrs. Annie Sprague Met With Serious Injuries While Visiting Her Daughter in this City.

While on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Frederick Drake, of West Second street, Mrs. Annie Sprague, of New York, met with an accident Sunday evening which will prolong her stay for many weeks.

Mrs. Sprague was walking about the upper part of the house, and, not being familiar with its construction, did not notice a rear stairway. She made a misstep and fell down the stairs landing with great force at the bottom. She was picked up by members of the family. When examined by Dr. VanHorne, it was found she had fractured two ribs, and, it is feared, sustained internal injuries.

The patient is resting somewhat better today, but her condition is still serious. She will be compelled at any event to remain in bed for a long time.

CLUBBED WITH COUPLING PIN.

A FORMER PLAINFIELDER FATALLY ASSAULTED IN NEWARK FACTORY.

Jonathan Lyons Had His Skull Fractured Supposedly By Tramps—Formerly Lived in This City.

Jonathan Lyons, seventy-six years old, a former Plainfielder, was cruelly assaulted and robbed Sunday night in the main building of Cawley & Clark's paint works, at Vanderpool street and Avenue C, Newark. He has been a watchman of the factory for some time, and has waged constant warfare against tramps who infest the vicinity. It is supposed one of the latter committed the deed.

Lyons was found by the engineer of the factory at 6 o'clock yesterday morning lying senseless on the floor. His skull was crushed and his pockets were turned inside out. A gold watch and $12 were missing. The wounds on his head were evidently inflicted by a coupling pin. He was removed to St. James' Hospital, where his death is momentarily expected.

Lyons was very well known in the West End, where a few years ago he was employed by his son-in-law, Chas. Sturtevant, in his Liberty street meat market. He was a great favorite in that vicinity and was familiarly known as "Pop" Lyons.

The stone answers the purpose just as well but costs much more.

HOPE CHAPEL HEARTILY WELCOMED NEW PASTOR

Reception Given to Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard by Ladies' Aid Society of Hope Chapel.

CONGREGATION ALL THERE.

PLEASANT PROGRAMME GIVEN DURING THE EVENING.

Words of Welcome From Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards—New Pastor Replied—Hour of Sociability Followed the Programme.

A thoroughly enjoyable reception was tendered to Rev. and Mrs. L. R. Howard in the Sunday-school room of Hope chapel last evening. The new pastor was given an opportunity to meet the workers in this aggressive Christian body and the time was spent pleasantly, especially by reason of the fact that there was a great concourse of people present, all of whom are in sympathy with the institution.

Primarily the reception was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, but everyone connected with the chapel assisted in making the reception a success. An entertaining programme was first provided. City Judge William N. Runyon sang "The Manly Heart" and acted as his own accompanist. "The Comet" was the title of a recitation by Miss Grace E. Overton. Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, which is the mother of Hope chapel, delivered an address of welcome to the new pastor and his wife. In the course of his remarks he dwelt upon the early history of the chapel and pointed out the meaning in the name Hope. Passing on to the present, he referred to his first meeting with Rev. Mr. Howard, and spoke very favorably of the man selected to minister to the flock.

Following this address Miss Harriet Filmer sang "Because I Love You, Dear," accompanied by City Judge Runyon.

A response to the address of welcome was made by Rev. Mr. Howard. He thanked the congregation for the cordial reception and expressed his thankfulness in being called to guide the work at the chapel.

Miss Overton again recited, taking for her selection "The Bride's Cake." Judge Runyon sang the "Three Lovers," and as an encore, "The Parrot."

The concluding feature on the programme was the presentation of a large bouquet of roses to Mrs. Howard by Mrs. Robert Hangliter on behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a social way, the pastor and his wife receiving, while the workers in the chapel were using every endeavor to make the time as enjoyable as possible. Cake and ice cream were served by members of the congregation.

TEMPERANCE TALK.

Elder Hand Drew a Lesson From the Phrase "Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself."

Elder B. W. Hand delivered a very tender message, last evening, to the Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church on the subject of temperance, using the Scriptual quotation, "Love Thy Neighbor As Thyself," as the foundation for his remarks.

Mr. Hand did not berate the saloonkeeper as many temperance speakers usually do, but he urged the godly men and women to use their influence to assist in carrying out the divine injunction quoted and he felt sure the great evil would be at least checked in its present growth. Mr. Hand's talk was greatly enjoyed by all inasmuch as it was not a story of figures simply, but an appeal to awake to the enormity of the great evil and lend a helping hand to rid the city and the land of the curse.

Ministers Entertained.

The members of the Plainfield Ministers' Association were entertained yesterday afternoon by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, at his home in West Seventh street. Rev. John McMurray, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, read an interesting paper on "The Church and the Wage Earner."

RUNAWAY HORSE KILLED BY A TROLLEY CAR

Animal Dashed at Full Speed in Front of Car on Front Street Last Evening.

DEATH WAS INSTANTANEOUS

VALUABLE DELIVERY HORSE BELONGING TO U. S. EXPRESS CO.

Driver and Assistant Were Delivering Express Matter on West Fourth Street When Horse Started—Assistant Packer Thrown Out.

A runaway delivery horse, belonging to the United States Express Company, was instantly killed, at 7 o'clock last evening, by colliding with a special trolley car on the West Front street line, just opposite Lafayette place.

The horse was the most valuable in the local stables and was sent to this city six weeks ago. It was placed in charge of Driver William Wenzel. While the animal was not fractious, it showed a restless spirit, and as often as possible Wenzel had an assistant to hold the reins while delivering packages. The latter last evening was Joseph Packer.

Wenzel and Packer had just lifted a barrel on the piazza of a house at West Fourth street and Lee place when the horse started off. Packer sprang in the back of the wagon. Owing to a heavy rain-guard being in front he could not grasp the reins. When the horse turned Grant avenue he was thrown out. The runaway continued to West Fourth street and then turned toward town, keeping on the left side of the street.

At Lafayette place the trolley car was met, bound east. The horse and rig were black and the motorman did not distinguish them until he was almost upon them. He then reversed his car and had brought it to a stop when the horse struck the dashboard. It fell on the fender and died within a short time. One leg was broken and it was injured internally. The wagon was partially wrecked.

CONGREGATIONALISTS MEET IN CONFERENCE.

Annual Fall Meeting of the Northern New Jersey Conference of Congregational Churches.

HELD IN THIS CITY TODAY.

MORNING AND AFTERNOON SESSIONS COMPOSED THE MEETING.

Reports Made at Morning Session—Rev. John L. Scudder, of Jersey City, Chosen as Moderator For Next Year.

The fall meeting of the Congregational conference for Northern New Jersey was convened at 10 o'clock this morning in the Congregational church on West Seventh street.

Representatives from the churches of the denomination at Asbury Park, Bound, Cedar Grove, Closter, Dover, East Orange, Glen Ridge, Jersey City, Newark, Orange, Upper Montclair, Warrenville, Westfield, Woodbridge and this city.

In the absence of Rev. Thomas C. Miller, of Athenia, N. J., the moderator, Rev. Henry Ketcham, of Westfield, the vice-moderator called the meeting to order. After the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting the conference took up the selection of a moderator for the ensuing year.

The names of Rev. John L. Scudder, of the First church, of Jersey City; Rev. Henry Ketcham, of Westfield; Rev. John A. Dahlgren, of Dover, and Rev. A. W. Vernon, of the First church, of East Orange, were proposed for the office, but each in turn declined. On a plea made by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of this city, Rev. Mr. Scudder was prevailed upon to reconsider his declination and he was unanimously chosen.

A short devotional exercise was held and then reports from the various standing committees' were received. The membership committee announced that Rev. Christian Groezinger had been received and that during the existing vacancy of the pastorate at Woodbridge, Rev. W. H. Jackson was acting.

In was ascertained by the report of the finance committee that the condition of the conference treasury is better than it was one year ago, there now being a balance on hand. The newly-elected moderator was empowered to name a nominating committee, to which was also delegated the duty for selecting the place for the next meeting.

Rev. C. A. S. Dwight addressed the conference on the topic "Problems and Possibilities of the Small Suburban Church." He dwelt upon the many drawbacks which the country church has to face and especially the uninterested attitude of members with which it must contend.

No little attention was given to the all important question of finance and the many difficulties which are occasioned by a lack of funds to carry on the work of the suburban church. In concluding his paper on the subject Rev. Mr. Dwight referred to the possibilities of the suburban church.

A general discussion of the topic followed. Rev. James R. Danforth, of Westfield, and Rev. Dr. A. H. Bradford, of Montclair, also spoke. Rev. W. F. Barnby, of Little Ferry, read an interesting paper on the topic.

"Impressions of the National Council" was the topic assigned to several of the delegates for discussion.

Rev. Dr. Bradford opened the talk with a bright paper on the subject. The speaker was a delegate to the recent conference and he brought many facts of an instructive nature.

Rev. Elliott W. Brown, of Glen Ridge, formerly a Presbyterian, told his impressions of the National Council.

At noon a meeting of the Congregational Union was held. The fact of membership in the Congregational church makes one a member of the Union. After the minutes of the previous meeting the secretary told of the work accomplished during the past year. Financial assistance had been rendered to the churches at Dover, Chatam, Montclair, Perth Amboy, Nutley, Jersey City and elsewhere. The Union is in a flourishing financial condition.

As officers for the ensuing year the following were chosen: President, H. S. Bliss, of Upper Montclair; vice-president, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of Plainfield; secretary, Rev. Frank W. Hodgdon, of Orange.

AT THE THEATRES.

Augustus Thomas' splendid play, "Arizona," winds up its extraordinary run at the Academy of Music with Saturday night's performance. During the fifteen weeks it has remained at Mr. Gilmore's big theatre, this sterling American drama has been enjoyed by more people than have attended any other New York playhouse within the same length of time. The "real" cavalry, the magnificent stage pictures, and the crowds of picturesque cowboys, Mexicans and ranch folk, have added materially to the interest as well as the atmosphere of this distinctly human play and have, as well, furnished advantageous features intrinsically pleasing to the Fourteenth Street sense of artistic perfection. It is one of the most popular attractions that has been seen upon Broadway this season. "Arizona" will begin a two weeks' engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, November 18. It will be succeeded at the Academy by W. A. Bradley's elaborate production of the New England play, "Way Down East."

The Great Cinquevalli continues as the leading attraction at Keith's Union Square Theatre, New York. This is the tenth week of this artist's success, which has been really phenomenal. Another attraction that bids strongly for popularity is the B. F. Keith $10,000 production of living art studies. A new model has been added this week—Miss Edna Adams—who is well known as one of the "Gibson" girls. Other attractions on the long bill are May Edouin and Fred Edwards; LaMar and Gabriel—Gabriel will be recalled as the midget who made the big hit in "Sweet Marie," which closed at the Victoria last week—Three Fortuni Brothers, comedy acrobats; George W. Day, monologue; Hamilton Hill, the Australian baritone; LaVelle Trio, instrumentalists; Sam J. Adams, eccentric comedian; Radford and Winchester, comedy jugglers; Russell and Tillyne, comedy sketch; O'Brien and Lawrence; VonKamp, magician; biograph and stereopticon. Altogether presenting the greatest show for the money—50 cts—in New York city.

Modern Surgery Surpassed.

"While suffering from a bad case of piles I consulted a physician who advised me to try a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, "says G. F. Carter, Atlanta, Ga. "I procured a box and was entirely cured. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a splendid cure for piles, giving relief instantly, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers." Surgery is unnecessary to cure piles. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure any case. Cuts, burns, bruises and all other wounds are also quickly cured by it. Beware of counterfeits. L. W. Randolph.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Clippings From Other Newspapers Which May Be Of Interest to Plainfield and Its Citizens.

The one county of New Jersey which shows a decided Republican slump is Union, the home of Senator Kean, Governor Voorhees and Congressman Fowler. This county, which gave Republican pluralities of 4,857 in 1900 and 2,239 in 1898, could only scare up a miserable 907 in 1901 for Franklin Murphy. Evidently while Senator Kean and Congressman Fowler were touring the State with Mr. Murphy, and Governor Voorhees was attending strictly to business at Trenton, the enemy was busy sowing tares in the field over which these eminent leaders are supposed to keep watch and ward. In view of the returns from Union, The News is the more confirmed in the opinion expressed some weeks ago, that the Republicans of that county would get along just as well with fewer statesmen to stir up jealousies and squabble for leadership.—Newark News.

A Wise Man's Ignorance.

"Why is it that so few people seem anxious to talk to Mr. Carpington? He seems very well informed."

POSITIVE PROOF.

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Plainfield.

Because it's evidence in Plainfield.

It's from a citizen, perhaps a neighbor.

Investigation will confirm it.

Mr. Jepp Zensen, of 728 West Front street, pattern maker by trade, says: "For a year I had a sort of grinding pain across my back at times extending up to my shoulders, and there was a lameness over my kidneys and severe headaches. When I stooped I always felt dizzy and sometimes was fairly blinded. In the mornings I felt stiff and sore until I got some exercise. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised in my city paper and so highly recommended for kidney complaint that I went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They did me a great deal of good. From my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I cannot do otherwise than endorse them."

DELEGATES AT WORK.

Committees of the Pan-American Congress Busy.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 12.—The several committees of the pan-American congress are settling down to work. The committee whose labor is perhaps most advanced is that on the pan-American railway, of which Senator Davis is chairman. Its work, however, has been largely preliminary. Mr. Davis has received information about the route of the projected railroad through the several countries from their respective delegates now in this city, and in cases where the delegates are unable to supply the information desired they have at the senator's request sent to their government for it. The committee on commerce and reciprocity has held a few informal meetings, but nothing of importance has developed. J. C. Williams, secretary of the United States delegation, is secretary of this committee.

El Tiempo, a Clerical organ, continues its attacks on the United States, comparing the American Union to a monster with a head of solid gold, breast and arms of burnished silver, stomach and muscles of bronze and feet of the most brittle clay.

El Tiempo says that race hatred in the United States is inextinguishable, notwithstanding the promised redemption of the blacks emancipated by Lincoln, and negroes, simply because they are born with a black skin, are cast out, beaten, tormented and lynched and are therefore in continual insurrection, prompted by the implacable desire for vengeance.

The United States is compared to ancient Rome as depicted by the historian Tacitus.

The Liberal papers take a decidedly more kindly view toward the United States, though they regret the absorptionist tendencies apparent in the modern foreign policy of the great rebublic.

He Knew Thompson.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—President Roosevelt gave an illustration of his retentive memory when Senator Mason presented to him a colored man named Thompson, who is a candidate for a commission in the regular army. Thompson served five years in the regular army and during the Spanish war was a member of the Eighth Illinois volunteers. He is now on the Washington police force. When introduced, the president remarked, "I know you," and then proceeded to recount accurately Thompson's service in the regular and volunteer armies, recalling the fact that his regiment policed Santiago after the surrender.

Shortage of Beef Cattle.

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—The report emanating from the National Live Stock association that the country is threatened with a shortage of beef cattle has stirred up considerable interest, and an effort is being made to have the census office announce the result of the live stock census made last year in time for the meeting of the national convention of stockmen here next month. While packers admit a scarcity of high grade corn fed beef, they say the supply of ordinary cattle is equal to all demands being made.

Divine Healer a Bankrupt.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 12.—Francis Truth, who had claimed to be a divine healer and under such title was prosecuted in Boston by the postal authorities, filed a petition in bankruptcy with the clerk of the federal court. Truth registered from Keene, his home, and gives as his liabilities the figures of $3,094.70 and his assets $200. Recently Truth has been at Jacksonville. In the court records of two years ago William A. Bemis went through bankruptcy. This is said to be Truth's baptismal name.

Dewey's Home In Peril.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Fire that swept the woods for a considerable area near Cleveland park, just beyond the city limits, yesterday afternoon for a time threatened to destroy the summer home of Admiral Dewey and the former country home of ex-President Cleveland, but was finally extinguished without damage except to the woods. The conflagration attracted a large number of people. It was not got under control until a number of engine companies from the city were summoned to the scene.

Ratification Sure In Alabama.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 12.—At 10 o'clock last night George W. Jones, district chairman of the ratification campaign committee, claims that nine counties in the Second congressional district will give 7,000 majority for ratification of the new constitution. Mr. Jones says the figures indicate that the state will give an overwhelming majority for the constitution. Six wards in the city of Montgomery give 2,206 majority for ratification.

NOT DEAD AFTER ALL

Insurance Case Mystery Being Cleared Up.

RATHBUN ARRESTED IN LOUISVILLE.

Man Whose Supposed Dead Body Was Sent to Little Rock, Ark., For Burial Confesses a Scheme to Defraud.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 12.—Newell C. Rathbun, who was supposed to have been dead in a Jeffersonville (Ind.) hotel last Thursday, has been arrested in Louisville. According to Rathbun, the corpse which was shipped to Little Rock for burial as the body of Rathbun was the body of W. L. Ten Eyke. The police say Rathbun has confessed to desertion from the United States army and to having formed a plan to fraudulently collect $4,000 insurance on his life, but that he denies having killed the man who died in the Jeffersonville hotel.

Rathbun was arrested at the United States recruiting station in Louisville. He is held as a fugitive from justice.

The arrest was made on information from Sergeant Skinner of the United States recruiting station. Rathbun enlisted under the name of Lou Root, Detroit. Sergeant Skinner had read the story of the Jeffersonville case, and circumstances connected with the new recruit aroused his suspicions. One of these was the fact that the man had on a government suit of underwear. Rathbun said he had bought the garments from a soldier friend. Another circumstance was his knowledge of army affairs about Little Rock.

He passed the examination and enlisted Saturday.

At the detective's office Rathbun was put through the sweating process and under pressure made the following statement, according to his inquisitors:

"My name is Newell C. Rathbun, and my home is in Little Rock, Ark. Several months ago I deserted from the army post at Plattsburg, N. Y., in company with another recruit of the name of W. H. Ellis. I soon lost sight of him and went to Little Rock. There I was married and afterward took out the insurance policies.

"I came to Louisville about ten days ago and formed a plan to make the insurance company think I was dead, so that I could collect the insurance. I fell in with a man who said his name was W. L. Ten Eyke in front of the Salvation Army headquarters in Louisville and told him of my plan, and he agreed to help me. Our plan was to obtain a corpse from some place, put it in a hotel in Jeffersonville and then set fire to the hotel.

"While we were in Jeffersonville we took a number of drinks, and Ten Eyke got drunk. I think his death was caused by drinking. I put the letters addressed to me in his pocket and left. I did not kill him. I then came to Louisville and went to the recruiting office and enlisted. My real home is in Detroit."

The police are trying to establish the identity of the dead man. One of their theories is that he was a tramp that Rathbun had fallen in with. The police have telegraphed to the Little Rock authorities to hold the corpse. A gold watch bearing the name "W. H. Ellis" was found on Rathbun. He refuses to say where he got it. The police say the handwriting of "Lou Root," the recruit, was very similar to the signature "L. L. Ten Eyke" on the Jeffersonville hotel register.

Coroner Coots of Jeffersonville states that he examined the stomach of the dead man and found traces of enough laudanum to kill two men.

Rathbun's Supposed Remains.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 12.—The supposed body of Newell C. Rathbun has been turned over to the coroner and placed in a vault to await an autopsy. It is claimed by the authorities that the description of Rathbun does not even agree with that of the corpse.

To Pay Thompson's Shortage.

PORT HURON, Mich., Nov. 12.—Major Boyton, commander of the great camp of Maccabees of Michigan, says that in view of the past good record of C. D. Thompson, the defaulting finance keeper of the supreme tent, the Maccabees generally should contribute toward a fund to help Thompson out of his difficulty. He offers, as commander of the Michigan great camp, to join with D. P. Markey, commander of the supreme tent, in an endeavor to raise a sum by popular subscription among Maccabees sufficient to make good Thompson's shortage.

Prizefight Stopped.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 12.—The bout last night between "Young Peter Jackson" and Jimmy Handler was stopped by the police in the eighteenth round and was declared a draw by the referee. When the fight was stopped, Jackson was hammering Handler hard and at will, and it was evident the latter would have been beaten in a minute or so if the contest had continued.

French Flag Again Hoisted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 12.—The French flag waves above the French embassy in Constantinople for the first time since Aug. 26. M. Bapst, councilor of the embassy, has called upon the Ottoman minister of foreign affairs, Tewfik Pasha, thus formally renewing the diplomatic relations between France and Turkey.

Explosion Injures Six.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—By an explosion in the boiler room of the Liberty Chemical works at Sydenham and West Hazzard streets which resulted in a fire six persons were seriously injured and several others slightly burned.

LEADER CAPTURED.

Thompson, Who Led Mutiny at Leavenworth, Taken.

CONVICT RESISTED TO THE LAST.

Shot In the Head, But Not Seriously Hurt, by Officers In Pursuit—Another of the Gang Is Mortally Wounded.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 12.—Frank Thompson, the leader of the mutiny at the federal prison at Leavenworth, which resulted in the escape last Thursday of twenty-six prisoners, was captured eight miles north of Council Grove last evening by a posse under command of Deputy United States Marshal E. A. Prescott. Thompson would not surrender, but was taken after a hard fight with the officers, in which he was shot in the head, but not seriously injured. No member of the posse was hurt.

Deputy Marshal Prescott has been at Council Grove since Saturday morning watching for escaped prisoners. A number of them are in this vicinity, and several depredations to property have resulted from their presence. Yesterday morning Deputy Prescott heard of the presence of a negro convict a few miles north of town and immediately set out to make the capture, assisted by Sheriff Michael and other officers.

The officers had emerged from a wooded tract when they saw Thompson running across the open. He was ordered to halt, but he answered by wheeling around and doing some rapid firing with a .44 caliber revolver. The officers then fired, and Thompson dropped. He was stunned and was easily secured. He will be taken back to the penitentiary today.

CONVICT RETAKEN.

Another of the Fort Leavenworth Gang In Custody.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 12.—One more of the Fort Leavenworth convicts has been captured, Lawrence Lewis, who was mortally wounded near Quenemo, Kan., while making a dash through a cordon of armed deputies. Now there are but thirteen prisoners at large.

Three separate gangs of convicts have been reported at points within fifteen miles around Topeka, and although a crowd of penitentiary guards, deputy sheriffs and farmers were active yesterday night fell with only one capture, that of Lewis.

At Alma, Kan., a running fight with two escaped convicts is reported. The convicts had stolen two horses and made good their escape after shooting a horse under one of their pursuers.

Peabody's Munificence.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 12.—George Foster Peabody of New York city has practically donated $21,000 to the Montgomery Young Men's Christian association. Transfer of title to a handsome residence in the heart of the city was made to Mr. Peabody yesterday. The purchase price was $14,000. He will give it to the local association at a nominal yearly rent and spend $2,000 in furnishing the building. In addition to these subscriptions, it is announced that Mr. Peabody subscribed $5,000 toward a fund to build a handsome structure in Montgomery to be occupied by the local association. Mr. Peabody is a member of the New York banking house of Spencer Trask & Co. He is a native of Columbus, Ga.

Cracker Bakers In Session.

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 12.—Representatives of more than seventy-five independent cracker baking concerns from all parts of the United States are in secret session at the Grand hotel here. While it is said to be a voluntary coming together of the cracker bakers for the purpose of bettering conditions among the independent bakers, it is evident from the air of secrecy that an attempt will be made before the conference adjourns to effect an organization which will become a protective association against the National Biscuit company.

A Gates Railroad Syndicate.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12.—A charter has been issued by the secretary of state to the Kansas City, Peoria and Chicago Railway company of Kansas City, with a capital of $3,945,000. The road is to be 263 miles long and will extend from Kansas City, Mo., to Gower, in Buchanan county, and from Kansas City to Quincy, Ill. The company is formed by the John W. Gates syndicate and will control railroad lines in Missouri and Kansas.

Smallpox In Boston.

BOSTON, Nov. 12.—Smallpox continues to claim victims in Boston, five new cases being officially reported yesterday. The board of health is somewhat at sea in tracing the sources of infection. At St. John, N. B., which is in direct touch with Boston by steamer, the same contagion is prevalent, forty-four cases being the day's report.

The Olympia Nearly Ready.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The navy department announces that the cruiser Olympia, which has been undergoing repairs at the Boston yard, will be put in commission Dec. 18 and be assigned to the north Atlantic squadron. She will be the flagship of Admiral Higginson.

AGITATOR ARRESTED.

Iglesias, Who Started Porto Rican Strike, Now In Jail.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Nov. 12.—Santiago Iglesias was arrested here last Thursday on landing from the Red D line steamer Philadelphia, Captain Furst, which arrived here that day from New York on her way to La Guayra and Porto Cabello. His detention was due to his nonappearance after having been thrice summoned by the local courts to appear in a case against him and seven others brought in July of last year when the currency was changed.

At that time he persuaded the local Federation of Labor to order all labor organizations to go on strike unless they were paid in gold at the same rate as silver—master workmen $3, journeymen $2 and ordinary laborers $1.50. These rates were not accepted by the employers, and a general strike, which was accompanied by some violence, followed.

Iglesias and the other members of the labor committee were charged with conspiracy, and the cases against them were set down for trial Sept. 11, 1900. When that date was reached, Iglesias, who was at large on his own recognizance, did not put in an appearance, and the trial was adjourned. As he did not appear on the adjourned day further adjournment was taken to May 2, 1901, when an order for his arrest was issued, he being then in New York city.

He is now in jail awaiting trial in default of $2,000 bail. Yesterday he sent a petition to Governor Hunt asking to be released on his own recognizance, explaining that he made a similar application when first summoned, but that the case was postponed and that no notice of the hearing on May 2 was ever served upon him.

The public prosecutor asks that he be sentenced to a term of imprisonment on the ground that he is a dangerous labor agitator and is continually causing unrest.

President Gompers Protests.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has seen the president to protest against the arrest of Santiago Iglesias, who was sent to Porto Rico by the federation to organize the workingmen of the island. Before Mr. Iglesias left the United States Mr. Gompers explained to the president the purpose of his visit and asked that Governor Hunt be notified that his mission was not to stir up strife, but simply to organize labor along legitimate lines. At that time he told the president that Mr. Iglesias during the Spanish ascendancy had opposed the Spanish regime and had been imprisoned, having been liberated when the American troops reached San Juan. By the president's direction Secretary Cortelyou wrote to Governor Hunt concerning Mr. Iglesias' mission. An inquiry will be made.

Letter From Miss Stone.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 12.—From another letter that has been received from Miss Ellen M. Stone, the abducted American missionary, it appears that she is enduring the trials of her hard experience with fortitude, forgetting herself in her anxiety for her companion, Mrs. Tsilka. Miss Stone does not dare to complain of the treatment to which they are subjected, but she finds the confinement irksome and the weather extremely trying. The tone of the latest letter received from her is hopeful. The brigands by dating the letters at places in Macedonia and delaying their delivery seek to create the appearance of being far distant.

Fight With Mindoro Rebels.

MANILA, Nov. 12.—Major Pitcher, who commands the American troops on the island of Mindoro, reports that the rebels made an attack on the garrison of Abra de Ilog similar to that on Company C of the Ninth infantry at Balangiga, Samar, some weeks ago. The garrison was prepared, however, and killed five bolomen. The Americans had one man wounded. Lieutenant Noyes of the Thirtieth infantry, who with fifty men is pursuing the rebels, has captured a deserter of the name of Richter who was dressed in the uniform of a lieutenant of the rebel artillery.

Killed Sweetheart and Himself.

ELIZABETHTOWN, Tenn., Nov. 12.—Frank Kidwell, aged twenty-three, shot and killed his sweetheart, Ada Thompson, aged sixteen, and then committed suicide. The cause of the tragedy is said to be the refusal of the girl's father to allow Kidwell to visit his daughter and her declination to marry him. Both were members of prominent families.

Borough Named For McKinley.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 12.—A petition was presented to the court yesterday for the incorporation of McKinley borough, a portion of Kingston township. The proposed McKinley borough contains a population of 1,200 inhabitants and over 225 dwellings. The entire population signed the petition.

Teamsters Granted Demands.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Nov. 12.—All the members of the Teamsters' union, numbering about 300 men, in Luzerne county have been granted their demands. They petitioned their employers, the team owners, for $10 per week for all single horse drivers and $10.50 for all team drivers.

BOERS TO BE SHOT.

All Captured In British Uniforms to Meet That Fate.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Dispatches to The Daily Mail announce that the Cape Town guard has again been called out and that Lord Kitchener has issued an order directing that all Boers captured in British uniforms are to be shot.

The Daily Mail gives today another alleged peace scheme which Mr. Kruger is said to be willing to conclude. This would be on the basis of granting autonomy to the two republics under a convention guaranteed by France and Russia in exchange for a cession to Great Britain of the Rand district and the goldfields, which should be regarded as the total Boer indemnity.

The story circulated in the United States under an Amsterdam date purporting to give the peace terms which the Boers are willing to accept and alleging that they are to be embodied in a formal document for circulation among the powers was seemingly started in an English provincial paper and is denied by the Boer delegates at The Hague.

The Largest Gun Ever Made.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 12.—As soon as a new trunnion hook can be received from the Bethlehem Steel company work will be resumed at the United States arsenal at Watervliet on the new 16 inch gun which is to be made for Fort Hamilton, in New York harbor. This gun will be the largest ever made in the world. The gun is a most wonderful one, being a breechloader, and the breech will be such that a child can open and fire it. It will shoot a distance of twenty-one miles, but in order to do so the shot will assume an altitude as high as Pike's peak and will carry the shot as far north as Yonkers. After the hook has been placed in it the gun is to have another jacket shrunk on it. Military men the world over are very much interested in the mechanism of this gun, as it will be an innovation for coast defense.

A Daring Theft at Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 12.—A man about forty years of age, who gave the name of J. F. Toomey of New York city, yesterday afternoon went into the ladies' waiting room of the Traders' National bank, told Mrs. Ross Seinberg, who sat at a table counting some money she had just drawn, that she had dropped some money on the floor, and while she was looking for the bills on the floor grabbed the roll from her hands and fled. After an exciting chase through many streets the thief was overtaken at the corner of Main and Exchange streets and arrested. The money taken, amounting to $95, was recovered.

Corn Yield Very Poor.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of corn as published in the monthly report of the statistician of the department of agriculture is 16.4 bushels as compared with an average yield of 25.3 per acre in 1900 and 1899 and a ten year average of 24.4 bushels. The present indicated yield per acre is the lowest general average ever recorded for this crop, being 2.2 bushels per acre below the yield in 1881, which has stood for twenty years as the lowest on record.

The Largest Wheat Field.

WICHITA, Kan., Nov. 12.—William Ogden of McLean county, Ill., has bought of J. F. Bellew of Wichita 180,000 acres of land in western Kansas, which will be converted into the largest wheatfield in the world. The land was owned by about fifteen different men. Ogden paid $2.50 an acre on an average. He will plant wheat with steam drills and use steam binders in cutting it. He expects to make $25,000 yearly from the place. This is the largest real estate deal ever consummated here.

Freedmen's Aid Society.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 12.—The Rev. Dr. W. P. Thirkield, secretary of the society, read the report of the board of managers of the Freedmen's Aid society, now in annual session here. It shows that in thirty-five years the society has reached over 200,000 students, sent out about 10,000 teachers and 2,000 ministers, enrolled about 551,000 members and accumulated property worth over $2,000,000. Dr. Thirkield said that the object was not to make the negro smart, but to make him good.

A Long Strike Ended.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—It is announced that nearly 500 machinists employed by the Fulton Iron works have returned to work after having been on strike for several months in an effort to obtain ten hours' pay for nine hours' work. It is understood that they return to their benches on a schedule of nine hours' pay for nine hours' work.

CIVIL RULE FAVORED

Contest Over Naval Observatory Brought to a Crisis.

ANNUAL REPORT OF VISITING BOARD

An Astronomer and Not a Naval Officer Should Be at the Head of the Government Institution.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A contest between the scientists of the country on one side and naval line officers on the other, which has been waged for years past and involves the rich prize of the control of the Naval observatory, has been brought to a critical point by the presentation to Secretary Long of the report of the board of visitors to the observatory, in which the issue is drawn sharply in favor of civil control. The board is composed of Charles A. Young, Charles F. Chandler, Asaph Hall, Jr., E. V. Pickering, Professor Ormond Stone and William R. Harper, all men of national reputation in scientific research. The particular line of contention lately has been a vacancy in the office of astronomical director, and the board makes the following pointed remarks as applying not only to that but to other less important places in the observatory:

"It is recommended that no astronomical director be appointed at present, as a dual headship has been found to work unsatisfactorily, and under the existing law the appointment of an astronomer as sole director of the observatory—which the board considers the proper solution of the question—is impracticable. Vacancies should not be filled among assistant astronomers nor among professors of mathematics in the navy without examination for each vacancy occurring.

"Applying these principles to practice, the board declines to name a person to fill the vacant office of assistant astronomer at the observatory and instead recommends that the appointment be made after a civil service examination under the auspices of the commission."

Coming to the more important subject of the actual head of the observatory, which involves the issues between the scientists and the line officers, the board says:

"As every other prominent observatory is under the direction of an astronomer we wish to record our deliberate and unanimous judgment that the law limiting the superintendency to a line officer of the navy should be changed so as to provide that the official head of the observatory, perhaps simply styled 'the director,' should be an eminent astronomer appointed by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, holding this place by a tenure at least as permanent as that of the superintendent of the coast survey or the head of the geological survey, and not merely by a detail of two or three years' duration.

A Fatal Quarrel.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 12.—John Goolsby and Charlie Fullerton, two prominent farmers of Hillsboro, in Jasper county, near here, emptied their pistols into each other at close range. Fullerton was killed instantly, and Goolsby is dying. They had quarreled about a piece of land. Goolsby raised his shotgun, and Fullerton seized it. Each held it with his left hand and drew their pistols. Thus they fought until Fullerton fell dead, and Goolsby staggered a few paces, fell and then raised up on his elbow and emptied both barrels of the gun into the dead body near him.

Bubonic Plague Waning.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A cablegram has been received at the office of the surgeon general of the marine hospital service saying that the bubonic plague had broken out at Odessa, Russia. The office also was informed from Liverpool that the custom house at that point issued clean bills of health yesterday and that there has not been a fresh case of the plague at Glasgow since the 1st inst. The service also is in receipt of a report from Manila saying that the plague epidemic there and also at Hongkong and Amoy, China, is practically a thing of the past.

Out In Second Round.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12.—Danny Dougherty of Philadelphia, Terry McGovern's sparring partner, was knocked out in the second round of what was to have been a fifteen round fight by Harry Forbes of Chicago in the arena of the West End club last night. The contestants fought viciously in the first round, but honors were even when the bell tapped.

Fatal Landslide.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 12.—A big landslide at Mechanicville yesterday afternoon caused the death of three Italian laborers, who were buried under about a thousand tons of clay. One body has been recovered. Four other workmen escaped. The landslide occurred in the clay banks of the Pressed Brick company's yard.

Hurt by Falling Wall.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 12.—Two men were fatally hurt and five others seriously injured by a falling wall at the National stockyards in East St. Louis, where an old packing house was being wrecked. James Thomas and James Flood are the men who are not expected to live.

A Primary Law.

Plainfield is not the only city in New Jersey which has had its troubles over the regulation of the primaries. So united has been the complaint that one of the first acts of the new governor, Franklin Murphy, will be to recommend to the State Legislature that a law be passed regulating the subject of party primaries.

There are many Plainfielders who remember the situation in the First ward of this city only a few years ago. At that time there were more votes polled at a Republican primary than there were Republican voters in the ward. To prevent a repetition the enrollment scheme was introduced by the city committee. It was first tried at the city primaries a year ago. It was again put into use this fall and, as far as two of the wards were concerned, became practically a dead letter, as any one was allowed to vote regardless of the enrollment book.

Just exactly what steps will be taken by the State authorities is not known. It is a serious problem which affects both parties alike and one which must be properly regulated in order to obtain an honest opinion of the voters of each side. Something must be done to control the right to vote at a party primary, which will prevent those of the opposite party from assisting in the packing of such a meeting and which will not abridge the right of the honest voter. The enrollment scheme has been tried here and it cannot be said to be a wonderful success. It seems all right in theory but, practically, it workings are not satisfactory.

One of the first subjects which the new Common Council will probably consider will be the appropriation for the new High School. There is, at present, some trouble about the terms of the school law under which it is to be built. These must be straightened out. There is no doubt but the Common Council will grant any reasonable request for funds to build the new High School. The subject has been brought before the Council before and voted on favorably but the technicalities of the law have made it necessary to start all over again. If the Board of Education will keep the public fully informed as to its movements regarding the new building, there is not likely to be any opposition. The people of Plainfield are willing to listen to reason but there is a strong objection to see any expenditure of public funds go through "on the quiet."

The question of municipal ownership was put to vote in Plainfield by The Daily Press and the verdict was almost unanimously in favor of it. The vote was taken soon after the bills of the Plainfield Water Supply Company had been sent out. Many of the rates had been changed so as to conform with the schedule fixed long ago, but only then thoroughly enforced. The time for municipal ownership of the water works in Plainfield does not seem to have arrived. A much fairer division of expense, however, can be made by the general introduction of water meters, permitting the patrons of the company to pay according to the amount they use instead of being charged for the total number of taps.

It was eminently proper that James M. Seymour should write and personally thank James E. Martine for his assistance during the last campaign. There is no doubt but Mr. Martine is one of the most indefatigable of the Democratic speakers in the State. He has worked hard and long for his party without hope of recompense. Even those who do not agree with Mr. Martine's political views cannot help but admire his consistency and loyalty to his party.

The New Jersey Central Railroad is struggling with one of the most difficult engineering works it has undertaken for many a year. It is a hard thing to elevate all of the tracks several feet and yet not delay traffic. The work is being done two tracks at a time. Although the traffic is necessarily affected to some degree, the railroad has been remarkably fortunate so far in this undertaking.

Donations are still being received at Muhlenberg Hospital for the "harvest home" of last week. They are just as welcome now as had they arrived the actual day of the reception. The hospital requires many things to keep it running regularly and these donations are very welcome. If there are any who have not given to that worthy institution and desire to do so, it is not yet too late to send something.

According to the Philadelphia Record a writer on economic subjects asserts that "the growth of general advertising has destroyed monopolies. The newspapers are open to all, and by bold and persistent advertising any merchant or other business man may gain a fair share of the trade of his community. It is advertising which determines the proportion of business any concern will do."

The recent appeal of the Plainfield Relief Association for aid for a young man is one which deserves the support of the citizens of Plainfield. The Relief Association never recommends a case that is not thoroughly investigated and found to be perfectly worthy.

Plainfield is to again be honored by the presence of one of the greatest writers of the present age, Max O'Rell. This city has been fortunate, indeed, in seeing and hearing many of the greatest celebrities who have visited the United States.

Now that the winter season is here, the frequent travellers on the New Jersey Central Railroad will wish more than ever that a bridge or tunnel was ready for service between the New York and New Jersey shores.

There is not one but sees the wisdom of painting white the fence that separates the tracks at the North Avenue station. It is to be hoped that the railroad officials will have equally as good vision.

Plainfield will have a great deal to be thankful for when the twenty-eighth day of November comes around.

JUNIOR'S THANKSGIVING SERVICE.

All Lodges Will Unite for Service at First Baptist Church.

The annual union Thanksgiving service of the Junior Order United American Mechanics will be held Sunday evening, November 24 at the First Baptist church, to which Franklin Council, No. 41, Somerset Council, No. 104, Benevolent Council, No. 256, of this city; William G. Holton Council, of Dunellen; Friendship Council, of New Market, and Twilight Council, of Scotch Plains, have been invited to attend in a body. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. O. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

Dunellen, Nov. 12.—By the death of Charles Carpenter, last week, an important witness was lost for the State of New York in the case against Patrick and Jones, who are accused of murdering William Rice, a Texan millionaire, in New York, last fall for the purpose of securing his money. Mr. Carpenter was an intimate friend of Mr. Rice and frequently spent periods with him in New York. Under a will made by Mr. Rice some time ago, and now thought to be the original, Mr. Carpenter and some members of his family were beneficiaries to a considerable extent.

The binding of an electric light wire was worn off by contact with the branches of a tree in front of George Schenck's grocery store and yesterday afternoon set fire to the tree. It became necessary to telephone to the sub-station at Lincoln so that the current could be shut off and the damage repaired. An accident of this kind is dangerous as the tree is apt to become heavily charged with electricity, and any one who touches it will receive a severe shock.

MISS BENTON'S RECITAL.

AN APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Miss Benton Was Assisted By Fred VanEps, Banjoist, and Miss Grace H. Irwin, Soprano.

The recital given at the Y. M. C. A Hall last evening by Miss Evalina DuBois Benton, was a literary and musical treat that was enjoyed by a good sized audience. The many friends of Miss Benton, who admire her work and who have joined in her previous successes, were present last evening to give her a cordial reception. She has a distinctive style in her work that is pleasing and her selections gave an excellent opportunity for the best efforts.

Miss Benton opened the programme with a reading, "Thicker Than Water." She then gave two monologues, one "A Country Landlady," and the other "Girl at Glove Counter," both of which were of her own arrangement. They were amusing in the extreme and caused much laughter. Miss Benton also gave a reading, "A Tale," by Robert Browning. Her concluding number was a song pantomime, "The Star-Spangled Banner," during which the song was rendered effectively by Miss Grace H. Irwin. The interpretation of the song, solely through gestures, was very effective.

Miss Benton was ably assisted in her recital by Fred VanEps, banjoist, accompanied by Mrs. Charles E Thorne, of Westfield; Miss Grace H. Irwin, soprano, of Brooklyn, accompanied by Miss Helen A. Hasbrouk. Mr. VanEps won his audience from the first by his playing. He has never been heard to a better advantage and his selections included some of the most popular. He was obliged to respond to several encores.

Miss Irwin's work was also of a high order. Her selections were particularly adapted to her voice which is strong, yet possessing a richness of tone that won commendation. The accompanists of the evening were all to be desired and they assisted much toward the success of the affair.

WANTED TO SWEAR OFF.

So John Dorgan Was Given a Year in Which to Stay Sober.

John Dorgan was a prisoner in the city court this morning, charged with being helplessly drunk on East Second street, yesterday afternoon. He declared his willingness before City Judge Runyon to take the pledge for one year if sentence was suspended He was allowed to go with the understanding that if he appeared before the court in the meantime, his sentence would be twice as heavy.

A Physician Testifies.

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

What She Meant.

"Mary," he cried, in desperation, "I shall wait no longer. Either you must consent to become my wife or end this farce. Your repeated delays are killing me'.'

"Very, well, Hubert," she answered, calmly; "if you take that ground, there is but one alternative for me." She drew off the diamond ring which sparkled on her finger and handed it to him.

He took it sadly and bitterly exclaimed: "Oh, false, cruel girl, to thus carelessly trample upon a heart whose throb is for you alone! For this bauble I have no further use. Let it perish, as I hope may also the love of which it was the emblem." His hand was raised to throw the ring into the grate, but she grasped it quickly.

"I merely wished to say, Herbert, that I would like you to have the wedding ring made just a trifle smaller than this."—New Yorker.

Long Heads.

We are told of Faraday (the writer of the article being Tyndall) that he had an abnormally long head, so that his hats had to be specially made for him, and we are told of Tyndall himself (the writer here being his widow) that in this respect Tyndall resembled Faraday. This scrap of evidence, so far as it goes, would confirm the proverbial belief in favor of the intelligence of long-headed persons. It is, however, believed by many, who can bring forward good evidence on their side, that intellectual ability goes with broad-headedness. It may well be that in this matter, as in that of stature, the range of variation is great, and that both extremes tend to prevail to an undue extent. This has been found to be the case in another abnormal group—that of criminals.—Popular Science Monthly.

Fredersborg.

Fredersborg is the largest of the king of Denmark's palaces. It has an imposing exterior, and is surrounded by wonderful avenues of limes, but is extremely simple in its interior arrangements. The bedrooms are small, and furnished in the plainest style, and there are hardly any dressing-rooms nor wardrobes. A very wonderful view may be had from the palace roof, which is made entirely of copper. This metal is much used in Copenhagen; some of the steeples have copper steps by which they can be ascended. Rosenborg has a handsomer interior than Fredersborg, and is full of beautiful artistic objects, including (it is said) the finest Venetian glass in the world.—London Chronicle.

To-Morrow Will Be or To-Morrow Is?

A dispute over the question whether you should say "To-morrow will be Thursday" or "To-morrow is Thursday" is needless, for either expression is allowable. "To-morrow will be Thursday" means that, looking forward from to-day as the point of view, the speaker thinks of to-morrow as a future time, and says of it that it "will be" Thursday; "To-morrow is Thursday" means that, without any reference to to-day, the speaker thinks of a certain day as "to-morrow," and says of it that it "is" Thursday.—Elizabeth S. Withey, in Ladies' Home Journal.

A New Use for Wine.

Viticulturists in France have just tried experiments in feeding draught animals with bran mixed with wines, which seem to be successful. It appears that poor wine can be used to replace oats as food, weight for weight—a pound of wine for a pound of oats. At least half of the usual feed of grain can be replaced in this manner without disadvantage to the animals. Barley, beans, bran and the like, mixed with wine, can be substituted for oats entirely, if desired, it is said. In years of abundant vintage a material saving can be effected in this way.—N. Y. Sun.

All the Same.

Thomas Jefferson—Look heah, I understan' dat you tuk advantage ob my absence from town an' called on Miss Matilda Snowball last night, sah.

George Washington Smith (doggedly)—Yo' is mistaken, sah. I done call on her sistah.

"Well, sah, dat makes no difference. Yo' keep away. I'se got my eye on bof ob dem gals."—Town and Country.

One View of It.

"Oh, if woman could only propose!" cried the girl who was receiving attentions from a timid and bashful young man.

"If she could and did," replied her practical friend, "more than half the pleasurable excitement of feminine life would be lost to her."—Chicago Post.

WOMEN OF RANK IN TRADE.

Many Members of the English Aristocracy Are Earning Their Pin Money.

The prejudice that for so long existed among the English aristocracy against those people of quality who engaged in trade has been disappearing of late years, and there are now numbers of women of patrician birth who are following divers mercantile occupations. Their former associates feel the blue blood tingle in their veins as they whisper to each other the astounding news, but they dare not refuse them the recognition due their rank, for the social position of those making this innovation is unassailable.

The thing started with the tearooms. A woman who had more title than money dared and did. She opened one and it was a success. Others who were as much in need of pecuniary returns took heart and followed her example. Now there are a number of London's first-class tearooms which are doing a brisk business under the supervision of the ladies of quality who run them.

But more than this, there is a ladies' shirtmaker's firm in London, the members of which are all women of birth and position. Their shirt waists have made a great hit. They fit so well that the firm is swamped with orders.

Another woman, Miss Cockerell, whose engagement is announced to the son of Lady Auguset Noel, has been in the jewelry business. She has made a reputation for her necklaces and chains of uncut stones. Half the smart set of London thronged her atelier at Albert hall mansions, South Kensington, with commissions.

GARDENING ON THE YUKON.

Report by Prof. Georgeson to the Agricultural Department Is Decidedly Encouraging.

A report has been received at the department of agriculture from Prof. C. C. Georgeson, officer in charge of the Alaska experimenting stations, on the outlook for gardening and agriculture in the cold interior region of Alaska along the Yukon. Its general tone is decidedly encouraging. Prof. Georgeson spent the summer in the interior and visited the experiment station established a year ago at Rampart, which is just outside the arctic circle, and such other places as were selected for department experiments. In spite of an unusually late season there were ready by the middle of August new potatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, beets and other vegetables, while lettuce, radishes and turnips, grown in the open air, had been in use some weeks. Flower seed furnished last year had bloomed in a large variety of annuals. Rye, seeded the previous fall at Rampart, had wintered perfectly and was fully ripe in July. Spring-seeded barley had ripened about the middle of August. The prospect for oats and wheat to mature was most favorable. On the lower Yukon extensive areas of excellent land were found, where there was an abundant and often luxuriant growth of grasses over six feet in height. Abundant moisture and long summer days account for the surprising vegetable growth in that section of the far north.

THE CORRECT WAY.

How the Name of Our New President Should Be Pronounced According to Himself.

No name in America is so commonly mispronounced as that of our president. It is Roosefelt, Rozveldt, Roozeyfelt, or Rozzyvelt, whichever way one turns. Those anxious to be right quiz the newspapers or write to friends or to Washington.

President Roosevelt, more than two years ago, determined the correct pronunciation of his name for the general public, in an interview published in the Chicago Times-Herald. On June 25, 1899, he was en route to Las Vegas, New Mexico, to attend a reunion of his regiment of rough riders. Some question came up on his special train as to how his name should be pronounced, if pronounced correctly. He settled the dispute by saying:

"Pronounce it as if it were spelt Ros-y-velt, a word of three syllables. That is the only way to pronounce it."

He pronounces the first syllable as if it were spelt "Rose," and having that the rest is very simple. This ought to settle all questions about the pronunciation and cure those who insist on saying "Roos-ee-velt."

An Odd Pig Pen.

A Canadian farmer had on his land a very deep hole, 12 inches wide, resulting from an unsuccessful attempt to form an oil well. Four little pigs belonging to the farmer tumbled into this hole, probably in search of food, and fell 45 feet to the bottom where a little cave had been formed by the caving in of some sand from the sides. The farmer dropped corn into the hole every day for a month, knowing the pigs were alive from hearing contented grunts ascending from below ground. At last he had the hole widened, and descending by the aid of a strong rope, he rescued two piggies from their strange prison. The other two were dead.

American Cities.

Of the whole number of cities having 25,000 inhabitants or more in 1900, 70 are found in the North Atlantic division, 49 in the north central division, 18 in the south central division, 12 in the western division, 11 in the South Atlantic division, and one in Hawaii. Massachusetts has the largest number of such cities, namely, 20, and is followed by Pennsylvania with 18 and New York with 12.

Nature's... Moderation

THE human constitution is very much like a fire, and the way many people try to take care of their health may be compared to the way a careless kitchen girl looks after the cooking stove. One minute it is raging red-hot, and then suddenly, first thing you know, the fire is out. People are sometimes led to believe that a medicine which has a sudden, tremendous effect must be truly wonderful. They forget that it may be merely a tremendous "draught" which imparts a temporary false effect of brightness and "fire" to the system, but suddenly drops it lower than before.

There is no sudden, overwhelming effect about Ripans Tabules. Some people think the prescribed dose is too slow, and double it to get a quicker effect. But nature herself is slow, moderate and regular in accomplishing her best work. The Tabules relieve acute headaches, indigestion and nervous depression almost instantly. But their effect on the bowels is more gradual; yet it is sure and thorough. Ripans Tabules act in accordance with nature, and their results, like nature's, are complete and permanent.

WANTED:—A case of bad health that RIPANS will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. Go after relief. Note the word RIPANS on the package and accept no substitute. RIPANS, one gives relief, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents, forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., No. 10 Spruce St., New York.

NEW WAISTS.

For Dressy Wear They Are Trimmed With Fur.

The craze for blouses is as great as ever. Spotted silks are still being used, and so are plain and spotted pannes and velvets. Satins in oriental patterns are much in demand for making these separate waists as well as charming novelties in flannel, the latter, of course, being for more useful wear. For afternoons and evenings blouses of chiffon, lace and embroidery with a dainty touch of fur in the shape of mink or sable will compose many of the beautiful new models.

Wide sailor collars are seen on the newer flannel waists. These collars are seldom plain. They are laid in pin tucks and trimmed with scalloped edges of lace.

The proper sleeve for a flannel waist should be in one piece, with a puff below the elbow and a narrow, tight wristband. This wristband is often beautifully trimmed with narrow ribbon or embroidery, in which case the collar and belt match it.

A sensible and becoming flannel waist is here pictured. It is of striped viyella in crimson and black. The front and back are laid in tiny tucks, and the wide collar and lapels are heavily stitched. There is a small vest of cream flannel, tucked and trimmed with two rows of tiny gilt buttons. The blouse is held together in front by a sailor knot of black taffeta. The sleeves are puffed deeply over narrow cuffs, and the belt is of the black taffeta stitched.

EVENING COATS.

They Are Made of Brocade Satin Velvet and Appliqued Silk.

The new evening coats are dreams of beauty, and nothing is spared which can add to their rich appearance. Many are double lined, first with satin and then with a thin veiling of accordion plaited chiffon. A wide chiffon frill is put on very full and allowed to show all around the edges of the garment. It is always of some pale color, often a direct contrast to the outer color of the coat.

Black brocade, satin and peau de soie enriched with lace and black velvet appliqued figures are materials very much in fashion. Bengaline silk is also seen in many of these coats. The most stylish color is black, probably because of its usefulness and because it goes equally well with all the different shades of gowns. Next in favor come coffee color and the new shadings of gun metal gray. Handsome three-quarter capes of lace chiffon and fur have muffs of shirred chiffon to match. Often both muff and wrap are ornamented with a single jeweled velvet flower, such as a huge orchid or a rose with a natural looking stem and foliage.

A rich black brocade evening cloak is shown in the illustration. It is trimmed with bands of sable and a huge frill of black dotted chiffon run through with narrow black velvet ribbons. The lining is of pale pink satin, with an accordion plaited frill of pink chiffon. The sleeves are tight fitting at the top, but flare extremely over the hands. The shoulders are ornamented with a yoke of embroidery and black velvet. This is outlined by tiny rosettes of chiffon. JUDIC CHOLLET.

Wild Flowers.

A correspondent of the Westminster Gazette asserts that England is immensely poorer in flora than the United States. According to his figures the English flora comprises about 1,200 species, excluding ferns, mosses and grasses, while many of our single states can furnish as many or more.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

By Robert Louis Stevenson.

Thereupon I arranged my clothes as best I could, and summoning a passing hansom, drove to a hotel in Portland street, the name of which I chance to remember. At my appearance—which was indeed comical enough, however tragic a fate these garments covered—the driver could not conceal his mirth. I gnashed my teeth upon him with a gust of devlish fury; and the smile withered from his face—happily for him—yet more happly for myself, for in another instant I had certainly dragged him from his perch. At the inn, as I entered, I looked about me with so black a countenance as made the attendants tremble; not a look did they exchange in my presence; but obsequiously took my orders, led me to a private room, and brought me wherewithal to write. Hyde, in danger of his life, was a creature new to me; shaken with inordinate anger, strung to the pitch of murder, lusting to inflict pain. Yet the creature was astute; mastered his fury with a great effort of the will; composed his two important letters, one to Lanyon and one to Poole; and that he might receive actual evidence of their being posted, sent them out with directions that they should be registered.

Thenceforward, he sat all day over the fire in the private room, gnawing his nails; there he dined, sitting alone with his fears, the waiter visibly quailing before his eye; and thence, when the night was fully come; he set forth in the corner of a closed cab, and was driven to and fro about the streets of the city. He, I say—I can not say I—that child of hell had nothing human; nothing lived in him but fear and hatred. And when at last, thinking the driver had begun to grow suspicious, he discharged the cab and ventured on foot, attired in his misfitting clothes, an object marked out for observation, into the midst of the nocturnal passengers, these two base passions raged within him like a tempest. He walked fast, hunted by his fears, chattering to himself, skulking through the less frequented thoroughfares, counting the minutes that still divided him from midnight. Once a woman spoke to him, offering, I think, a box of lights. He smote her in the face, and she fled.

When I came to myself at Lanyon's, the horror of my old friend perhaps affected me somewhat: I do not know; it was at least but a drop in the sea to the abhorrence with which I look back upon these hours. A change had come over me. It was no longer the fear of the gallows, it was the horror of being Hyde that racked me. I recived Lanyon's condemnation partly in a dream; it was partly in a dream that I came home to my own house and got into bed. I slept after the prostration of the day, with a stringent and profound slumber which not even the nightmares that wrung me could avail to break. I awoke in the morning shaken, weakened, but refreshed. I still hated and feared the thought of the brute that slept within me, and I had not of course forgotten the appalling dangers of the day before; but I was once more at home, in my own house and close to my drugs; and gratitude for my escape shone so strong in my soul that it almost rivaled the brightness of hope.

I was stepping leisurely across the court after breakfast drinking the chill of air with pleasure, when I was seized again with those indescribale sensations that heralded the change; and I had but the time to gain the shelter of my cabinet, before I was once again raging and freezing with the passions of Hyde. It took on this occasion a double dose to recall me to myself; and alas! six hours after as I sat looking sadly in the fire, the pangs returned, and the drug had to be readministered. In short, from that day forth it seemed only by a great effort as of gymnastics, and only under the immediate stimulation of the drug that I was able to wear the countenance of Jekyll. At all hours of the day and night I would be taken with the premonitory shudder; above all, if I slept, or even dozed for a moment in my chair, it was always as Hyde that I awakened. Under the strain of this continually impending doom, and by the sleeplessness to which I now condemned myself, ay, even beyond what I had thought possible to man, I became, in my own person, a creature eaten up and emptied by fever, languidly weak both in body and mind and solely occupied by one thought; the horror of my other self. But when I slept, or when the virtue of the medicine wore off, I would leap almost without transition (for the pangs of transformation grew daily less marked) into the possession of a fancy brimming with images of terror, a soul boiling with causeless hatreds, and a body that seemed not strong enough to contain the raging energies of life.

The powers of Hyde seemed to have grown with the sickliness of Jekyll. And certainly the hate that now divided them was equal on each side. With Jekyll it was a thing of vital instinct. He had now seen the full deformity of that creature that shared with him some of the phenomena of consciousness and was co-heir with him to death; and beyond these links of community which in themselves made the most poignant part of his distress he thought of Hyde, for all his energy of life, as of somthing not only hellish but inorganic. This was the shocking thing; that the slime of the pit seemed to utter cries and voices; that the amorphous dust gesticulated and sinned; that what was dead and had no shape should usurp the offices of life. And this again, that that insurgent horror was knit to him closer than a wife, closer than an eye lay caged in his flesh, where he heard it mutter and felt it struggle to be born; and at every hour of weakness, and in the confidence of slumber, prevailed against him, and deposed him out of life.

The hatred of Hyde for Jekyll was of a different order. His terror of the gallows drove him continually to commit temporary suicide, and return to his subordinate station of a part instead of a person; but he loathed the necessity, he loathed the despondency into which Jekyll was now fallen, and he resented the dislike with which he was himself regarded. Hence the ape-like tricks that he would play me, scrawling in my own hand blasphemies on the pages of my books, burning the letters and destroying the portrait of my father; and indeed, had it not been for this fear of death, he would long ago have runied himself in order to involve me in ruin. But his love of life is wonderful; I go further; I, who sicken and freeze at the mere thought of him, when I recall the abjection and passion of this attachment, and when I know how he fears my power to cut him off by suicide, I find it in my heart to pity him.

It is useless, and the time awfully fails me, to prolong this description; no one has ever suffered such torments, let that suffice; and yet even to these, habit brought—no, not alleviation—but a certain callousness of soul, a certain acquiescence of despair; and my punishment might have gone on for years, but for the last calamity which has now fallen, and which has finally severed me from my own face and nature. My provision of the salt, which had never been renewed since the date of first experiment, began to run low. I sent out for a fresh supply, and mixed the draught; the ebullition followed, and the first change of color, not the second; I drank it and it was without efficiency. You will learn from Poole how I have had London ransacked; it was in vain; and I am now persuaded that my first supply was impure, and that it was that unknown impurity which lent efficacy to the draught.

About a week has passed, and I am now finishing this statement under the influence of the last of the old powders. This, then, is the last time, short of a miracle, that Henry Jekyll can think his own thoughts or see his own face—now how sadly altered!—in the glass. Nor must I delay too long to bring my writing to an end; for if my narrative has hitherto escaped destruction, it has been a combination of great prudence and great good luck. Should the throes of change take me in the act of writing it, Hyde will tear it in pieces; but if some time shall have elapsed after I have laid it by, his wonderful selfishness and circumspection for the moment will probably save it once again from the action of his ape-like spite. And indeed the doom that is closing on us both, has already changed and crushed him. Half an hour from now, when I shall again and forever reindue that hated personality, I know how I shall sit shuddering and weeping in my chair, or continue, with the most strained and fear-struck ectasy of listening, to pace up and down this room (my last earthly refuge), and give ear to every sound of menace. Will Hyde die upon the scaffold? or will he find courage to release himself at the last moment? God knows; I am careless; this is my true hour of death, and what is to follow concerns another than myself. Here then, as I lay down the pen and proceed to seal up my confession, I bring the life of that unhappy Henry Jekyll to an end.

Not One Woman in a Thousand Knows the Proper Way to Leave a Street Car.

"Dern these women!"

Thus ejaculated a Metropolitan street car conductor the other morning as he gave the bell rope a vicious double pull to signal the motorman to go ahead. A reporter who knew him expressed surprise at his ungallant remark.

"I didn't mean anything disrespectful," said the fare taker, wearily, "but sometimes I have to let loose. The women set me crazy the way they get off cars. Now, that one nearly got a fall by getting off backward, the way she did. If there had been the littlest bit of motion to this car when she stepped off with her face to the rear end she'd have gone kerthump down on the concrete.

"Not one in a thousand women," he continued, "ever alights from a street car right. Instead of taking hold of the handle bar on the upright toward the front of the car, she grabs the one back. If you don't believe it watch this push and see if I'm not telling you a true one."

The reporter said he'd watch, and he did, not only on this car, but several others he rode on during the course of the day. He watched men and women alike. Out of 67 women who alighted 65 of them got up when their corner was reached and carefully selected the wrong handle bar to assist them in alighting. Out of 114 men none took other than the proper clutch contrivance. Seven of them, however, invited the foolkiller's attention. They jumped off while the car was speeding rapidly. Any Washingtonian can prove the truth of Conductor 9999's assertion by keeping eyes peeled when street car riding.

DEAEH MISSED HIS MARK.

Narrow Escapes of Railroad Men from Impending Disaster—One with a Touch of Comedy.

A group of railroaders sat and talked on narrow escapes, says the Philadelphia Record. One of them said: "On a certain afternoon I was walking over a one-track trestle 50 feet high. A train came on me and I had to step off the track and stand on the little space—a space less than a foot wide—between the track and the trestle's edge. I stood there, facing the train, and as it went by, to keep myself from losing my balance, for only my toes were on the ties, my heels unsupported in the air—I had to take hold and let go again of the various parts of the engine and of the coaches. Of course the train wasn't going fast. Otherwise I should have been shaken off and killed.

"In the way of scares I have had my share, too, but one of my greatest shocks had comedy in it. We had on our division a shifting engine that ran as softly and silently as an engine in a dream—a wonderful machine she was—for fair. Well, one day I was walking the tracks and thinking, when a pleasant voice right behind me murmured: 'Say, hadn't you better get off and let us go by?' I turned in astonishment, for I had thought I was alone, and the shifting engine was halted with her cowcatcher hardly a yard from my back. They had shut off everything, glided down on me and tried to see how near to me they could stop."

OLDEST DOLL IN AMERICA.

"Georgia," Owned by Mrs. Lincoln, of Chelsea, Massachusetts, Has Existed in Three Centuries.

The oldest doll, as far as known, in any part of this country, is "Georgia," the property of Mrs. Alice L. Lincoln, of Chelsea, Mass.

"Georgia," being over a hundred years old, can well boast of having "lived" in three centuries. Four generations of children have petted and beaten her by turns, and, although her smiling countenance bears many a mark of "the whips and scorns of time," and her shapely brown head, with an occasional ugly dent, would seem to indicate that the skull might easily stand a little trepanning, nevertheless this children's idol of bygone days is in a remarkable state of preservation.

"Georgia" was originally a "southern lassie" and was raised in Milledgeville, Ga., "befo' de wah." She was given to Mrs. Lincoln's mother, in exchange for a ring, by Miss Weekes, an old schoolmate.

The latter's mother had previously paraded the doll in the doll carriage of her times, and perhaps if Georgia could only use the artificial tongue with which she is provided her previous family history might prove her rightful eligibility to the Society of Colonial Dames.

A Hoard of Shinplasters.

A rather unusual and unique deposit was made at the Lynnville bank recently. Aunt Betsy White, an old negro woman, brought a large roll of "shinplasters," amounting to $9.85 in 50, 25 and 10-cent pieces. The paper bills show they have been handled with care, despite the fact that the old woman claims to have had them in her possession since 1863.

Big Money in Potatoes.

It is estimated that one county on the eastern shore of Virginia, containing a population of about 13,000, sold this year 550,000 barrels of Irish potatoes at a profit of $1,000,000, which means that every man, woman and child in the county would be entitled to receive, if the money were distributed pro rata, something more than $75 from one crop alone.

"None but the Thrifty

FIRE ON THE MOUNTAIN.

Burning Woods Destroy Fences and Threaten Other Property.

The woods along Johnston's Drive, which are set on fire every fall by boys or hunters, are again burning and destroying the fences and woodland, beside endangering houses and barns along the line of the mountains. For a number of years the practice of setting these fires has been gone on and no real effort has ever been made to catch the party doing it, although each year the farmers, who are obliged to turn out and protect their property, vow vengeance but when the fire is out the matter is soon forgotten.

arily remains in Trenton from Mondays until Thursdays.

The Governor's first communication to the Legislature is by an inaugural address, delivered when he is sworn into office. He writes and sends to the Legislature an annual message at the opening of each legislative session, in which he reports upon State conditions and makes such recommendations as may seem necessary, or desirable. This is the most important State paper issued and probably the most universally read.

HIS OPENING TREAT.

Charles Battell Loomis and Miss Akers Singing Girls Will Be the United Attractions.

The efforts and endeavors of Manager Maze Edwards for the presentation of refined entertainments at the Casino is deserving of much encouragement and liberal patronage. Owing to the size of the stage and limited scenery he will be unable to present many dramatic performances, except in the case of petite comedies without change of scene and small casts. Several of these plays and occasional vaudeville will be given during the season, but attention is called now to the appearance of Charles Battell Loomis, the author-humorist, in conjunction with Miss Sally Frothingham Ackers and her "Singing Girls" Thursday night.

These talented artists make a combination which is unsurpassed in point of artistic merit and have given unqualified satisfaction wherever heard. Mr. Loomis is the author of all the things that he will read and sing. He is the possessor of two singing voices, a baritone and a falsetto, neither of which he takes seriously, thus enabling his audiences to laugh at him without hurting his feelings—a thing not always possible at a concert.

Mr. Loomis never smiles. He is glad if the audience undertakes that part of the programme and it always does.

Of Miss Sally Frothingham Ackers and her "Singing Girls" the highest praise has been given. Their selections are classic and popular, rendered in manner alike, pleasing and artistic. For the general accommodation of the public Manager Edwards will have all reserved-seat tickets for this and all other entertainments on sale at "The Apotbecary's," Armstrong's, where seats can now be secured.

STROKE WAS FATAL.

Isaac Smalley Died This Morning After a Brief Illness

Isaac Smalley died this morning at his home on East Front street, corner of Westervelt avenue, following a short illness. Saturday he suffered a paralytic stroke and from that time until his death he was helpless.

Mr. Smalley was seventy-one years of age and had been a resident of Plainfield twenty years, the most part of which was spent in retirement. He formerly lived at Piscataway. At one time he was a dealer in wood. He also resided at Newark for a time. He was well known as a fisherman, it being his favorite sport.

He leaves four sons, Edward and William Smalley, of New Brunswick; Charles Smalley, of East Orange; Isaac Smalley of the borough, and two daughters, Mrs. Etta Dayton and Miss L. A. Smalley, the modiste, of East Front street.

The funeral services will be held at his late residence, Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

BETTER THAN A FENCE.

Troublesome Monkeys Kept at a Distance by Dauding with Treacle and Tartar Emetic.

In "A Sportswoman in India" Miss Savory writes entertainingly of the monkeys in the foothills of the Himalayas. For cool impudence and audacity, she says, these hill monkeys stand unrivaled; they slip into the bungalows at Dalhousie and carry off anything from the breakfast or tea table, if the room is empty. They spring from tree to tree, from house to house—a mother, it may be, with two young ones clinging to her, a loaf of bread in one hand and a bunch of bananas in her mouth, which she had just "sneaked" from a dining-room.

"Of course, monkeys are very troublesome in plantations. Few men can shoot a monkey; they are too human-like and pathetic when wounded. We met an Englishman who was trying to protect his sugar cane patch with a great trench and a palisade covered with nails. All to no purpose.

"He walked down to it one morning and found a row of monkeys seated on the palisade. The moment he came within reach they threw his own sugar cane into his face, after which they got down and strolled away, leisurely munching.

"Such things were not to be borne. Our friend chased a flock into a tree, felled the tree and caught four or five young monkeys. The parents waited near, in great consternation, anxiously watching while their infants were painted from head to foot with treacle and tartar emetic. On being allowed to go they rushed off into the fond and welcoming arms, and were instantly carried up into the woods, and there assiduously licked clean from top to toe by their affectionate parents.

"The natural effects followed, and the pitiable condition of the old monkeys can scarcely be imagined. That patch of sugar cane was never rifled again."

THE NEW ENGLAND WOMAN

Not a Prepossessing Figure in Outline or Motion, According to This Writer.

In body she belongs to a people which has spent its physical force, and lacks vitality, says Kate Stephens, in Atlantic. She is slight. There is lack of adipose tissue—reserve force—throughout her frame. Her lungs are apt to be weak, waist normal and hips undersized.

She is awkward in movement. Her climate has not suffered her relaxation and the ease and curve of motion that more enervating air imparts. This is seen even in public. In walking she holds her elbows set in an angle, and sometimes she steps out in the tilt of the Cantabrigian man. In this is perhaps an unconscious imitation, a sympathetic copying, of an admirable norm, but it is graceless in petticoats. As she steps, she knocks her skirt with her knees, and gives you the impression that her leg is crooked, that she does not lock her knee joint. More often she toes in than out.

She has a marvelously delicate, brilliant, fine-grained skin. It is innocent of powder and purely natural. No beer in past generations has entered its making, and no port; also, little flesh.

NOT PROUD OF HIS HONORS.

Col. Rickey Is Known Chiefly as the Godfather of a Noted Drink.

Some people are born to fame; others achieve it, while celebrity is thrust upon a few. Among the latter is Col. Joe Rickey, of Missouri. But instead of feeling proud of the fact that he has given his name to a popular tipple Col. Rickey feels very much aggrieved. "only a few years ago," he said recently, "I was Col. Rickey, of Missouri, the friend of senators, judges and statesmen and something of an authority on political matters and political movements. As time had dealt lightly with me I had no right to quarrel with the world. I am still the friend of statesmen and politicians, and I think I keep fairly well in touch with the world. But am I ever spoken of for those reasons? I fear not. No, I am known to fame as the author of the 'Rickey,' and I have to be satisfied with that. There is one consolation in the fact that there are fashions in drinks. The present popularity of the Scotch high ball may possibly lose me my reputation and restore me my former fame. 'Tis a consummation devoutly to be wished for."

Fooled by the Barber.

"The cranks often get fooled, and we make them believe that they are getting what they want when they are not getting it," says the Milwaukee Sentinel. "I remember a man I shaved just twice in a town out in the state. He wanted a very close shave, so close, in fact, that he could not feel the beard by rubbing his face either with or against the 'grain.' It would take about three-quarters of an hour to accomplish this, which was far too much time to spend on him for ten cents, so I resorted to stategy. After shaving him carefully in the usual way, I washed his face with alum water, which caused the skin to close over the ends of the hairs, and, rub as he might, he could not feel a hair. Of course, in an hour or so, when the effect of the alum water had worn off, the beard made its appearance, but he did not understand the situation. This is a trick commonly resorted to by barbers with men who want an unreasonably close shave."

DAILY PRESS LEAGUE READY FOR OPENING.

Annual Meeting Held Last Night When Officers Were Elected and Schedule Made.

COMPOSED OF FOUR CLUBS.

TO BE CONDUCTED ON SAME LINES AS LAST YEAR.

Season Will Open With Two Matches on Thursday, December 5—One Team and Two Individual Prizes—Five-Men Teams.

No changes will be made in the composition of The Daily Press Bowling League in the season which is about to begin. A meeting of the league was held in The Daily Press office last evening when plans for the season were completed, officers elected and a schedule adopted. There was every evidence that the games would attract even more interest than in previous years and that there would be plenty of enthusiasm at the games.

This season's championship will be conducted on the same lines as was the one last year. The old officers were re-elected as follows: President, S. C. Greves, of Roselle; secretary, Charles B. Morse, of Plainfield. The others present at the meeting of last evening were Hugh Miller, of the Roselle Casino; William B. Faber, of the Park Club, of this city; C. J. McIntire and C. L. Emmons, of the Cranford Casino. Owing to a dance at the Westfield Club, that club had no representative present but Fred P. Condit explained over the 'phone that his club would have a team in the field and expected to win.

The Daily Press trophy has now been won twice by the Roselle Casino. Another win will make it the permanent property of that club. Otherwise the winner this season will hold the trophy for another year. A first team prize, valued at $30, will also be awarded. Individual prizes for the highest average, valued at $10, and for the highest average spares, valued at $5, will also be given. No player can receive more than one prize and seventy-five per cent. of the games must be rolled in order to qualify for individual prizes.

The season will open Thursday, December 5, when the Roselle Casino will roll three games on the alleys of the Westfield Club and the Cranford Casino will send a team to the alleys of the Park Club for a series of three. Each team will meet each other team once at home and once on their opponent's alleys. Three games will be rolled at each meeting. The teams will be of five men each.

WEDDED WITHOUT DISPLAY.

Marriage of Miss Louise A. Austin, of Elizabeth, to Walter L. Higgins, at Bride's Home.

With only a few relatives and friends present, Miss Louise A. Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fitch, of Elizabeth, was married to Walter L. Higgins, of this city, Monday evening. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents on Chestnut street, by Rev. Mr. Blume, of the Park church.

There were no attendants and the event was devoid of display. Miss Austin was attired in a traveling gown and carried chrysanthemums. Immediately after the ceremony, the young people went to their new home on Chestnut street, which had been completely furnished.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Higgins, of West Front street, and holds a responsible position with the Æolian Company, at Garwood.

Shot Off His Toe.

While gunning one day last week Paul Kellem, a sixteen-year-old boy of Washingtonville, met with an accident which may cost him the loss of a toe. The young man was after rabbits with a flobert rifle, when he stumbled in a field and the weapon was accidently discharged. A shot entered the big toe of his right foot. It is believed that amputation will be necessary.

Fell on His Head.

A fall from the second story of his house, which is in the course of construction, rendered Richard Muldenkie, of Washingtonville, unconscious Saturday afternoon. He fell heavily on his head in the cellar. Hugo Kellem came to the injured man's assistance and later conveyed him to this city, where a physician found that the injuries consisted of bad bruises.

To Their New Quarters.

Smalley Brothers have commenced to remove their meat market to their new building on North avenue.

NEW RESORT.

Plans Made to Establish One With Varied Attractions at Dewey Park Next Year.

An ideal resort will be located at Dewey Park in the near future, according to S. D. Drake, who states that a syndicate of capitalists has purchased the grove and fifteen additional acres at the Park from the Middlesex Land Company. The Dewey Park Carnival Company will be incorporated and the whole tract of land will be overhauled.

An engineer will prepare plans for an artificial lake, to adjoin Green brook. In the Park will be erected a building of dimensions sufficient to accommodate 1,000 people. A scenic railroad will connect the building and the lake. It is intended to have the resort ready for an opening on May 1, 1902.

The company, it is expected, will macadamize the thoroughfares surrounding the grounds and also plant flower beds at various points. Mr. Drake says that a large depot will be erected opposite the Park on the line of the Jersey Central Railroad, and that also a waiting room will be placed on the route of the trolley.

NO REDUCTION OF DAMAGES.

C. A. MARSH WON HIS POINT BEFORE SUPREME COURT.

Trolley Company Attempted to Have Verdict Set Aside as Being Excessive But Without Success.

In the case of Albert W. Moffett against the Elizabeth, Plainfield and Central Jersey Street Railway Company, Frank Bergen yesterday argued before the Supreme Court for a rule to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside.

His ground was that the $5,000 damages awarded by the jury were grossly excessive as the plaintiff had merely a scalp wound and a few superficial burns, the heart disease of the plaintiff not being due to the accident.

Craig A. Marsh, who had recovered the verdict for Mr. Moffett, argued in support of it that the injuries were of a serious and permanent character and were undoubtedly directly attributable to the accident as the jury had found from the evidence submitted on both sides. He maintained that $5,000 was not too much to compensate a man for the loss of robust health and vigor, and strongly urged the court to decide the case at once in favor of his client.

The court sustained Mr. Marsh's argument and refused Mr. Bergen's application. Judgment has been entered for the amount of the verdict with costs.

FIRST REUNION.

Made The Occasion For Installation of Officers of The Women's Union Relief Corps.

A feature of the encampment of the Union Veterans' Union was the installation of officers of the Women's Relief Corps in Washington Hall yesterday afternoon. Col. Kuntz, of Jersey City, acted as installation officer. It was part of the proceedings of the first annual reunion of the corps and the new ritual was consequently used for the first time.

The officers installed were: President, Mrs. M. H. Hancock, of Jersey City; senior vice-president, Mrs. Emogene Perrin, of Elmira, N. Y.; junior vice-president, Mrs. Amelia Lord, Binghamton, N. Y.; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah Odell; secretary, Mrs. Amelia Peterson; treasurer, Mrs. Helena Chapelle; conductress, Mrs. Hattie Davis, of Jersey City; assistant conductress, Mrs. Sarah Moore, of Elmira, N. Y.; inside guard, Mrs. Emma Stevens, of North Plainfield; outside guard, Mrs. Sarah Drinnell; flag bearers, Mrs. Emma Cox, of this city, and Mrs. Margaret Garrison, of Jersey City.

TOLD WHAT HE SAW.

Rev. C. E. Herring's Talk on "How They Do Things in Holland."

Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, who visited Holland last summer while abroad on his vacation, gave a delightful lecture in the church last evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. By the aid of photographs thrown on a screen he took a large audience through that quaint, but attractive country, that has been sought by many pleasure seekers. Mr. Herring's subject was "How They Do Things in Holland." The proceeds of the lecture will be devoted toward the building of a kitchen on the rear of the church, a goodly sum already having been secured for the object.

Mme. Grand to Lecture Here.

Mme. Sarah Grand, better known as the authoress of "The Heavenly Twins," is to lecture at the Casino Thursday, Nov. 21.

CLOSING SESSION OF THE FALL MEETING.

Proceedings of the Northern New Jersey Conference of Congregational Churches.

SOME INTERESTING TALKS.

DELEGATES ENTERTAINED AT DINNER IN CHURCH PARLORS.

Remarks on Applied Christianity, Anarchy and the Problem of the Boy—Eighty Delegates Present—Assistants at Dinner.

The afternoon and closing session of the fall meeting of the Northern New Jersey Congregational Conference was continued in the Congregational church yesterday afternoon with a good attendance of delegates and members of the home church. Rev Judson Swift, of New York, was the first speaker, presenting the work of the American Tract Society. He urged all to lend their united support toward this society and thus help to spread the Gospel to all parts of this and other countries. He spoke of the fact that during the past year in this country $52,000,000 was given to colleges and universities, and he thought that the giving toward the work of the society should be encouraged.

At this time the nominating committee presented its report, which resulted in the election of the following officers: Moderator, Rev. John L Scudder, of Jersey City; vice-moderator, Rev. Dr. Dwight E. Marvin, of Asbury Park; scribe and treasurer, Rev. O.C. Collins, of Newark; membership committee, Rev. A. H. Bradford, Montclair; Rev. William Hayes Ward, of Newark, the latter being re-elected as their terms expired; church fellowship, Rev. H. A. M. Briggs, of Waverley; Rev. Ellsworth Bonfils, of Paterson; Rev. W. J. Paske, of Montclair; Rev. C. A. Meggs, of Orange Valley; Alexander Millar, of Plainfield; applied Christianity, Rev. James M. Whiton, of New York; Rev. Louis F. Berry, of Montclair; Rev. George L. Hanscom, of Newark: Rev. Elliott W. Brown, of Glen Ridge.

Rev. J. L Scudder, of Jersey City; Rev. Wm. A. Rice, of Newark; Rev. C. C. Collins, of Newark, were appointed a committee to arrange for the next meeting to be held in the Belleville Avenue Congregational church at Newark

After the election Rev. James M. Whiton, chairman of the committee on applied Christianity, made a few remarks concerning the work of the committee. He suggested that hereafter at least one subject be devoted on the programme to applied Christianity, and that the local committee in every church adopt an aggressive plan of action against particular evils, especially that of gambling, which is nowadays affecting the churches. After Mr. Whiton's talk one of the delegates suggested that a series of questions be drafted and sent to the various committees for consideration, thus outlining specific work to be performed.

The next number on the programme was an address by Rev. William A. Rice, pastor of the Belleville Avenue Congregational church, of Newark. His subject was "The Duty of the Pulpit in the Suppression of Anarchy." Mr. Rice delivered a forceful address. He divided anarchy into two parts—"Intellectual" and "Revolutionary." The first he did not consider especially harmful, but the latter he did. He placed Emma Goldman and John Most in the latter class. These people he considered to be outside the pale of all reason and he recommended legal action against them, making death the penalty for an attempt upon life. Mr. Rice spoke of the feeling of discontent among anarchists and he believed that the proper fellowship on the part of Christian people would help to correct this evil.

The speaker did not believe that the church should be the tool of any faction. He thought there was a need of a revival of the preaching of the law of God and that an effort should be made to counteract the efforts of men who seek to overthrow the law. Mr. Rice spoke strongly against the saloon evil, and characterized it as the epitome of all crime and a blot on civilization. He advocated high ideals in the public school and press. He spoke in a humorous way of the church novelties now resorted to, such as roof gardens, women going to church without hats and men appearing in shirtwaists, and thought some of these things should be changed. He thought the church should be the ally of all good and the enemy of all that is bad.

Following Mr. Rice's address, another interesting address was given by Rev. Howard S. Bliss, of Upper Montclair, whose subject was "The Problem of the Boy." He characterized the boy as the most difficult of all problems, the most baffling, discouraging, yet fascinating and encouraging problem that ever confronted one. He said that the boy was most always to be found where he was not wanted. He was pictured as a composite photograph out of focus.

"Yet" said the speaker, "we all love the boy and are grateful that he exists. Universities, schools and the best minds all over the world are considering plans and methods for training the boy. The boy likes to be recognized in some way, and there are ways to be studied whereby the boy can be reached and made a man."

Mr. Bliss spoke of the different periods in a boy's life when he is most susceptible to influence and threw out valuable hints and suggestions as to how the best influence can be exerted. Following the speaker's remarks, an informal discussion of the two addresses followed. The conference then adjourned, it being late in the afternoon and the delegates were anxious to catch trains.

During the noon hour yesterday, the eighty delegates were served with a delightful dinner in the parlors of the church. The table decorations were yellow and white, and were very attractive. After the dinner there was several speeches that were greatly enjoyed by all. Rev. J. L. Scudder, the moderator, acted as toast-master.

Those in charge of the dinner included the women of the church. Mrs. Eugene M. Laing was the chairman of all committees, and assisting her were Mrs. L. B. Morgan, Mrs. Messerschmidt, Mrs. Floyd Fuller, Mrs. Henry Nomer and Mrs. Wyant who were in the kitchen; Mrs. John M. Whiton, Mrs. Joseph E. Morse, Mrs. William McIntosh, Mrs. Joseph Fuller, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Weeks, Mrs. A. C LaBoyteaux, Mrs. John V. Beekman, Miss Jessie McIntosh, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, who were in the dining room. Mrs. Morse and Mrs. McIntosh poured coffee.

The waitresses were Miss May Kirkner, Miss Mary Whiton, Miss Lincoln, Miss Ethel McIntosh, Miss Nellie Winckler, Miss Ethel Millar, Miss Marion Woodcock, Miss Maude Belknap, Miss Ella Whitall, Miss Saidee Mae Howell, Miss Margaret Weseman, Miss Lockhart, Mrs. Harsell and Mrs. Herold Tomlinson. Other women who assisted were Mrs. E. L. Suffern, Mrs. George S. Raynolds, Mrs. G. H. Kenyon and Mrs. Alonzo Weseman.

The delegates from the Congregational church to the conference were Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, Mrs. George S. Raynolds and Joseph E Morse.

UNION VETERANS' UNION ENCAMPMENT BEGINS

First Session Yesterday Afternoon—Campfire Last Night—Meetings Today.

VIEWED CITY YESTERDAY.

VISITORS WELCOMED BY MAYORS OF CITY AND BOROUGH.

Sessions Are Held in Washington Hall While Headquarters is Located at Hotel Plainfield—Entertainment for Visitors Last Night.

The opening session of the annual encampment of the New York and New Jersey Division of the Union Veterans' Union, which is being held in this city, took place in Washington Hall yesterday afternoon. General A. A. Lord called the meeting to order and welcomed his comrades.

Inasmuch as the real business was intended to be reserved until today nothing of importance was transacted, unless it was the appointment of a committee on credentials, which consisted of Col. Lewis, of Middletown, N. Y., and Col. Stewart and Col. Stretch, of New York City. The major portion of the afternoon was devoted to sight seeing, the fifty delegates and numerous other veterans being shown about the beautiful streets of the city and the borough.

During the afternoon, on an invitation extended, Mayor Olin L. Jenkins called at the Hotel Plainfield, which is the headquarters of the Union Veterans' Union during the encampment, and informally welcomed General Lord and his staff. A reply was made by the commander.

A campfire was held in Washington Hall in the evening, and the place was well filled when the meeting was called to order. The entire audience joined in singing "Nearer, My God, To Thee." Mayor Jenkins formally welcomed the delegates to the city and expressed the hope that they would be richly entertained during their stay. John Goodwin, the chaplain of the Antietam Command, of this city, offered prayer.

"In Memorium," was sung by Mlle. Mira Marisona, and Miss Try Mattox recited a humorous selection. Albert Stoker contributed a song to the evening's entertainment, and then Col Charles R. Wales, of Jersey City, made a short address appropriate to the occasion. "We'll Stand by the Flag," and "Marching Through Georgia," were sung by Mlle. Marisona. Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, in his usual style, extended a welcome to the delegates on behalf of the citizens of the borough.

Miss Josie Murphy recited "Barbara Freitchie" and "General Joe Wheeler at Santiago" in a clever way. "Little Coon" was the title of a recitation by Miss Madeline Edgar, of Westfield. General Lord spoke a few words to his comrades.

After Mlle. Marisona had rendered another selection, entitled "The Flag," Mrs. Wallace Kaylor recited a dramatic piece, at the same time exhibiting a flag which had been captured by the Confederate troops and recaptured by the Sixty-ninth Massachusetts Regiment. Samuel Frazee entertained the crowd with several violin selections, and then Mr. Goode, of Westfield, made a patriotic address. Miss Lyda Edgar, of Westfield, rendered a piano solo, and Miss Hatye Edgar, of Westfield, played a selection entitled "Storm with Fire Bells."

A veteran sailor, John Tola, sang a comic selection. "Big Wax Doll" was sung by Miss Lydia Edgar, of Westfield, and as a climax to the evening's entertainment the audience, lead by Mlle. Marisona, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner."

When the veterans met this morning the following officers' reports were read: Commander A. A Lord, Adjutant General Watson and Quartermaster General L. W. Sullivan, as well as those of the staff.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Department commander, B. S. Dayton, of Middletown, N. Y; first deputy commander, John Morrin, of Waterloo, N. WHAT OTHERS SAY.

Press Praise For Charles Battell Loomis Who Appears at The Casino Tomorrow Night.

Charles Battell Loomis, the author-humorist, who is to at the Casino tomorrow night in conjunction with Miss Sally Frothingham Akers and her "Singing Girls," is a great favorite in the western cities where he has appeared, and the press is unanimous in praise of his work.

He was in Minneapolis a few weeks ago and The Times of that city said: "Charles Battell Looms at the Lyceum theatre last evening, proved himself possessed, not only of the true essence of humor, but of a versatility bound to reach the perception of every hearer, no matter how diverse the temperaments of his auditors." Mr. Loomis' picture and his books are very much in evidence in Estil's book store, following the exhibition of the works of Mr. Thompson Seton.

"The Singing Girls" and Miss Sally Frothingham Akers, will be a novelty such as never has been heard in this city. The entire presentation tomorrow night, will be one of the best offered the amusement-seeking public. Reserved seats at Armstrong's.

KEPT GOAT IN CITY LIMITS.

SAMUEL ROBINSON AND HIS PYTHIAN CHARGE HAULED TO COURT.

Charged With Violating Ordinances of Board of Health—Sentence Was Suspended.

After a legal battle which lasted a hour, Samuel Robinson, of West Front street, received a suspension of sentence before Justice Huff, in the City Court, this morning, for having kept "Miss Calanthe," the famous Pythian goat, in his house contrary to the ordinance of the Board of Health.

Councilman-elect C. L. Murphy, Collector F. H. Smith, Chief Kiely, Boundsman Mattox and Patrolman McCarthy and Health Inspector Addis were called to prove the charge. George O. Stevens and Charles W. Bunyon were witnesses for the defense. There was much conflict of testimony as to whether "Miss Calanthe" is a goat, the defense maintaining that it is an ibex.

Justice Huff refused to entertain a motion to dismiss the proceedings on the ground that the prosecution had not proved its case. After delivering a rebuke to Mr. Robinson, Justice Huff allowed him to go on a suspension of sentence.

LAMBERT'S TROUBLES.

One Arrest and More to Follow For Trespassing on John Lambert's Property.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, November 13.—John Lambert, the well-known distiller from the lower end of the township, is having all kinds of trouble trying to keep his place free from trespassers. Yesterday a party by the name of Tobin was brought before Judge Clark charged by Lambert with disorderly conduct and trespassing.

The examination showed Tobin guilty, and he was sentenced to a fine of $3 and costs or twenty days in jail. The prisoner paid the fine and was released.

Several days ago Lambert ordered two strangers to move off his premises The strangers turned on the old man and struck him several times, injuring his arm quite severely, besides using abusive language to him. Mr. Lambert did not know the men, but is trying to locate them. As soon as as they are found warrants will be issued charging them with atrocious assault and battery.

AFTER TROLLEY COMPANY.

One Judgment Sustained, Another Settled and Third Under Consideration.

Lawyer Robert Clark, who is the counsel for Mrs. Hart and Miss Hart, of Cranford, and Mrs. Kiemann, of Newark, all of whom were injured in a trolley accident, and for whom verdicts were secured, went to Trenton Monday to argue for the privilege of entering judgment. The verdict of $1,800 for Mrs. Hart was sustained, and in the verdict of $5,000 for Miss Hart the court reserved its decision. Mr. Clark secured a satisfactory settlement for Mrs. Kiemann, the trolley company allowing her a sum close to the original amount given by the jury at the trial, which was $5,200.

Black Troops in Pall Mall.

Something really picturesque was seen in Pall Mall the other day, when a body of black troops in brown holland uniforms, marched superbly by. London could see for itself, what it has often heard, that Africa supplied a splendid set of fighting men for service against the Ashantis. No kings could have marched with a mien more proud than theirs; and, martinets in military etiquette, they did not turn an eye, not even an eyelash to acknowledge the really spontaneous cheer which greeted them from the little crowd assembled opposite to Marlborough house. Many of these negro braves speak English fluently, and are particularly well-informed in our affairs, but not one of them recognized Lord Rosebery, who gave them a stare of half-astonished admiration as he happened to pass them in Pall Mall.—London Chronicle.

Mt. Everest Has Never Been Climbed.

If you thirst for something really new, if you want to do something which has never been done before, here is a chance for you. Climb Mount Everest. Its height is 29,002 feet, and you will not find anything in the nature of a paper bag on its snow-capped summit, for the excursionist has not reached there yet. The highest point to which man has so far climbed is 23,393 feet. This is the height of Aconcagua, the loftiest summit of the main cordillera of the Andes. This point was reached by the guide Mattias Zurbriggen and Mr. Vines, two members of the expedition that went out in 1897 under Mr. E. A. Fitzgerald. Before this the record was held by Sir William Martin Conway's expedition, which in 1892 climbed a mountain in the Karakoram Himalayas just 22,600 feet high.—Pearson's Magazine.

The German Crown Prince.

Notwithstanding the German emperor's desire that the crown prince should give strict attention to his school duties, it is nevertheless his expressed wish that the young man's university career shall be unburdened by the oppressive official homage from the many small municipalities through which his excursions may lead him. This desire of an imperial father has been respected, but it does not prevent the crown prince from becoming the cynosure of interest wherever he may halt. Not long ago he stopped with his motor car at Remagen, a dreamy old town on the Rhine. In the public house of the place there was a Hungarian band playing its peculiar melodies to the delight of the townspeople. When the prince arrived he insisted on learning to play on the piano, and after a short lesson actually succeeded in enticing some simple melodies from the instrument, to the great joy of the innkeeper and his assembled guests, who vigorously applauded the young man's efforts.—Golden Days.

ADMITTED TO PRACTICE.

Russell Harrison Proposes to Fight War Department's Treatment.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 13.—Colonel Russell B. Harrison, son of former President Benjamin Harrison, was yesterday admitted to practice law by the county, state, supreme and federal courts on the motion of former United States Attorney General W. H. H. Miller, former law partner of the late ex-President Harrison, and State Attorney General Taylor. Colonel Harrison will open a law office in Indianapolis, and it is said that his associate will be Professor Ingler, dean of the Indianapolis College of Law.

Colonel Harrison in reply to an inquiry said:

"This consummation of a long cherished intention has been hastened by my own desire and my father's dying wish that I should carry out his intention to fight to the end the unjust and unmilitary treatment meted out to me by the war department.

"To do this successfully I found it necessary to have a complete training in law, and I have therefore, since my father's sudden sickness and death, devoted all my time to completing my final studies and examinations, thereby rounding out my law studies, work and experience as inspector general and provost marshal general in connection with the establishment and maintenance of civil military governments in Cuba and Porto Rico."

CONVICTED OF MURDER.

Maine Woodsman Found Guilty on Circumstantial Evidence.

SKOWHEGAN, Me., Nov. 13.—A jury found Alexander Theriault, a woodsman, guilty of murder in the first degree in causing the death of Mathias Pare, a young Canadian logger. The penalty is life imprisonment. Pare's body was found beside a trail in the woods of the Moosehead region last March. The sun and winds had cleared off the snow under which it was buried and at the same time left intact snowshoe prints on the layer of snow on which Pare was killed. Beside the body was a rifle cartridge shell. Pare left a logging camp a month before with his winter's wages, bound for his home in Canada.

Theriault was arrested on circumstantial evidence, and on it also he was convicted. The chief points were the snowshoe prints of peculiar character, which compared with the marks of Theriault's shoes; the rifle shell, which was peculiarly marked by the firing pin of his rifle; the fact that he was seen on the road the day Pare left camp and that Theriault, while penniless before that time, had money enough later to pay numerous bills. At the trial no word of reproach was said against Theriault, for he had always been a steady, hard working woodsman. He lived in the woods with his family.

Minister's Mysterious Death.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The Rev. Christian Haddeus, for many years pastor of a Lutheran church in Columbus, O., is dead in this city. His body was found floating in the water off South Brooklyn last Saturday and taken to the morgue. There it lay unidentified until yesterday, when Adolph Kerler of New York city, a nephew of the minister, claimed it. Just how Mr. Haddeus met his death will probably never be known, but the nephew thinks it an accident. He left Mr. Kerler's house Oct. 4 to draw money from a bank, but did not do so and was not seen alive afterward by his relatives. He was seventy years old and said to be possessed of considerable property.

Governor Wood at Santiago.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Nov. 13.—Governor General Wood and Mrs. Wood, Collector Bliss, Captain Slocum, Major Kean and several ladies have arrived here on the government yacht Kanawha. General Wood has expressed himself as greatly pleased with the appearance of the city and the recent improvements. Yesterday afternoon he inspected the troops at Morro barracks. He will remain in the district for several days looking over the military posts and examining the public works.

An Impromptu Launching.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 13.—The Chesapeake and Ohio railway steamboat Virginia was launched at the Trigg shipyard here yesterday. Just before the time appointed for the launching some of the timbers under the boat gave way, and the craft's plunge was impromptu. Mr. L. M. Seay, a yard employee, had his leg crushed in the accident, but no one else was hurt. The boat was not damaged.

Spanish Gold Found.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 13.—The British schooner Union, which arrived here on Monday, brought twenty-two pounds of Spanish gold in coin and bars, found in Central American waters near Cayman Brac by Captain Magnus Barton and associates. The coins bear the date of 1753. They are valued at between $6,000 and $7,000.

Three Convicts Caught.

ODESSA, Nov. 13.—The Mandelevitch buildings, one of the finest blocks in Odessa, which included a fashionable arcade of shops, have been destroyed by fire. Ten persons perished, and thirty-five others were injured. The damage is estimated at 1,000,000 rubles.

West Point Condemned by Visiting Board.

UNSANITARY AND UNCOMFORTABLE.

Cadet Barracks Said to Be Little Better Than Those of Average County Poorhouse—Praise For Colonel Mills.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The most important feature of the report of the board of visitors to the West Point Military academy is a recommendation that the academy be rebuilt. The report says:

"It has been nearly a hundred years since West Point was founded, and from the birth of the institution nearly all the improvements have been on the patchwork plan. There is but one building constructed by the government at the post that is in harmony with this day and generation. All the others are old, uncomfortable and entirely inadequate to meet present conditions. Few of them are equipped with any of the conveniences now to be found in the average public school building in the country districts of many of the states. It can be truthfully said that there is a pressing necessity for a complete tearing down and a new building up. The policy pursued in this regard at Annapolis should be speedily adopted at West Point. Nothing can be gained by postponement. Indeed it seems to the board that almost every dollar spent in the future for 'enlarging here and altering and patching there' is so much money thrown away. The enlarged duties and responsibilities of the military as related to the recently enlarged sphere of American influence and power are such as not only to justify but force congress to proper recognition of the demands of the Military academy.

"Putting the matter in a few words, it can be truthfully said that the barracks in which the cadets sleep and study and live when not in recitation room or on the drill ground are little better equipped than the barracks at the average county poorhouse. In many of the rooms three cadets are crowded. The ventilation of these rooms is in accordance with hygienic notions of a century ago and is simply execrable."

COLONEL MILLS.

Features of the present arrangement which are specially condemned are the electric light and gas plants, no water or sanitary arrangements in the barracks and no bathrooms, the lack of church facilities and the hotel, which is described as "a mere hut." The water supply also is threatened, and a water famine is imminent nearly every summer.

The report says the board is satisfied that hazing has been eradicated. Full credit is given Colonel Mills for this. The report also says that the sturdy support given Colonel Mills by the secretary of war has done much to establish and secure discipline upon a sound basis.

The board recommends that the pay of the cadets, which is now $540 a year each, be increased $69 a year to be equal to that of naval cadets.

Closer Relations With Canada.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—An important interview with President Roosevelt was held at Washington today by representatives of the Boston chamber of commerce and business men from various sections of the country in behalf of more intimate trade relations with Canada. The movement for reciprocal relations with Canada begun by the chamber of commerce has resulted in definite plans whereby the representatives shall give the executive their views on the merits of the question.

Bank Officers Fatally Hurt.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 13.—A quantity of nitroglycerin which had been left by burglars in a partially wrecked safe in the Trenton bank at Trenton, Ky., exploded in the morning while the officers of the bank were making an examination of the premises. Flying pieces of steel struck W. H. Dickerson, president of the bank, and Thomas Hewlett, a merchant, and both men were mortally injured.

Our Shoes Wanted.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The Argentine Republic desires to place a contract for an annual supply of 60,000 pairs of shoes in the United States. This is not only a tribute to the superiority of United States manufactures, but is also an example of Argentina's wish to cultivate and extend her business relations with this country.

RATHBUN CONFESSED

Mystery of the Body at Jeffersonville, Ind., Explained.

THE PRISONER TELLS OF THE PLOT.

Says Victim's Name Is Goodman—Had Planned to Keep Him Drunk Several Days and Then Fix Him.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 13.—Newell C. Rathbun, who, according to the police, has confessed that he planned to defraud an insurance company out of $4,000 by pretending that a corpse shipped to Little Rock, Ark., was his own dead body, has admitted, according to the authorities, that the man who accompanied him to the hotel in Jeffersonville, Ind., and was found dead the next day was Charles Goodman, who is said to have come from Evansville, Ind.

Chief of Detectives Sullivan and Chief Applegate and Coroner Coots of Jeffersonville interviewed Rathbun yesterday. Rathbun listened as one by one the circumstances which the police regard as proof of his guilt were laid before him by Chief Sullivan. According to the officers, Rathbun suddenly sprang up and, walking hastily to a window, looked out for a few minutes. Then, turning like an animal at bay, he faced the crowd of men in the room and asked in a shaking voice:

"What is the punishment for offenses of this kind in Indiana? Does the death penalty exist there?"

"Never mind about the penalty, Rathbun," said Captain Sullivan. "What we are interested in is the name of the dead man."

For a moment Rathbun looked at the group of faces before him and then said:

"You are on the right track. Goodman is the name of the dead man. I met him in front of the Salvation Army hotel and determined to keep him drunk for several days and then fix him."

When questioned further, Rathbun denied having given Goodman laudanum and said he would have made use of chloroform. He then refused to go back to Indiana without requisition papers.

Colonel John D. Rodman, United States recruiting officer here, notified Chief Sullivan that no requisition will be necessary for the return of Rathbun to Jeffersonville. He says that Rathbun is now a government prisoner, charged with desertion, and as soon as he can communicate with Washington he will have the prisoner taken over.

The Jeffersonville authorities will make claim for the custody of Rathbun on a charge of murder.

Just before he was taken back to jail Rathbun made the following statement to Chief of Detectives Sullivan:

"I admit everything except that I killed Goodman. I meant to kill him and kept him drunk for the purpose, but he died of alcoholism, and I was not forced to make away with him."

Must Testify Before Coroner.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 13.—The authorities here announce that they will have the supposed Newell C. Rathbun, now at Louisville, Ky., brought here to testify in the inquest over the corpse sent here as the body of Rathbun, whose life was insured for $4,000; also all other parties whose testimony may be important in clearing up the mystery.

Cuban Postal Matters.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Postal conditions in Cuba and needed reforms in bonding postoffice officials and employees generally are discussed in addition to routine matters in the annual report of J. L. Bristow, fourth assistant postmaster general. The report gives the following comparative statement of receipts and expenditures of Cuba: Revenues—1900, $246,912; 1901, $367,634; increase, $120,722, or 48.89 per cent. Expenditures—1900, $598,497; 1901, $451,437; decrease, $147,059, or 24.57 per cent. Deficit—1900, $352,585; 1901, $83,803. The expenses of the Havana office have been reduced from $130,260 per annum to less than $100,000 despite great improvements effected.

Lost In the Adirondacks.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Miss Margaret McConnell, aged twenty-six years, of this city, a trained nurse, who went to McKeever, in the Adirondacks, for her health two months ago, is lost in the great woods, and there are no hopes of finding her alive. Monday morning she went into the woods for a walk. Not returning, a party was formed, and a hundred men have been searching for her day and night. They have returned, having found no trace of her. Bloodhounds have been sent for from Elmira to aid in the search.

Anarchist Meeting Prohibited.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—An anarchist meeting to "commemorate the legal murder of the Chicago anarchists," which had been called for last night, was prohibited by the police, who were stationed at the various entrances to the hall in Clerkenwell, London, and sent away hundreds that came to attend the proceedings. Prince Krapotkine, Malatesta and Louise Michel were among the promoters.

Firemen Injured by Gas Explosion.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—Five firemen were injured by an explosion of gas in a junction conduit of the Edison Heat, Light and Power company at Ninth and Sansom streets, in the business section of the city. The gas and sewer gas which had escaped into the conduit backed into the junction box and, it is believed, came in contact with crossed wires.

MERRIAM RETIRES.

Commander of Department of Colorado Reaches the Age Limit.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Brigadier General Henry C. Merriam was placed on the retired list today on account of age. His present command, the department of Colorado, will be assumed temporarily by Brigadier General J. C. Bates, commanding the department of the Missouri. It is expected that Major General Arthur MacArthur about the 1st of January will be assigned to command the department of the Colorado. He has expressed a preference for that assignment, and the orders will be issued when he is relieved from his present duties in this city as a member of the board of brevets.

Next to General Wade General Merriam is the ranking brigadier general in the army. He served throughout the war of the Rebellion in the volunteers, having entered the service as captain of the Twentieth Maine infantry in 1862. He was a major general of volunteers during the Spanish war. His most conspicuous service in later years was in command of the troops during the Cœur d'Alene labor riots. This afterward was investigated by a committee of congress, and General Merriam's course was approved in the report.

Mormon Elders Must Go.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 13.—A committee of leading citizens of Higgins Ferry, Saluda county, last Friday visited two Mormon elders who have been preaching thereabout and warned them to leave within a limited time. Four of their converts were told that the community would hold them personally responsible for the presence of the elders there in the future and that summary proceedings would be taken if these notices were disregarded. Citizens of adjoining townships make common cause with the anti-Mormon agitators and promise in the county papers to assist in any measures necessary to expel the elders or worse.

Resolutions were passed by both branches authorizing the appropriation of $3,000 for a suitable gift to the new battleship Rhode Island. The session closed at noon out of respect to the memory of Senator Grinnell of Exeter, who was accidentally killed recently, and resolutions of sorrow were adopted.

American Coal and Iron a Menace.

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—The Vossische Zeitung publishes a letter from Essen asserting that the Rhine and Westphalian coal and iron producers now manifest a growing concern at the efforts of the United States to extend exports of coal and iron products to the continent. A prominent manufacturer is described as "expressing a belief that the United States in ten or fifteen years will supply all Mediterranean countries, including Austria, with coal and iron."

LETTER BY CAPTAIN KIDD.

Notorious Pirate Tells of Hidden Treasure In Boston Harbor.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 13.—A letter from Captain Kidd, the notorious pirate chief, to John Bailey, Esq., of New York, which is believed to be genuine has been deposited for safe keeping with other papers in the office of the record commissioners of this city.

The letter is 200 years old and is the property of Edward Field, a clerk of the municipal court of Providence, a descendant of the Warner family, which was among the first to settle in what is now the town of Warwick. It was found among family papers.

Apparently the communication was written after the capture of Captain Kidd. It is dated Boston, 1700-01, and it says in part:

"I fear we are in a bad situation. We are taken for pirates, and you must come to Boston as soon as you get this. There is no one I can depend upon. If I do not see you, I will tell you where my money is.

"It is * * * buried on * * * island in Boston harbor on the * * * island in two chests, containing from £15,000 to £20,000 in money, jewels and diamonds.

"They are buried about four feet deep, with a flat stone on them and a pile of stones near by. There is no one that knows where it is but me now living.

"It is about * * * up the hillside. Don't fail to come to me as soon as you get this. If I am gone to England, be there as soon as possible. Secure the money and diamonds before you come, as money will do a great deal for us."

FIRE BURNED ALL DAY.

Loss Estimated at $250,000 to Boston Varnish Store.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—A little under a quarter of a million was the loss by an all day fire which started in the seven story granite building at the corner of Broad and Franklin streets, occupied by the Murphy Varnish company. A steady rain last night helped out the fire department amazingly. The fire proved unusually stubborn because of the nature of the stock on fire. Varnish tanks exploded during the morning, and blazing fluid ran in all directions on the surface of the water. About 25,000 gallons of varnish was burned.

The fire broke out at 1:30 and for an hour was exceedingly fierce in aspect, and then it died down. The firemen thought they had it under control. Then small explosions, probably of varnish barrels, began, and later two immense tanks went up. In consequence the walls of the building will be razed for safety.

The Murphy Varnish company was the chief sufferer, the other tenants being Brooks, Bonnelle & Co., paper dealers and boxmakers; Hasting-Dixon Press, McIndoe Bros., engravers, and A. E. Martin & Co., printers.

Charitable Institutions Must Pay.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The court of appeals in a decision just rendered holds that all charitable institutions must pay the state inheritance tax on bequests made by will. The decision was rendered in reference to a bequest of $20,000 made by the late C. P. Huntington of New York city to the Roosevelt hospital, the Children's Aid society, the New York Society For the Relief of the Ruptured and Crippled and the American Female Guardian Society and Home For the Friendless of New York City. The first two named institutions claimed that their bequests were exempt from paying the tax under special provisions of their old charters. The court holds that the inheritance tax act supersedes all laws heretofore enacted and that bequests to these institutions are taxable.

A Four Million Mortgage.

TROY, N. Y., Nov. 13.—There has been recorded in the county clerk's office a consolidated mortgage by the Hudson Valley Railway company on all its property. The mortgage is to the Merchants' Trust company of New York and is in the sum of $4,000,000. The mortgage covers all the property of the Stillwater and Mechanicville Street railway, the Greenwich and Schuylerville Electric railway, the Saratoga Traction company, the Glens Falls, Sandy Hill and Fort Edward Street Railway company, Warren County railway and the Saratoga Northern railway.

STORMS IN BRITAIN.

Flood and Wind Devastate Island Kingdom.

MANY FATALITIES ALREADY REPORTED

Sunderland Lighthouse Destroyed. Gale In English Channel Severest In Years—Kingstown Harbor Strewn With Wreckage.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A tremendous storm, with torrents of rain, is sweeping the north of Britain and Ireland. There have been serious floods in Yorkshire. Several of the suburbs of Dublin are flooded, and elsewhere in Ireland great damage has been done by floods. Several fatal accidents have occurred, and railway communication is delayed.

In some parts of the country the rain has continued for thirty-six hours. In the Manchester district, although there has been considerable damage, the floods have been rather welcomed than otherwise, as the mills had long suffered from the unusual drought.

The gale is still raging along the coast. Reports continually arrive of shipping casualties, especially on the Northumberland coast, where the storm is extremely violent.

Three vessels were driven ashore last night at the entrance to the Tyne. Four small vessels have been wrecked in the vicinity of Sunderland, and another has been wrecked off Hartlepool. Altogether nine persons were drowned in these disasters. The lighthouse on the Sunderland pier has been washed away.

The gale in the Irish channel is the severest known for many years. Five vessels have been wrecked in Kingstown harbor, which is strewn with wreckage.

The mailboat Nord, which started from Dover for Calais at half past 11 last night, ran down the lightship of the works of the new Dover pier. The crew of the lightship were drowned. It is reported in Dover that sixteen persons went down with the lightship. The Nord has gone ashore at the foreland, but her passengers are said to be safe.

Divorce For Royal Pair.

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—There appears to be foundation for the renewed reports that a divorce of the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Hesse is impending. Incompatibility of temper long existing appears to have reached the point where a separation is inevitable. They are both grandchildren of the late Queen Victoria, who, with the czar and an extraordinary assemblage of other sovereigns, was present at the wedding, which took place at Coburg April 19, 1894. The grand duchess is regarded as one of the most beautiful princesses of Europe. She and the grand duke were estranged during the first year of their marriage.

Dady Makes an Offer.

HAVANA, Nov. 13.—Michael J. Dady in a letter to the municipal council of Havana says he figured upon the question of accepting bonds in pay for the sewer contract and estimated that there would be a discount of 5 per cent in negotiating them. This sum he added to his bid, recently submitted, and he now offers to deduct $572,038 from his original bid, $11,485,896.06, inasmuch as the municipal council is considering the expediency of letting the contract without making any provision for bonds. He also offers to employ Cuban workmen only.

Schooner Lost; Crew Saved.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Nov. 13.—The schooner Douglass Haynes of Bath, Me., Captain Blaisdell, from Port Johnson for Hallowell, Me., with a cargo of 258 tons of coal, is sunk between Shovelful and Pollock Rip shoals with her three masts projecting out of water. Captain Blaisdell and his crew of four men were rescued by the schooner Luther T. Garretson and landed here yesterday afternoon after having suffered terribly from exposure.

Delegates Sightseeing.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 13.—Yesterday morning the delegates to the pan-American congress visited the mint and were shown through it by Finance Minister Limantour. A banquet was served in the corridors. In the afternoon the members of the American Institute of Mining Engineers were received by President Diaz at Chapultepec. Embassador Clayton made the presentations.

Fire In Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 13.—A fire that started in the shoe store of N. O. Stone & Co., 46 and 48 Euclid avenue, late yesterday afternoon caused a loss of $75,000 to that firm, of which $50,000 is on stock and $25,000 on the building; insurance about 80 per cent of that sum. The jewelry firm of Arnstein Bros. & Mier, on the second floor of the Stone block, lost $40,000; insurance not stated.

Lady Carew Dead.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Lady Catherine Jane Carew, grandmother of the present Baron Carew, died yesterday at Woodstown, Waterford, aged 104. She was a guest at the famous Brussels ball on the eve of the battle of Waterloo and was a noted beauty at the court of Louis Philippe.

A Gift to Pennsylvania University.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13. — Dr. George Woodward of this city yesterday sent a check for $20,000 to the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania to be used for the establishing of the Woodward fellowship in physiological chemistry.

Delays in The Returns.

While it is not likely that such will be the case, there are four election officers in this city who are liable to lose all the pay that would naturally come to them for their services on Election Day in addition to being amenable to a fine of $100. For some reason, which they will probably explain to the County Board of Elections today, the election officers in the Second district of the Fourth ward did not send in the returns for the vote on municipal candidates to the county clerk's office last week. For that reason, the count board was unable to complete the count for the city officials at its meeting yesterday.

This mistake is probably the outgrowth of the new election law which combines the State and municipal elections in all cities. The law provides that the returns from both elections shall go to the county clerk's office within two days after election. This year the Union County Board of Elections has had its troubles in trying to get complete returns from all the county. Eight precincts through the county failed to make any return for coroner. That delayed the count on the county candidates. Now there are districts missing in both Elizabeth and Plainfield on the local candidates.

It is not likely that the county board will resort to severe measures this time. The occasion will be used to direct the attention of the election officers to the penalty which the law provides and which might be enforced. It only goes to show that there is an ever pressing need of proper voting machines in this county. Of course, any quantity of machines cannot prevent the election officers from making mistakes and failing to send in proper returns. Under the present system, however, it is not surprising that many mistakes are made after the men sit up half the night working over the tally sheets as the ballots are being counted. The machines would facilitate the count and tend to diminish the chances of error in making out the returns afterwards.

Franklin Murphy's announcement that he intends to take up quarters at Trenton and rent an executive mansion will undoubtedly be received with much favor throughout the State. It has long been the complaint that the State officials were to be found at the State capital but seldom. If the Governor decides to take up his residence there during the winter months he will be within easy reach of any who may go to Trenton to see him.

The chapels of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church have a very pleasant habit of exchanging courtesies at intervals. Tonight the congregation of Warren chapel will give a reception in honor of the new pastor of Hope chapel and do its share toward making his arrival in Plainfield as enjoyable as possible.

There are few fraternal orders with branches in this city which can show any better record for the past decade than Queen City Lodge of Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Queen City Lodge has just celebrated its tenth birthday. During those ten years the lodge has become one of the strongest in the State.

It was quite an honor that Plainfield should be selected as the meeting place for the Northern New Jersey Conference of Congregational churches. Although the local Congregational church is not a large one, there was plenty of hospitality for the visitors who were well treated and said so.

The trolley is generally blamed for an accident which may occur along its line, but when a horse runs away and insists in coming down the left hand side of the road in the dark, no one can expect the trolley car to stop and cross over to get out of the way. This time the company is blameless.

The third season of the Daily Press Bowling League will soon open with that organization on a sound basis and every prospect of good honest amateur sport.

The object of installing water meters in Plainfield is to allow the patrons to pay according to the amount of water they use, the only really fair way.

CONTESTING WILL.

Conclusion of Taking Testimony in the Moore Will Case Yesterday.

The third day of taking testimony before George T. Parrott, referee on appeal to the Orphans' Court from an order admitting to probate the last will and testament of the late George W. Moore, was finished yesterday, the appellants closing their case. Twelve witnesses in all were sworn in the part of the appellant. The hearing was then adjourned until next Tuesday when the appellant will offer witnesses in rebuttal.

The appellant is seeking to prove that Moore's mind was unsound when the will was made. All the testimony offered so far was given for that purpose. Counsellor W. S. Angleman is appearing for the appellant. Mrs Moore, while Counsellor George Ball is looking after the interests of the executors, John S Gibson and James Atwood, and the other heirs interested.

M'GEARY TRANSFERRED.

Assistant at St. Mary's Church Has Been Sent to Parish in Jersey City.

Rt. Rev. John O'Connor, bishop of the diocese of Newark, has notified Rev. Father Smyth, rector of St. Mary's church, of the transfer of his assistant, Rev. John A. McGeary, to St. Patrick's parish, Jersey City. The announcement will be a great surprise to the parishioners of St. Mary's, where Rev. Father McGeary has labored for a year and a half.

No appointment has been made by the Bishop to fill the vacancy caused by the transfer of Father Smyth's assistant. In his new field Rev. Father McGeary will be second assistant to the rector of St. Patrick's. He was graduated from Seton Hall, where he also received his orders to the priesthood. This was his first work since his ordination.

A Physician Testifies.

"I have taken Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and have never used anything in my life that did me the good that did," says County Physician Geo. W. Scroggs of Hall county, Ga. "Being a physician I have prescribed it and found it to give the best results." If the food you eat remains undigested in your stomach it decays there and poisons the system. You can prevent this by dieting, but that means starvation. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. You need suffer from neither dyspepsia nor starvation. The worst cases quickly cured. Never fails. L. W. Randolph.

EVERYTHING WAS OF JAPAN.

SUCCESSFUL SALE OF ADVANCE CIRCLE OF KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Held in Parlors of Park Avenue Hotel Yesterday Afternoon and Evening —Those in Command.

Despite the decidedly disagreeable weather and numerous counter attractions, the Japanese tea and sale given by the Advance Circle of King's Daughters in the parlors of the Park Avenue Hotel yesterday afternoon and evening received a goodly share of patronage. An excellent assortment of imported novelties from the Mikado's domain was displayed on the prettily decorated booths and many sales were made. In addition a neat revenue was derived from the tea room, where the delicious beverage was served in true Oriental style.

The parlors were decorated in a tasteful manner, chrysanthemums and other flowers being placed about in profusion while artistic creations in red adorned the lights. Each booth was also replendent in Japanese dress. There were two of the latter in charge of the following members of the circle: Fancy booth, Mrs. D N. Groendyke, Mrs. E. A. Ransom and Miss Sarah Boss; candy booth, Mrs. L M. Hummer and Mrs. Herbert Langford.

The tea room was in charge of Mrs. L. A. Hummer and Mrs. W. W. Rowley. They were assisted in pouring by four young women attired in fetching Japanese costumes. They were Miss Katheryn Glen, Miss Anna Clark, Miss Anna Littell and Miss Brokaw.

During the evening hours violin selections were rendered by Martin A. Korff. There were also a number of informal piano selections rendered by members of the circle.

The entire affair was in charge of Mrs. H. A. Pope and Miss Ella Blish.

SENT NO RETURNS.

So County Election Board Could Not Figure Up Results in Cities.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 13—Owing to the fact that the Second district of the Fourth ward of Plainfield and two districts in this city had failed to make returns of the vote for local candidates, the Union county Board of Elections was unable to complete the vote for Plainfield and Elizabeth yesterday. Constable Weaver was sent out yesterday afternoon to notify the election officers in those districts of their neglect of duty. The officers in the Second district of the Fourth ward of Plainfield are Kane, Muir, Shannon and Gray.

According to law, the election officers have two days in which to file their returns with the county clerk. Failure to do so forfeits their pay and makes them liable to a fine of $100.

WHERE BALANCE IS.

New Providence Township Gave Small Majority for Republicans This Time.

The gubernatorial vote in New Providence township, as published in these columns Wednesday, November 6, was incorrect so far as the Democratic count is concerned. Seymour actually received thirty votes instead of thirty-five, and this changes the result materially, since Murphy received thirty-two votes. In the last election the Democrats won by two votes, and now the Republicans can lay claim to being in the majority by two votes. H. S. Fullerton, the township clerk, has kindly furnished the corrected vote.

Would Give No Account.

Harvey Anthony, of Phillipsburg, was found in an intoxicated condition in the Netherwood station, yesterday afternoon, by Patrolman McCarthy. He refused to give the officer an account of himself and was placed under arrest. In the City Court this morning he pleaded guilty to being drunk but, as there was no disorder in the case, sentence was suspended.

It Was a Clear Case.

"Your honor," said the attorney for the defense, "briefly stated, these are the facts: My client has just been married, and the practical joker put labels on his trunks informing the world of that fact and further announcing: 'We are so happy,' 'She's my tootsey' and various things like that. His umbrella was filled with rice that would spill when it was opened, and the bride was given an old shoe, carefully wrapped up, with instructions to open it on the train."

"Are these facts disputed?" asked the judge.

"No, your honor," answered the attorney for the state.

"Then I see no reason for taking up the time of the jury with the case," asserted the judge. "Let a verdict of justifiable homicide be entered."—Chicago Post.

Photography by Phosphorescence.

An ingenious method of making photographic copies of plates and engravings in books which cannot be removed from the libraries, and where the use of the camera is prohibited, has been devised by Mr. F. Jervis-Smith, an Englishman. He coats a cardboard with a phosphorescent substance, exposes it to sunlight or electric arc light and then places it at the back of an engraving, while a dry photographic plate is placed on the face of the engraving. The book is closed, and after a period varying from 18 to 60 minutes, depending largely on the thickness of the paper, a satisfactory negative is produced. The book is inclosed in a black cloth during the manipulation. —Science.

The Lantern Fly.

Among the curious insects of the Malay peninsula recently studied by Mr. Nelson Annandale, of the London Zoological society, is one called the lantern-fly, which is remarkable for its sudden leaps, made without the aid of its wings. It was only after he had carried a specimen back to London and carefully examined it that Mr. Annandale discovered that a curious projection on the front of its head, a kind of nose with a crease in it, was the leaping organ. When bent back under the abdomen and suddenly released it sent the insect flying.—Nature.

Births and Deaths in New York.

The excess of births over deaths in New York, is, on an average, about 5,000 a year, and if there were not constant immigration into New York from foreign countries and from other divisions of the United States, the growth of the city would be 50,000 in ten years, or less than 1½ per cent. in a decade. Actually, the increase in population is at the rate of 38 per cent. The territory of New York, which had 2,493,000 population in 1890, had 3,437,000 in 1900.—N. Y. Sun.

A Church Lottery.

A citizen of Wilkinsburg, Pa., owns an old lottery ticket which reads as follows: "No. 257. Presbyterian church lottery. Authorized by law. This ticket will entitle the possessor to such prize as shall be drawn to its number, if demanded within 12 months after the drawing; subject to 20 per cent. deduction. M. Wilkins, president of the board of managers, Pittsburgh, June 3, 1807."—N. Y. Sun.

So Sweet of Her.

Mrs. Chatterleigh—Fancy, dear, at the Browns' last night, they were all saying how glad they were to hear you were at last engaged! Of course, I didn't believe the report, dear, and said I wondered anyone could be so stupid as to imagine anything so absurd!—Punch.

A Bait.

"Who was Jonah?" asked the Sunday school teacher.

"I know," said Johnny, and before she could find out whether anyone else knew or not, he bawled out:

"Jonah wuz a bait."—Ohio State Journal.

"Did your new alarm clock get you out on time in the morning?" asked the salesman.

CAMBON ON AMERICA.

Every Workingman, Says the French Ambassador, Hopes to Be an Andrew Carnegie.

The Echo de Paris prints a long interview with the French ambassador to the United States, M. Jules Cambon.

He says on the subject of the steel strike that the workingman in America is not hostile to the moneyed aristocracy, as he believes that with intelligence and good luck he may also become a Carnegie. So, instead of being jealous, he says that Carnegie played his game fairly.

"Europeans have no idea how hard Americans, both rich and poor, work," continued Cambon. "The French people are not aware how many French there are in America, especially the descendants of Frenchmen. A large part of the United States was settled by the French, and if their descendants have not preserved their language they still love France.

"The Americans speak English, but they are not English. Their whole effort has been to weld into a single metal the French, English and Germans who compose the nation.

"The French language is popular. If the educated young women of France who are vainly seeking employment in schools would go to America they could easily gain a good living there as teachers.

"The Americans, perhaps, are inclined to reproach the French with remembering too well what they did for America. Still, the cultured classes know what America owes to France."

Describing the country, M. Cambon said: "When one returns to Europe after living with the Americans everything here looks small. America is so colossal and so young that she has many other surprises in store for Europe."

ALBERT B. CUMMINS.

Brief Sketch of the Career of the Republican Candidate for Governor of the Hawkeye State.

Albert B. Cummins, the republican candidate for governor of Iowa, is a leading lawyer of Des Moines. He was born February 15, 1850, near Carmichael, Pa., the son of Thomas L. and Sarah B. (Fennekien) Cummins.

Mr. Cummins passed through the public schools of his native town and later entered college at Waynesburg, Pa. He became a resident of Iowa in 1869, when he was 19. In 1871 he removed to Fort Wayne, Ind., where, after a brief term as assistant surveyor of Allen county, he became division engineer and then assistant chief engineer in the service of the Cincinnati, Richmond & Fort Wayne road.

Having decided to study law, he removed to Chicago in 1872 and became a student in the office of the old firm of McClellan & Hedges. In 1878 he settled in Des Moines, where he has since resided.

He was not prominent in politics until 1887, when he was selected on account of personal popularity to lead the anti-prohibition fight in Polk county. He did so, defeating the republican candidate for the legislature in a close finish. He maintained his opposition to the party on the prohibition issue as late as 1891.

Pipes Not Used in Cuba.

Cuba produces no tobacco for chewing or for pipe-smoking. The Cubans who smoke pipes might be counted on one's fingers without making a second round on the fingers. The cigar and the cigarette prevail. To what extent the Cuban cigarette might ever become popular with American smokers is a matter beyond determination. It is certain that most Americans of prolonged residence become, if they be smokers, addicted to Cuban brands, and find difficulty in weaning themselves back to American brands on their return.

"I was a bunch of nerves, and any little excitement would throw me into spasms and hysteria. I suffered terribly with periodical headaches. My monthly periods were painful beyond description. I had pain and torture of all kinds. I had nightmares and suffocating feelings besides other nerve derangements. My husband, who had been benefited by Ripans Tabules, advised me to try them, which I did. They are a safe and reliable cure for all these troubles. When I began taking them I weighed 118 pounds, but now I weigh 135½ pounds. Long life to Ripans Tabules. I am entirely cured, but I have them at hand all the time."

WANTED—A case of bad health that R·I·P·A·N·S Tabules cannot benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word R·I·P·A·N·S on the package and accept no substitute. DIFFERENT COAT STYLES.

Every Woman Can Suit the Lines of Her Figure.

In coats we have our choice between the short Eton, the blouse or the Louis XV. style. For a thin woman the blouse, pouching slightly both back and front, is very youthful and becoming. The stout woman looks well in a bolero cut with long, pointed effect in front and a somewhat shorter back. Only the very tall and well formed woman should attempt the Louis XV. coat.

Stock collars increase in elaborateness. Many of them, however, are made quite plain in order that they may be used with the fancy lace and silk ties now so much the vogue. The lace barb tie is used for four-in-hands, and the wider lace scarfs are tied in two short loops, with the ends reaching down as far as they will go.

For everyday wear plain stocks made out of moire or velvet ribbon are useful to wear with the little turn down points of embroidery and lace.

Wide collars of arabian and venetian lace are very stylish as well as useful additions to one's wardrobe. They may be used with a variety of waists from flannel to chiffon.

The smart tailor made is of gray rough goods. The jacket is trimmed with double pointed lapels of white broadcloth, and there is a vest of the same. The sleeves are also ornamented with narrow turn up cuffs and long undersleeves of the white. The skirt is ornamented with bands of strapping which reach down to the bottom of the skirt in front, but gradually rise in the back.

The hat is a French novelty in beaver trimmed with a high rosette of white liberty silk and a silver buckle.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

STYLES IN HAIRDRESSING.

The Low Coil Is Not Universally Becoming.

The most fashionable way of dressing the hair consists in a succession of low coils terminating at the base of the collar. This style, however, is becoming only to few women. Short girls especially make a mistake by wearing their hair low. A medium style has recently been evolved which looks very pretty for evening wear. The hair is drawn up half way between the top and the base of the head and it is there coiled into a loose mass known as the Graham puff. From there down two curls are allowed to hang over the left shoulder and a jeweled clasp or bow of velvet ribbon holds them in place.

The single jeweled rose tucked behind the left ear is a very dainty ornament for a young girl. The latest rose, by the way, is of Japanese origin. It is made of the soft velvetlike leaves of a certain plant which never dies. The petals made of this are delicately tinted, and they are so true to nature that they defy the closest scrutiny.

Soft bows and rosettes of tulle take, to a large extent, the place of aigrets. The latter are too hard and trying to the average face.

The dainty hat in the cut is made of tucked black liberty silk, with a wide band of black velvet around the crown. It is further trimmed with two long ostrich plumes united in front by a long narrow buckle.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Her Triumph.

"Have you had any stage experience?" asked the theatrical manager.

"Well," said the fair applicant, blushing modestly. "I do not like to speak of my triumphs, but I was the leading lady in a Sunday school cantata once, and my friends said I acted beautifully."—Boston Post.

Stories of Spain Are Features at Playhouses

IN THIS age, when every small town possesses at least one globe-girdler, when it would seem every corner of the earth had been written up, every curious fact laid bare, Spain is still to us a land of romance, of mystery. When we build fond hopes we still speak of them as castles in Spain, though we know that to-day castles in Spain are crumbling fast. And though in the late misunderstanding between the United States and that land of brave knights the latter lost some prestige, story-tellers this season are finding listeners that have their old faith in the dash of the Spanish swashbuckler, the reality of his courage, the charm of his love-making.

"A Royal Rival" and "Don Caesar's Return," two new plays, are based on the old Spanish story of Don Caesar. The musical comedy, "The Toreador," which has been delighting London audiences since its first appearance in leafy June, also has a Spanish setting. "A Royal Rival" and "Don Caesar's Return" both appeared on Broadway, New York, the same week, the first with Mr. William Faversham as Don Caesar, the second with our friend, Mr. James K. Hackett, in the leading role.

"A Royal Rival" is full of intrigue and jealousy and sword play and ardent love-making, and has the picturesque only ladies of noble rank are eligible for positions such as she desires in the royal household. Don Jose wrinkles his brow and plots. Influence Marita to wed Don Caesar by appealing to her ambition. Bribe Don Caesar to wed a veiled lady and ask no questions by the promise that Don Jose will see to it that he is shot like a gentleman. Soon Don Caesar de Bazan will meet his death, the widowed Countess de Bazan will become a member of the court circle, the king will be enthralled, and Don Jose able to devote himself to the queen. All very harrowing, and Spanish, and improper. But the tale has the moral, the good are rewarded, the wicked discomfited.

The grateful apprentice lad removes the bullets from the death-dealing muskets, and Don Caesar lives to make the tale. Marita does not become a widow, and Don Caesar finds himself with life and a wife on his hands. By chance he sees a most beautiful lady driving by in a carriage, and hears her spoken of as the Countess de Bazan. As a faithful spouse should, he decides to seek her society. He goes to look for her at the palace of the Marquis de Montefiore, where she is staying with other guests. His coming thickens the plot. The king is also at the Montefiore palace, masquerading as Don Caesar, that he may win the favor of

MARIE STUDHOLME.
Appearing as "Dora Selby" in "The Toreador," the New Musical Company at the London Gaiety.

Spanish scenery for background; so altogether we feel when watching it we have not for our environment the alert American city, but are in the land of the hidalgo, the palm, fair women and good wines. We should not wonder if Paderewski, that old idol of the matinee girl, would find when he comes again to our shores that a certain valiant Don Caesar—or rather two valiant Don Caesars—have supplanted him. Fair hands tear their gloves to shreds in applause of Don Caesar's acted heroism, hearts beat tempestuously when he performs some feat unusually dare-devilish, rosy lips praise him unstintedly.

And why? Because it is the fashion to admire the swashbuckling hero, the gentleman with the sword and the shapely limbs displayed. The carpet-knight is not in it at present, he is locked up with other lately-modern properties. But some day he will have his turn again, and the romantic hero will be doomed to the seclusion of the trunk.

There is plenty of swing to "A Royal Rival," and a king, a queen, a gypsy girl, a villain, a hero condemned to die. This is the tale as it can be told in a few words: Don Caesar de Bazan is a gentleman that is rather quick to take offense, as is proven by the fact that he fought a duel in Holy Week. I suppose if he had killed a man a week for the other 51 he might have been forgiven; but killing a man in Holy Week was considered a most heinous crime, and he was condemned to death. And what was cruelest blow to his proud spirit, he was not to be shot like a gentleman and a soldier, but was to be hung like a common felon. He! Don Caesar de Bazan!

To us, brought up in an atmosphere more or less Puritanic, it would seem Don Caesar better be concerned with his soul's future than with the manner of his taking off. But not so. Don Caesar's habitat is Spain, and he must die as befits his noble rank. Of course our hero does not die, ignominiously or otherwise. Don Jose, the king's foxy minister, and an apprentice lad for whose sake Don Caesar had been drawn into that duel, bring about quite another issue.

Don Jose is in love with the queen, and wishes to distract the king's attention by placing before his eyes an attractive young girl, a gypsy, Marita by name. Marita is ambitious and would like to enter the queen's service, but Marita. The real Don Caesar meets Don Jose, and asks to have his lawful property returned to him.

Don Jose is taken aback for a moment by the appearance of the man he thought safely dead, but soon rises to the occasion. He palms off as the bride the Marchioness de Montefiore, a lady not remarkable for her good looks. Don Caesar loses his enthusiasm, and is about to depart solitary. Propitiously at this moment Marita enters the room and some one addresses her as the Countess de Bazan. Then a pistol is flourished in Don Jose's face, and a good, lively Spanish time ensues.

In the last act the right husband gets the right wife. Marita is rescued from the king by Don Caesar, who reminds the royal personage he has a royal consort he should look after by disclosing to him the disloyal plans of foxy Don Jose. And the curtain goes down on happy, respected, reunited pairs.

The Spanish offering, "The Toreador," is not so tragic, is much more amusing than "A Royal Rival." The tunes are catchy, the Spanish setting beautiful, but fun is the dominant feature. An English footman, out of a job, seeks employment and adventure in Spain. To enter Spain he needs a pass. One comes into his possession and he is admitted into the country. He finds, much to his horror, that he has gained entrance on the supposition that he is the famous bull-fighter Carajola, and that he is under engagement to meet and lay low some vicious bulls in the near future. He tries to appear bold, to act up to an English conception of a Spanish toreador, but lives in mortal terror for fear he will show how scared he is. His efforts are very amusing.

Marie Studholme, who plays the part of heroine in "The Toreador," is a young woman of unusual beauty.

QUEER INSECT MENU.

Ants, Grasshoppers and Worms That Are Good to Eat.

French Naturalist Thinks They Would Be Considered Dainties If We Could Only Overcome the Prejudice of Ages.

M. Daguin, a distinguished French naturalist, calls attention to the fact that insects are among the most wholesome and harmless of creatures to eat, because they live almost exclusively on vegetable food. He condemns crustaceans, headed by the lobster, because they live upon dead things.

M. Daguin is so impressed by the value of good insects as food, says the Chicago American, that he has compiled a book on the subject, telling about the ancient and modern races who have fattened themselves on these humble creatures.

A great many savage races to-day regard insects as a great delicacy, and quite a number of individuals in Europe have taken the same view. Dr. Gastier, a distinguished deputy, delighted to eat May bugs, which he skinned like shrimps. When spring came one could not make him a more welcome present than a box of live May bugs. It seems that from time immemorial the insects of the coleoptera family have been greatly relished. Aelianus remarks that "the king of the Indians does not eat the fruit of the palm tree like Greeks, but he regales himself on a worm that grows in the interior of the tree."

This worm, well known to naturalists, is the grub of a sort of weevil. It is white, very fat and grows about three inches long. It is still eaten in India, where it is known as the palm worm.

The same worm is found in the West Indies, and, according to the naturalist, Labat, it is considered a great delicacy there. It is eaten raw, roasted or in a cake. Sometimes the natives fry out the fat, which is considered the most delicious relish in the country. The Spaniards call them gusanos.

In South Carolina, says M. Daguin, the natives hunt the chrysalises of wasps, which they consider an exquisite dish. The natives of Guiana eat the wasps.

EDIBLE BEETLE AND GRUB.
(Considered a Delicacy in the West Indian Islands.)

Many ants, like bees, are honey bearers. These insects abound in Mexico. Rev. Father Cook has written an interesting study of one species of these ants abounding in that part of Colorado known as the Garden of the Gods. This ant is known as Myrmecocystus melliger. Certain individuals develop an abdomen as large as a grape. These are the honey bearers. The Indians devour these insects eagerly.

The termite, commonly known as the white ant, is cooked and eaten with joy by the people of Guiana. This is the most destructive of all the ants. It is not, strictly speaking, an ant. Maj. Serpa Pinto records the love of certain South African tribes for ants as a diet. Sir Samuel Baker, governor of Equatorial Africa, mentions that he tried fried white ants and found them very good.

Prof. Koenig considers white ants a very strengthening nourishment, but exciting and should be used with caution.

Grasshoppers, sacred to the ancient muses, have long been a favorite food. Aristotle tells us that the Greeks ate many varieties of grasshoppers.

Prince Henry of Orleans relates that along the banks of the Mekong river, in Siam, young women hunt water grasshoppers, which they afterward sell in the market.

Locusts are as much relised as grasshoppers. The plague of locusts mentioned in the Bible doubtless consists of edible insects, but there were more of them than the Egyptians could digest at one time.

The Arabs of the region where the children of Israel tarried so long still gorge themselves with locusts. Diodorus Siculus informs us that the Ethiopians pot them and preserve their locusts with saltpetre.

Many species of flies of the same family as our common house fly are eaten. David Livingstone says that the people along the Congo make cakes out of small flies. They tasted to him like caviar.

The Filipinos eat water beetles and worms, not to mention bats, which happen not to be insects.

Has a Ten-Foot Bed.

Miss Ella Ewing, the Missouri giantess, has erected a house for herself in Govin, a town in that state. The doors in her home are ten feet high, and the ceilings 15 feet. Her height is eight feet four inches, and she sleeps on a bed ten feet long.

GOLF.

The next scheduled event on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club course will be the finals for the Holiday cup Saturday, November 23. Next Saturday the weekly play for the Mellick and Golf Committee cups will be the attractions. It is possible that the play for the Mellick cup may go by default. This was the case last Saturday, not a single member entering the competition. The last scheduled event for the season is the play for the Gilbert cup, which will take place Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock. It is likely, however, that other events will be arranged for Thanksgiving Day, and this will probably close the active season at the club.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

Musical Treat to be Given at Church of the Holy Cross Tomorrow Evening.

All lovers of good music are interested in the harvest festival to be given in the Holy Cross church tomorrow evening, when Gaul's "Holy City" will be given by the combined choirs of Holy Trinity, (N. Y.) and Holy Cross churches under the direction of William E MacClymont, organist and director. There will be a chorus of fifty voices and the soloists include the following well-known singers: Mrs E. W. Buckhout, soprano; Mrs. Katherine Hanford, contralto; A. B. Pattou, tenor; Edwin H. Lockhart, basso.

The festival will be free to all who have tickets, and these can be obtained either of Mr. MacClymont or Rev. Mr. Downey. A collection will be taken during the evening. It is earnestly hoped that there will be a liberal response as much expense has been incurred in arranging the affair.

All persons holding tickets will be admitted prior to 7:55 o'clock. At that time the doors will be open for the admission of all who have not tickets.

Not Good at Fanmaking.

It seems that as a nation we are not good at fanmaking. That we were being slowly overtaken by other countries in ships, guns, locomotives and ready-made bridges was known. But in fans we make no show at all. The historian of the fan, M. Octave Uzanne, is a Frenchman, and the expert makers of the article are French and Spanish. It is said that when it was desired to present a fan of English make to the lady mayoress a year or two ago, it took several firms to make it, and a dozen accounts had to be opened. Nevertheless the master of the Fanmakers' company has been talking cheerfully of the art and of the efforts the company is making to foster its practice at home. Two exhibitions have been held, and a third is under consideration. Ten years ago the company did itself the unusual honor of admitting a woman, Lady Charlotte Schreiber, to membership.—London Chronicle.

Swans Vs. Cattle.

In a pond near Hampstead Heath, in England, a crowd of spectators watched a pair of swans defeat a dozen cattle that had come down to wade into the refreshing coolness. The swans objected and as if by preconcerted signal moved upon the cattle. Men have had occasion to attest to the power that is in a swan's wings. They strike blows that not only have force but a great deal of accuracy in delivery. The birds charged directly at the heads of the bullocks, slapping right and left. The attack was furious. Some attempt was made by the cattle to resist, but inside of three minutes they were in flight, half blinded by the birds' wings. They made no effort to return, either, until the cowherd near by came and drove the birds out.—Chicago Tribune.

Where Defects Prove Genuineness.

The best test for rubies and emeralds, says Dr. Immanuel Friedlaender of Berlin, is microscopic examination. Nearly every ruby and all emeralds have many defects which are so characteristic that the expert can recognize them, and which cannot be produced in artificial stones. True emeralds have minute inclosures of liquids and curious dendrites. Sapphires also show peculiar netlike formations. A magnifying power of 100 diameters suffices to reveal the characteristic defects. For diamonds a good test is that of hardness. A genuine diamond cannot be scratched by a file or by quartz, and a ruby should stand a similar test; but emerald is not much harder than quartz, and cracks easily. —Youth's Companion.

Frogs Do Not Swallow Water.

At a recent meeting of naturalists at Chicago Mr. H. H. Donaldson described experiments with frogs, tending to show that those animals rapidly absorb water through the pores of the skin. He emphasized the fact that frogs never take water by the mouth. On being exposed for several hours to dry air, the frogs experimented with lost 14 per cent. of their weight, but this was nearly all regained within 24 hours when they were placed in a dish containing water only one centimeter in depth.—Youth's Companion.

"But where are all these things that I see on the bill of fare?"

"They're on the bill of fare, sir."—Harlem Life.

PRESENTED A CANE.

Gift for W. C. Smith From Warren Engine Company.

In recognition of his services in drilling the company in the past, Warren Engine Company, at an adjourned meeting, last evening, presented a handsome gold-headed cane to Capt. William C. Smith. It was decided to disband Relief Hose Company, No. 3, which has been an auxiliary of the Warren Company, inasmuch as there is said to be no need for its services.

WANT PLAINFIELD AS PART OF SOMERSET.

Bill to That Effect Will Probably Be Introduced Into Legislature This Winter.

IT IS AN OLD QUESTION.

PRESS COLUMNS WILL BE OPEN TO COMMUNICATIONS ON SUBJECT.

Three Ways Whereby the Consolidation of City and Borough May Be Accomplished—Bill Will Start a Discussion.

What promises to be of very much interest to Plainfield and North Plainfield is a bill that is very likely to be introduced into the New Jersey Legislature this winter. It will provide for the changing of the boundary line between the counties of Union and Somerset so that the city of Plainfield shall become part of Somerset.

Just what the fate of the bill will be it is impossible to say. It is exceedingly doubtful if the bill gets through, as there is sure to be no end of opposition from many quarters. It will, however, serve to renew the interest in the subject of consolidation of the city and borough which would naturally follow should the bill pass the Legislature.

Nearly everybody admits that it is inevitable that sometime in the future the two municipalities will be consolidated. This can be accomplished in either one of three ways, by the formation of a new county including parts of Union, Somerset and Middlesex, by the changing of the county line so that either Plainfield will be part of Somerset county or North Plainfield part of Union county. There is nothing new in any of the three propositions. They have been discussed on both sides of the brook for several years. To accomplish the desired end, however, one plan will have to be followed. The introduction of the bill paves the way for a formal discussion and gives everyone a chance to take sides in the matter.

Some of the advocates of the consolidation scheme in both Plainfield and North Plainfield have decided that the most feasible of the three will be to transfer Plainfield to Somerset county. The bill, which will probably be introduced in the Legislature this winter, will be the result. While the borough voters decided two years ago that they were against annexation, some have since taken a different view of the situation. How far that change of heart extends it is impossible to say. There are many arguments in favor of the plan and many others against. The subject will have to be thoroughly sifted before anything is done.

There seems to a diversity of opinion considering this question. The advocates of the annexation of Plainfield to Somerset county consider that they have some strong arguments. The columns of The Daily Press will always be open for expressions of opinion regarding the subject and communications of reasonable length will gladly be printed.

Many of the delegates left for their homes on late trains in the afternoon, while others remained to see the city.

SECOND NIGHT OF BAZAAR.

MUCH LARGER CROWD ASSEMBLED AT SAENGERBUND HALL.

Friends of St. Joseph's Church Were Out in Force—Programme Was Well Received—Closes Tonight.

With a much larger crowd attending, the second night of the fair and bazaar in Saengerbund Hall in aid of St. Joseph's church, was ushered in last evening.

There was no variation of the programme as rendered the preceding evening, but the songs, Grecian and Delsarte movements given under the direction of Mme. Merzell Bartlett were just as enthusiastically received. The farcical sketch, "A Japanese Tea Party" had lost none of its charm and the dances and drills were longly applauded.

Liberal patronage was extended the various booths and the revenue from this source will amount to a neat sum. More articles have been added to the tables and there is no fear of any of them becoming depleted.

At the conclusion of the entertainment, last evening, dancing was taken up and continued until midnight. Music was furnished by Professor O'Reilly.

The fair will terminate this evening and the managing committee promises a number of novelties.

His wife is an English woman of culture, who also writes and translates for her husband. Monsieur Blouet is in America for a three month's tour and every date is filled. To hear him November 18 will be a treat and as there is no other attraction in town for that evening, a full house is expected. Tickets for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy.

JOHN ADELMANN NAMED AS SPECIAL MARSHAL

Some of the Borough Councilmen Feared They Would be Criticized.

OVER THIS APPOINTMENT.

TROUBLE WAS THAT HE HASN'T BEEN A RESIDENT TWO WEEKS.

Slight Change Made Regarding Bond Issue for Somerset Street Improvement—Only These Two Matters Came Up at the Meeting.

John H. Adelmann was appointed a special marshal at a meeting of the Borough Council last evening, called for the purpose of filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Marshal Emmons. The only other matter which came before the body for action was an amendment to the resolution concerning the issuance of bonds to meet the expense of improving Somerset street.

With the exception of Messrs Nichols and Swackhamer, all the members were present when Mayor Smalley nominated Mr. Adelmann for the position of marshal. Councilman Charles Lee, chairman of the police committee, made a few remarks favorable to the man whose name was presented.

Some questioning on the part of Councilman James P. Northrop revealed the fact that the residence of the candidate within the borough has been of very short duration. Mr. Northrop hastily glanced over some borough ordinances and abruptly moved that the Council go into a committee on the whole, which meant that the audience, composed of two reporters, should vacate.

Some of the members of the councilmanic body were evidently in fear of criticism on account of the appointment. A question on the part of the Daily Press reporter after the adjournment of the executive session, called forth some emphatic remarks on the part of Mr. Northrop, as to the duties and policies of a reporter, especially when he is asked to make no comment on proceedings.

Mr. Adelmann is not a voter in the borough and has lived there scarce two weeks. It was apparently this fact that certain members did not desire to have circulated. It is understood that he is made only a special marshal on this account, the law not permitting his appointment as regular marshal until he shall become a legal voter.

It was learned that after the Council had gone into executive session, action was taken on the resolution passed at the last regular meeting which fixed the rate of interest on the bonds to be issued, in connection with the Somerset street improvement, at five per cent. The change make the resolution read: "At not more than five per cent." This alteration will permit a rate lower than first intended and thus a saving to the taxpayers.

SHORT IN ACCOUNTS.

Alleged That Investigation Into Treasurer's Books in a Local Union Showed Trouble.

Unusual extravagance on the part of a West End hod carrier, who is the treasurer of a local labor union, led to an investigation at a recent meeting which, it is alleged, resulted in finding a shortness in his accounts to the extent of $185. The matter has not yet been brought before the union in an official way for definite action, but it is thought the amount will be made good.

Suspicion was first directed towards the official by the liberal manner in which he invited his friends into West End bar-rooms and expressed indignation when they modestly asked for five cent drinks. This would in itself indicate a short streak of prosperity, but when he discarded his ancient clay pipe for clear Havana cigars, the investigation was ordered.

It has played to the largest attendance in the entire history of the house, not excepting even the famous run of "Hazel Kirk" or "A Trip to Chinatown," which continued there for two solid years. "The Liberty Belles" is a genuine musical novelty. It is a pure and wholesome entertainment which especially delights ladies. Seats may be ordered by letter addressed to L. P. Phelps, business manager, Madison Square Theatre.

Manager Proctor's New York theatres offer for the week of November 18 a diversity of dramatic presentations of exceptionally attractive character. There is the grave little "Mme. Butterfly" at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, "Blue Jeans," with all its original sensational effects, at the Fifty-eighth Street, the farcical mirth of "My Friend from India" at the Fifth Avenue, and the rousing comedy effects resulting from "What Happened to Jones" at the Twenty-third Street. After having it carefully analyzed, we can state that Asthmalene contains no opium, morphine, chloroform or ether.

There is nothing like Asthmalene. It brings instant relief, even in the worst cases. It cures when all else fails.

The Rev. C. F. WELLS, of Villa Ridge, Ill., says: "Your trial bottle of Astamalene received in good condition. I cannot tell you how thankful I feel for the good derived from it. I was a slave, chained with putrid sore throat and Asthma for ten years. I despaired of ever being cured. I saw your advertisement for the cure of this dreadful and tormenting disease, Asthma, and thought you had overspoken yourselves, but resolved to give it a trial. To my astonishment, the trial acted like a charm. Send me a full-size bottle."

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO.
Gentlemen: I write this testimonial from a sense of duty, having tested the wonderful effect of your Asthmalene, for the cure of Asthma. My wife has been afflicted with spasmodic asthma for the past 12 years. Having exhausted my own skill as well as many others, I chanced to see your sign upon your windows on 130th street, New York, I at once obtained a bottle of Asthmalene. My wife commenced taking it about the first of November. I very soon noticed a radical improvement. After using one bottle her Asthma has disappeared and she is entirely free from all symptoms. I feel that I can consistently recommend the medicine to all who are afflicted with this distressing disease.
Yours respectfully, O. D. PHELPS, M. D.

DR. TAFT BROS. MEDICINE CO. February 5, 1901.
Gentlemen: I was troubled with Asthma for 22 years. I have tried numerous remedies, but they have all failed. I ran across your advertisement and started with a trial bottle. I found relief at once. I have since purchased your full-size bottle, and I am ever grateful. I have family of four children, and for six years was unable to work. I am now in the best of health and am doing business every day. This testimony you can make such use of as you see fit. Home address, 235 Rivington street,

POSITIVE PROOF.

Should Convince the Greatest Skeptic in Plainfield.

Because it's evidence in Plainfield. It's from a citizen, perhaps a neighbor.

Investigation will confirm it.

Mr. Jepp Zensen, of 728 West Front street, pattern maker by trade, says: "For a year I had a sort of grinding pain across my back at times extending up to my shoulders, and there was a lameness over my kidneys and severe headaches. When I stooped I always felt dizzy and sometimes was fairly blinded. In the mornings I felt stiff and sore until I got some exercise. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised in my city paper and so highly recommended for kidney complaint that I went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They did me a great deal of good. From my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I cannot do otherwise than endorse them."

For sale by all dealers. Price, 50c. a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

A GIGANTIC COMBINE

Railroad Merger, With Capital of $400,000,000.

THE LONG FIGHT IS NOW SETTLED.

Northern Securities Company Incorporated In Trenton—Great Transcontinental Systems, Save One, Will Be Under One Control.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Northern Securities company has just been incorporated at Trenton. This company is the outcome of the negotiations for the settlement of the Northern Pacific war. It will, it is understood, hold the stock of the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroads. The capitalization is given as $400,000,000.

The incorporators are George F. Baker, Jr., 258 Madison avenue, New York city; Richard Trimble, 53 East Twenty-fifth street, New York, and Abram M. Hyatt, Allenhurst, N. J.

Mr. Baker is a son of Mr. George F. Baker, the president of the First National bank. He is assistant cashier of that bank. Mr. Trimble is secretary of the United States Steel corporation. Mr. Hyatt was probably used as an incorporator because he is a resident of New Jersey.

The company takes advantage of the new law allowing holders of two-thirds of stock to manage the business. The company is authorized to acquire stock, bonds and securities of corporations.

The charter issued is for the second largest combination ever given legal existence by the state of New Jersey. The largest was the steel corporation, with an authorized capitalization of $1,000,000,000. The fee received by the secretary of state for the charter was $80,000 and was paid by the legal representatives of J. Pierpont Morgan. The check for the charter fee was signed by Mr. Morgan personally.

The entire $400,000,000 is in common stock of the par value of $100. The incorporators each hold 100 shares of the stock. The certificate sets forth that the objects of the corporation are to acquire by purchase, subscription or otherwise and to hold as investment any bonds or other securities of indebtedness or any shares of the capital stock created or issued by any other corporation or corporations, association or associations, of the state of New Jersey or any other state, territory or country.

There is no specific mention that the corporation is to acquire the Northern Pacific and other roads that created the panic the past summer and which have not been taken up by the Morgan syndicate, but none of the charters granted by New Jersey to the great corporations ever gives the specific purpose of the concern.

News of the incorporation of the New Jersey corporation was received in Wall street with great satisfaction, although it was not immediately reflected by any substantial market movement. This latest development in the western railway situation marks one of the most momentous events in the railroad history of the country.

It means that actual community of railroad interests will prevail in the west and that the difficulties growing out of the Northern Pacific corner precipitated by that company's successful effort to control the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy have been adjusted to the satisfaction of Mr. Morgan, Mr. Harriman and every one else interested either directly or indirectly.

The trouble arose when the Northern Pacific secured the Burlington and Quincy. The Union Pacific, through Mr. Harriman, asked Mr. Hill for a voice in Burlington and Quincy control. Mr. Hill, it is understood, refused, and then ensued the dramatic struggle for the Northern Pacific control. Mr. Morgan was in Europe at the time, and the fight was continued until it culminated on May 9, the most memorable stock corner that ever happened.

The incorporation of the new company means that the great transcontinental railway systems, with but one exception, are now, or will be shortly, under joint control. Those systems are the Union Pacific, which controls the Southern Pacific; the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern. The only independent transcontinental system is the Atchison, which also has an outlet on the Pacific coast. While no definite announcement has yet been made, it is believed that the new holding company will take over the Northern Pacific's $80,000,000 of common stock and the Great Northern's preferred, of which $125,000,000 is authorized and of which $123,000,000 is outstanding.

It is thought that Northern Pacific common will be taken on a basis of $150 a share and Great Northern at about $200 a share, but these are not official figures.

This plan would require about a capitalization of $400,000,000, but incorporation figures are always elastic, and they may be increased at any time to take in other securities.

A member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. said last night that the Northern Securities company would be the holding company of the various roads interested, but he declined to say what railroads these were on the ground that the details are not yet completed and premature publication might interfere with their consummation.

"You may rest assured," he said, "that all difficulty over the Northern Pacific matter is now at an end, and this has been accomplished in a manner highly satisfactory to all concerned."

ROBBER IDENTIFIED.

Suspect Arrested In St. Louis Led Montana Holdup.

INDICTED ON SEVENTEEN COUNTS.

Express Messenger and Fireman Who Were on Great Northern Express When Robbery Occurred Recognize Their Assailant.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—The November federal grand jury has returned indictments against Harry Longbaugh, alias John Arnold, the mysterious Montana train robber, suspected, and his companion, Laura Bullion. Each was indicted on seventeen separate counts.

Charles H. Smith and Michael O'Neill, express messenger and fireman respectively of the Great Northern flier that was held up last July near Wagner, Mon., arrived here yesterday afternoon and identified the suspect under arrest as Harry Longbaugh, the man who held up the train and took the lead in intimidating the train crew and blowing open the express company's safe, from which nearly $100,000 in unsigned bills of the National Bank of Helena were stolen. O'Neill says that Longbaugh is the man who climbed over the tender and held up Engineer Jones and himself and then superintended the blowing up of the safe. His recollection of the episode was so vivid that he could describe the two revolvers that the robbers used. The police say they are the weapons that were found on the prisoner when he was arrested.

Smith and O'Neill came to St. Louis accompanied by Mr. Elliott, general manager of the Great Northern Express company, in whose care the bank notes were when stolen.

Longbaugh did not flinch when the identification was made. He merely looked at the men and sniffed contemptuously. Chief Desmond asked Longbaugh his real name.

"I will talk when the time comes," was the reply, and not another word could the chief get out of the stubborn prisoner.

Chief Desmond says he now thinks that the suspect's real name is Ben Kilpatrick. A "tall Texan" answering the suspect's description was implicated in several train and bank robberies in the west, and he was known as Kilpatrick.

Elliott, O'Neill and Smith will remain in St. Louis a day or two. The men may testify in the United States court if it shall be decided to continue the prosecution here.

Since this last evidence has turned up it may be deemed best to take him to Montana for trial, where the offense of train robbery is punishable by death.

Rousing Reception to Irishmen.

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 14.—John E. Redmond, Hon. Patrick A. McHugh and Hon. Thomas O'Donnell, the Irish envoys now touring this country, were given an enthusiastic reception in Worcester last night. They addressed an audience that packed Mechanics hall to the doors and over which Mayor P. J. O'Connell presided. Before the meeting the visitors were escorted for a short street parade by the Emmet guards, Companies A, B and C of the A. O. H., the Knights of Father Mathew and the St. Paul's cadets. Plenty of red and green fire was burned, and a lively demonstration marked the progress of the party to the hall.

A Fight With Outlaws.

GUTHRIE, Okla., Nov. 14.—A pitched battle was fought between deputy sheriffs and citizens on one side and a band of outlaws on the other near Pickee, a village of Kay county. The officers state that the outlaws are some of the escaped prisoners from Leavenworth, Kan. The battle was the result of an attempt made by the outlaws, who were masked, to steal several horses in that neighborhood. Several of the combatants are reported to be wounded. Officers in all sections of Oklahoma have been notified, and the escape of the gang seems impossible.

Philadelphia Election Decided.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The official count of last Tuesday's election in Philadelphia county, just completed, reveals the fact that G. Harry Davis (Rep.), one of the candidates on the Union party ticket for judge of common pleas court No. 5, was elected over Henry Budd (Dem.), his colleague on the Union ticket. The unofficial figures last week apparently elected Budd by about 400 plurality, but the official count shows Davis to have received 195 votes more than Budd.

Tides Calculator Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Albert Matthew Ford, the tide calculator, is dead at Salem, N. J. Mr. Ford was the son of the late David and Lydia Ford of Philadelphia. Several years ago he went to Salem and devoted the remainder of his days to studying the tides. At his own expense he issued and distributed each month tide cards for the Delaware river and bay, for Atlantic City and the entire outer coast of New Jersey.

Aid Asked For Fire Sufferers.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 14.—A cold, drenching rain yesterday added to the discomfort of thousands of persons made homeless by the fire at Thomas, W. Va. Mayor Jones has sent out an appeal for aid, and Governor White has been telegraphed for help.

BERLIN, Nov. 14.—Andrew White, the American embassador, who sailed from New York on the Deutschland Oct. 31, stopping in France, has arrived here and resumed his diplomatic duties.

MANY LIVES LOST IN STORM.

Scotland's Telegraphic Communication With London Cut Off.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The heavy gale all over the United Kingdom continues. Telegraphic communication with Scotland has been cut off completely.

A French vessel has been wrecked off Sunderland and nineteen lives lost.

A three masted schooner disappeared outside Sunderland. It is believed that the crew must have perished. It is estimated that 116 lives have been lost on the British coasts since the gale began.

The loss of twenty-three lives from the revenue cutter Active, which was wrecked off Granton, is included in this estimate.

The mailboat Nord, for Dover, which ran into the pierworks lightship at Dover, was towed back to Dover. She passed the night in the Downs. The crew of the lightship had a marvelous escape in their own small boats.

Terrific Storm In Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 14.—A terrible gale and snowstorm, lasting for the past twelve hours, has done great damage throughout Denmark. There is five feet of snow here. Eight vessels are reported driven ashore, two have been wrecked, and many lives have been lost.

FIGHTING IN LUZON.

Sixteen Insurgents Killed—Another Engagement Reported.

MANILA, Nov. 14.—Captain Hartman's troop of cavalry has had an encounter with 200 riflemen and 200 bolomen, who were in trenches double flanking the Batangas road. The troopers killed sixteen and captured nine riflemen. The Americans had two wounded.

Captain Hartman continued the chase of the rebels, who were routed completely. Captain Hartman reports hearing heavy firing to the eastward, where Major West's column is engaging another band.

The first seven persons arrested under the new sedition law are Filipinos.

Lost Girl Found.

UTICA, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Miss Margaret McConnell, who became lost in the Adirondack woods on Monday morning, was found at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Frederick Rafter, one of the searchers, seven miles from White Lake. Miss McConnell was in a state of utter collapse when found. She had traveled more than thirty miles since she disappeared Monday morning and had suffered the utmost hardships. She will probably recover, though at present she is in a precarious condition. She spent the two nights and three days in the Adirondack forest without anything to eat, wandering aimlessly about.

Dawson to the Klondike by Rail.

VICTORIA, B. C., Nov. 14.—The Colonist says: "The proposed railway from Dawson to the Klondike mines will be built next summer. This line will probably extend up Bonanza creek, with branches up the several gold producing creeks, the main line continuing from Bonanza up El Dorado and across the divide to Indian river. The object of the promoters will be to extend the line at a very early day as far as Stewart river and ultimately to the mouth of the Pelly, opposite Fort Elk Creek. It will in all probability form part of an all Canadian route to Dawson."

Great Shortage of Cars.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—The Record-Herald says that between 15,000 and 20,000 freight cars are needed for immediate use by the railroads centering in Chicago. Not since 1886 has the freight car shortage been so great as at present. Not a day passes that the railroads do not refuse large amounts of tonnage because of their inability to obtain cars in which to haul the freight. Orders have been issued by every line here prohibiting cars from going off their own lines, and every effort is being made to have cars unloaded at destination with the least possible delay.

Escaped From Sing Sing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Henry Delaney, serving a four year term at Sing Sing for burglary under the name of Henry Norton and sentenced from Brooklyn in July, 1900, has escaped from the prison. He was employed in the kitchen and in some way got possession of a suit of clothes belonging to Warden Johnson. In this suit, which was of dark blue cloth, the coat being cut in Prince Albert style, Delaney managed to pass the guards without question.

Cottonseed Oil Men Indicted.

JACKSON, Miss., Nov. 14.—The federal grand jury for the United States court of the southern district of Mississippi last night indicted a large number of cottonseed oil officials, alleging violations of the federal statutes of July 2, 1900. This state denounces combinations, and the indictments allege that the oil mill officials have conspired in writing to control the prices of cottonseed and cottonseed products.

Wood Praises Santiago.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, Nov. 14.—Major Barbour, chief of the department of sanitation of Santiago, entertained General and Mrs. Wood and their party, together with many local guests, at dinner in the Cafe Venus here last night. Speaking at this dinner, General Wood said Santiago was his first love and that it showed more improvement than any other city in the world since the time he was here as governor.

TO BE TRIED FOR MURDER.

New Developments In the Rathbun Sensation.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—New features in the case of Newell C. Rathbun, held here on a charge of desertion from the United States army and suspected of the murder of Charles Goodman, who was found dead in bed last Thursday in a Jeffersonville hotel, were Rathbun's statement to the police that his wife at Little Rock had known of his plan to defraud the insurance company, though not of the murder feature of it, the decision to have the corpse of the supposed Goodman returned to Jeffersonville for an autopsy and identification, the announcement from Washington that the war department had decided to send Rathbun to Jeffersonville and turn him over to the Indiana authorities and the refusal of the local authorities to send Rathbun to Little Rock to testify at the coroner's inquest over the corpse that was shipped there. They say Rathbun will go nowhere except to Jeffersonville, where he is to be tried on the charge of murdering by poison Charles Goodman. A telegram was sent to Little Rock asking that the corpse be returned to Jeffersonville.

A telegram has been received from the chief of police of Evansville, Ind., stating that Goodman was a resident of Cripple Creek, Colo., where he was a brass worker. When asked for his opinion as to the claim made by Mrs. Rathbun that the corpse shipped to Little Rock was that of her husband, Rathbun laughed and remarked, "Maybe it is his corpse."

This is all he would say on the subject.

Dr. Benson Doolittle, proprietor of a drug store in Jeffersonville, close to the undertaking establishment of E. M. Cotts & Sons, was in the morgue when the alleged discovery was made that Goodman's stomach contained laudanum. The fumes were unmistakable, he insisted. Coroner E. M. Coots walked into the room and instantly said: "Laudanum! Open the windows and doors."

Dr. Doolittle says he will swear laudanum was in Goodman's stomach in large quantity.

Sued on Neely Bond.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—Martin C. Fosnes, director general of posts of Cuba, has brought suit in the United States circuit court here against the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company of Maryland, which, he says, bonded Charles F. W. Neely, former chief of the bureau of finance of the department of posts of the island of Cuba, in the sum of $5,000. Mr. Fosnes claims that amount of damages. The bill says that Neely was appointed to his position on Jan. 7, 1899, and that he had charge of the bureau of finance until Feb. 23, 1900. The guaranty company, it says, on Feb. 23, 1899, bound itself in the sum of $5,000 for the faithful discharge of his duties. The bill alleges that Neely did not faithfully discharge his duties and did not account for and pay over to the proper officials the moneys which came into his hands.

Extension of Civil Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—About 200 employees in the executive branch of the rural free delivery service of the postoffice department will be brought into the civil service by an order of President Roosevelt which, it is understood, will be issued within a week or two. These employees are clerks, special agents and inspectors. The 6,000 rural free delivery carriers throughout the country will not be brought into the civil service under the same order, but they will be taken in at some later date. Their civil service status is likely to be somewhat different from that of those first included, though the form of the regulations governing them have not yet been passed upon.

A Stormy Labor Meeting.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 14.—After a turbulent meeting the Kentucky Federation of Labor adopted resolutions denouncing ex-Congressman Breckinridge for sentiments expressed Tuesday night, expelling from the federation and convention and denouncing Vice President F. C. Leaming of the federation and president of the local typographical union, who arranged the meeting and presided, and calling another meeting for Thursday night, at which the views of the dissatisfied delegates may be expressed publicly.

Heavy Snowstorm In Maine.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 14.—The snowstorm which began in a mild sort of a way late Tuesday developed in strength during the night and yesterday raged with all the fierceness of a midwinter downfall. Reports from Greenville state that some sixteen inches of snow had fallen there and about a foot along the main line of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad.

MAJOR SMITH WINS.

Decision of Supreme Court Vacates Dismissal Order.

UNSOLDIERLY CONDUCT AT SAN JUAN

This Was the Charge Against the Colonel of the Seventy-first New York Which Has Caused a Controversy.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The appellant division of the supreme court has handed down a decision in favor of Major Clinton H. Smith of the Seventy-first regiment, New York city, in the legal proceedings which he instituted to prevent the carrying out of the order ousting him from the national guard. The decision vacates the determination of a board of examiners of the national guard which recommended that he be dismissed from the service, which determination was approved by Governor Roosevelt.

This controversy is of long standing, and the decision of the appellate division of the supreme court is based on an opinion of the court of appeals rendered six months ago when a decision was rendered by that court in another phase of this case. The court of appeals at that time held that Major Smith had not been given full opportunity by the board of examiners to properly present his side of the case.

The effect of the decision of the appellate division is that the decision of the board of examiners that he be dismissed from the service be overruled.

This case has attracted attention in military circles ever since Governor Roosevelt issued general order No. 7, May 1, 1899, directing Major Smith to appear before a board of examiners to be examined as to his capability and general fitness for service in the national guard as a commissioned officer.

On the 10th of May following the board met in this city and recommended his discharge from the service for unsoldierlike conduct at the battle of San Juan. The governor approved the adverse findings of this court and issued a special order directing that Major Smith be dismissed from the service. A writ of certiorari was subsequently obtained from Judge McAdam, and it brought up for review the orders issued in the case, the findings of the board, the approval of the governor and the special order discharging him from the service. The court vacates the determination of the board of examiners and revises order No. 37.

A Trust Company For Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 14.—Renewed reports in financial circles attribute to the Standard Oil group the purpose to establish a large trust company here which will do a banking business and provide means for financing large American undertakings, these being continually growing in importance. Present Mexican legislation does not contemplate trust companies as they are known in the United States, and there would have to be extensive changes made in existing laws to give full scope to a trust company. This, it is now said, is under consideration by the government. Old established banking interests resent the increase of American financial influence and probably will make opposition to changes in the laws favorable to the new American financial project.

The Glass Industry.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—A preliminary report on the glass industry of the United States for the census year of 1900 as compared with 1890 has been published by the census bureau. The report places the number of establishments in the country at 355 and the value of products for the year at $56,539,712. The capital employed in the business amounted to $61,423,903 and the wage earners numbered 52,818. The wages paid were $26,544,148, and the cost of materials used was $16,731,009. There was a gain of 37 per cent in the product over 1890 and of 49 per cent in the capital invested.

The Chinese Bank Project.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Mr. Rockhill's attempt to interest American capitalists in the establishment of an international bank in China is bearing fruit. Walter G. Oakman, president of the Guarantee Trust company of New York, has called on Secretary Hay to talk upon this subject. There seems to be a desire on the part of other capitalists to know how far they can count on the aid of the United States government in the maintenance of the bank, and the secretary of state is referring the inquirers to the secretary of the treasury.

Engineers Entertained In Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Nov. 14.—The members of the American Institute of Mining Engineers were taken out to view the drainage works of the Valley of Mexico yesterday. They are being most hospitably entertained. At night a concert and reception were given in their honor at the Chapultepec restaurant by the merchants, bankers, railroaders and engineers of the city. Today they will make a trip over the Cuernavaca and Pacific railroad to Cuernavaca as guests of Colonel Hampson, the president of the road.

Large Order For Cars.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—The board of directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad company has authorized the construction of 4,000 additional freight cars. A total of 19,000 cars are to be delivered to the company during the next year. Owing to the great demand for freight cars, the Pennsylvania Railroad company will enlarge the car building plant of the Cambria Steel company, which it controls. By Jan. 1 the car plant at Johnstown will be able to turn out twenty cars a day.

Concerning State Taxation.

Some interesting facts are brought to light by the annual report of the State Board of Taxation which was presented to Governor Voorhees Tuesday afternoon. While there are so many figures in the report that the average reader grows frightened at the very sight of them, they really tell an interesting story.

Not going into details, it can be stated that there is a substantial increase in the taxable real and personal property of the State. The report calls attention to the fact that there is a decrease in the rural sections of the State while the increase is confined to the urban counties. This is pointed out as emphasizing a deplorable fact, that the selling value of New Jersey farm lands is steadily waning.

Another important point brought out by the report is that the list of exempt properties is steadily growing. The total amount now reaches over $100,000,000, an increase of somewhat over $4,000,000 more than last year's figures. The board recommends that the State Legislature take action and redraft the laws on the subject, reducing the exemptions to a strict limit.

There is another recommendation on the part of the board that some change be taken regarding the exemption of cemeteries which are conducted on purely speculative purposes. The report declares that there is no reason why they should not pay taxes as well as any other corporation.

The Merchants' Protective Association, of Hazelton, Pa., has taken a radical step which is likely to find favor in the eyes of many merchants. The business men who compose it have agreed not to advertise hereafter in programmes of any sort but to confine their advertising entirely to the newspapers. This can only be accomplished by united action as the merchants know that individual effort in that direction is usually likely to result in a boycott of more or less force, depending on the strength of the organization soliciting the ad. Many hundreds of dollars is thus spent which, if devoted to judicious newspaper advertising, would bring far better results to the merchant.

During the course of her travels across the country, "Miss Calanthe," the Pythian goat, will probably be called upon to figure in many remarkable happenings. So far, however, her stay in Plainfield has been the most eventful. One of her most ardent worshipers was haled to a justice's court for offending the ordinances of the Board of Health by keeping a domestic animal in the city limits without a permit. For a practical joke, it was positively an exciting one.

Some great improvements have been made to Saengerbund Hall this fall which will increase its capacity in providing for entertainments. The Gesang and Turn Verein will mark the opening of the enlarged hall with an elaborate entertainment. Particularly satisfactory is the knowledge that the improvement has been paid for.

The musical treat, which takes place at Holy Cross church tonight, is really an excellent one. The fact that the organist of that church holds a similar position in New York makes this service possible and incidentally gives the lovers of good music a chance to hear some.

The announcement of the transfer of Rev. John A. McGeary, who has been assistant at St. Mary's church, to Jersey City, was a general surprise. The appointment of his successor will be awaited with much interest by the attendants at that church.

The firemen of Westfield were kept busy a few evenings ago. The alarm bell insisted on ringing nearly all night, but never a trace of fire could they find. It proved to be a break in the fire alarm circuit.

A white fence between the tracks at the North Avenue station may be the means of saving more than one life. The fence, at present, is quite difficult to see at night.

The Westfield Republican has suspended publication, its interests having been disposed of to the Union County Record, of Elizabeth.

STRONG BILL.

Which Marks Opening Entertainment at the Casino This Evening.

Miss Sally Frothingham Akers and her "singing girls," who make their first appearance in this city at the Casino tonight, seem to win friends and favors wherever they go, which is as it should be, for their singing is a work of art. To shut one's eyes and listen is to believe that some sentient instrument is making harmony, so perfectly controlled and in such accord are the various voices, but to shut one's eyes would be to blot out a very pretty picture of womanly loveliness.

Last week the quartette sang before Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry and gave them such delight that the tragedian tendered them the freedom of his theatre for a week.

These talented women appear in conjunction with Charles Battell Loomis, the author-humorist.

Mr. Loomis' selections will be from his own popular works—"The Fourmasted Cat-boat," "Yankee Entertainments," etc. It is said of this talented man's readings and impersonations that "the recollection thereof will for many a day bring a smile to the lips and puckers around the eyes of those who heard him." Surely, he who makes two smiles broaden where only one appeared before is as much to be blessed as the traditional man who doubled the blade of grass. Mr. Loomis is a humorist because he cannot help it.

CHARTER MEMBERS THERE.

Reunion Held By Anchor Lodge Members Tuesday Evening.

A reunion was held by seven of the twenty-one charter members of Anchor Lodge, F. and A. M., Tuesday evening. These members are J. Wesley Johnson, S. D. Affleck, Dr. Harris, of Bayonne; T. B. Rogers, S. C. Peck, Charles Crawford and Dr. H. H. Lowrie. Vocal and instrumental music, as well as speeches, were the features of the entertainment part of the programme. A supper was served under the direction of W. W. Warnock.

The Children's Friend.

You'll have a cold this winter. Maybe you have one now. Your children will suffer too. For coughs, croup bronchitis, grip and other winter complaints One Minute Cough Cure never fails. Acts promptly. It is very pleasant to the taste and perfectly harmless. C. B. George, Winchester, Ky., writes "Our little girl was attacked with croup late one night and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. We gave her a few doses of One Minute Cough Cure. It relieved her immediately and she went to sleep. When she awoke next morning she had no signs of hoarseness or croup." L. W. Randolph.

Walked Into Plate Glass.

The large plate glass window in the door leading into the office of Elston M. French & Co., on North avenue, was broken last Friday evening, by a man who was about to enter the place and did not notice the door. The person causing the damage cut his right hand severely and also tore his clothing. Fortunately the glass was insured.

WOULDN'T ACCOUNT FOR IT.

THAT WAS WHY WM. ELLIOTT WAS ARRESTED LAST NIGHT.

He Frankly Explained to The Court He Had Been Drunk And Didn't Know Where He Got Broom.

Did William Elliot, of Oak Tree, purloin the broom which he was carrying when arrested by Roundsman Mattox on Park avenue at 2 o'clock this morning? That was the salient point which cropped out in today's session of the city court, when the Oak Tree man was arraigned on the specific charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Mattox testified that Elliot became abusive when questioned in regard to the broom and straightway related his opinion of cops in general and the roundsman in particular. The prisoner admitted he might have been drunk but declared that he and the broom were heading for Oak Tree peaceably. As far as the broom was concerned he declared he didn't tell where he got it and never would because he didn't know himself.

City Judge Runyon thought that was a good argument and allowed Elliot to resume his interrupted journey to the suburbs.

TALKED OF YALE.

Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards Addressed the City High School This Morning.

The pupils of the Plainfield High School were entertained by an interesting talk delivered by Rev. Dr. William R. Richards in the assembly room of the Stillman High School building this morning. Dr. Richards' subject was "The Bi-centennial of Yale."

After giving a short sketch of the early history of the institution and the place it occupies as a seat of learning, the speaker dwelt at some length upon important and instructive facts connected with the recent celebration at New Haven. It was one of the best talks that the pupils have had the good fortune to listen to in some time past.

WHAT'S TO COME.

City Judge Runyon Gave Youthful Offender an Idea of His Possible Future.

In order to give him a foretaste of what he may expect unless his wayward tendencies are curbed, City Judge Runyon, this morning, sentenced William Roy, alias "Wyckoff," a young colored boy to twenty days in the county jail. He was a prisoner only last week and was released on his promise to behave himself.

Yesterday he was arrested by Patrolman Saffron, who caught him shooting crap in the rear of French's mill. His mother also reported that William had not been home since Sunday and the court decided that a little severity at the start might not be misplaced.

Some Impressions.

We found the farmers of East Tennessee almost as much at sea about the wheat growing as most of us are about cotton. They seem to feel as if their all depended upon wheat. They are slow to catch on to the evident provision of Providence. No country could be better adapted by nature to cattle-growing, hog-raising and live stock of every kind from a race horse to a bantam chicken. But we found the packing houses of the west doing a good business in beef and bacon. While they should be packers and shippers, they were many of them buyers. With a home market for much and railroad and river facilities for shipping, they should be exporters, not importers. Poultry, eggs, butter, cheese, pork, lard, bacon, beef, hay and grain all in constant demand all around them and a heaven-blessed country for producing them should make these people rich and happy.

We of the south need to study farm economics.—Dixie Farmer.

—Scotland for many years held the record for the highest mill chimney in the world, but now the Silver Works Co., of Antwerp, has beaten that record with a shaft 410 feet high.

Blisters by Suggestion.

Hypnotic suggestion enables us to control processes which are ordinarily beyond the reach of the will. For instance, blisters have been produced in highly sensitive subjects by simply touching the part with the finger or some inert substance and suggesting the presence of a strong irritant.—Journal of Physical Therapeutics.

Proof.

Hamlet de Shakespeare—Well, perhaps I might mention the fact that I am slightly deaf—the result of so much applause, you know.—Harlem Life.

A Spirited Illumination.

Staggers (coming in at two o'clock a. m.)—Look out o' thish window, m'dear, and see the glorious aurora borealish.

Mrs. Staggers (waking out of a sound sleep)—Window? That's a mirror you are looking into, and the aurora you see is your own highly decorated rum-soaked mug.—Harlem Life.

Insanity in French Army.

The Scheme That Failed.

"I say, Gaddesby," said Mr. Smith, as he entered a Peebles fishermonger's with a lot of tackle in his hand, "I want you to give me some fish to take home with me. Put them up to look as if they've been caught today, will you?"

"Certainly, sir. How many?"

"Oh, you'd better give me three or four—barbell Make it look decent in quantity without appearing to exaggerate, you know."

"Yes, sir. You'd better take salmon, eh?"

"Why? What makes you think so?"

"Oh, nothing, except that your wife was down early this morning, and said if you dropped in with your fishing tackle and a generally woebegone look, I was to persuade you to take salmon if possible, as she liked that kind better than any other."—London Answers.

Things That Might Be Bettered.

This may be the age of steel, steal, progress and reform, but we are not improving in some lines with commendable speed. The eyelets in our shoes are round, but we still wear flat strings. The loops on our summer trousers are placed so low that the waistband protrudes above the belt. The strap on the neckband of our shirt is long enough to let our tie slip over the top of the collar. Our hats are made for bullet-headed men; those with long heads must have a new purchase stretched out of shape to obtain a fit. The only kind of bachelor's buttons that are not utterly worthless grow wild in the fields of the United States. The country youths used to carry them in their pockets to divine their success with their sweethearts.—N. Y. Press.

Painters Mixed in Their Flags.

The cleaning of the frescoes at Westminster abbey has called attention to the fact that in the picture of the pilgrim fathers there the good ship Mayflower is flying the union flag that first came into existence in 1800, says a London newspaper. This anachronism is not uncommon in naval pictures. In the collection of all paintings of sea fights at the British Royal United Service institution there are many pictures of battles fought before 1800 in which the British ships fly the union flag of to-day. The explanation of this anticipation of history is that some years ago, when the older pictures were cleaned and restored, the restorer "corrected" the flags by painting in St. Patrick's red cross over the white St. Andrew's cross of Scotland.—London Mail.

Lion Versus Buffalo.

When Purvis and Clark were exploring in Africa, north of the Zambesi, they saw a large lion stalking a buffalo bull and a calf. In his native wilds the lion is no particular hero, while the African buffalo is one of the most dangerous of the wild things. So Purvis and Clark watched. Suddenly the bull charged, but the lion sprang to one side for an instant, then leaped for the calf. Before the beast could strike, however, the buffalo bull had turned again and charged. The lion, on the defensive, struck at his assailant, but the blow had no effect on the enraged creature. One of the long, cruel horns caught the lion in the side and the creature, weighing more than 400 pounds, was thrown ten feet into the air.—Chicago Tribune.

WILL WEAR THEM OUT.

British War Secretary Expresses Determination to Conquer Boers.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Mr. Brodrick, the British war secretary, speaking at a banquet given in London in his honor by the City Carlton club, declared that the Boers were hiding their tracks by murdering Kaffirs behind them.

"Lord Kitchener wired today," he continued, "that the cold blooded murder of natives had been frequent of late and that two dead natives, their hands tied behind their backs, were found Nov. 10 at the bottom of a mine shaft."

Later in his speech Mr. Brodrick said Great Britain now had 42,000 Boers in custody in the concentration camps and on various islands and that 11,000 more had been killed or wounded or had left the country on parole. He added that he believed the number of Boers now in the field was about 10,000.

"The country has set its teeth and intends to go through the process of wearing down," he exclaimed. "We intend to provide Lord Kitchener with fresh troops to replace the tired ones. Only today a certain colony made an offer of help."

Zinc Plant Swallowed Up.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 14.—In a cavein at Oronogo, near here, the entire plant of the Auroro Mining company, one of the greatest zinc producers in the district, was swallowed up. No lives were lost. The plant comprised a hundred ton mill, office building and engine house, all of which were engulfed, together with six gravel cars and an immense tailing pile. On entering the ground a short time before the cavein occurred workmen heard the timbers cracking and signaled to be drawn up. The last man had reached the surface only a few minutes before the timbers collapsed, the earth yielded and with a crash the whole plant sank into the abyss. Further caving is feared, and work in that vicinity has been suspended. It is impossible to estimate the damage.

Confederate Daughters In Session.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Nov. 14.—The eighth annual convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Mrs. Edwin Gardner Weed of Jacksonville, Fla., presiding, has convened here. About 175 officers and delegates are in attendance, representing every southern state and several from the north. Yesterday morning's session was principally of a social nature. The business session in the afternoon was entirely taken up with a settlement of a controversy over the representation to be allowed each division incident to the report of the credentials committee.

For the ten months ended with October the increase in the imports of merchandise over the corresponding period in 1900 was $32,789,891, and during the same period there was a decrease in the exports of $3,393,596.

"Fighting Bob" For Asiatic Station.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Secretary Long intends to send Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans out to the Asiatic station to be second officer in command. Both Admiral Remey, commander in chief of that station, and Admiral Kempff, junior squadron commander, will return soon to the United States, having served out the term allotted for service in Asiatic waters. This will leave Rear Admiral Rogers, now in senior command of the squadron, in supreme command.

Turkey Settles Another Claim.

VIENNA, Nov. 14.—The numerous grievances of Austria-Hungary against Turkey have been settled by the agreement of the porte to pay 90,000 francs to the Armenian victims and by adjusting financially and otherwise the wrongs arising from eight other matters of dispute. These include the claims of the Oriental Railway company. It was the purpose of Austria-Hungary to adopt effective measures had the porte not yielded.

Father Wieczorek, a priest at St. Hedwick's Polish Catholic church in this city, whose funeral occurred yesterday, has bequeathed to the parish his entire fortune, amounting to nearly $100,000. It is composed largely of Toledo real estate. The deceased priest came from a noble family in Poland.

BOICE, RUNYON & CO.,
PARK AVE. AND RAILROAD

In relating her experience with Ripans Tabules, a young lady telegraph operator living in Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I am taking Ripans Tabules and can say a great deal for them. I suffered everything which comes with indigestion—pains in my back, side and breast and palpitation of the heart; I would swell after eating and be so bloated that I could scarcely work. My eyes would become dim and spots would appear before them; my skin was in a bad condition and full of yellow spots. I could not eat pastry or rich food of any kind, and could not drink coffee, as it would cause palpitation right away. I often had to sleep in a chair. This was before I commenced to use Ripans Tabules. Last spring I was induced to try them by Mr. Walls, of the Walnut Street Theater, Philadelphia, he knowing that I was troubled so badly with indigestion and had spent so much money with doctors. I am only sorry that I did not try them sooner, as my health was completely broken down. I am glad to say that in five months there is a big difference in me, and even my friends ask what I have taken, and I say Ripans Tabules. Since I have taken them I can eat anything, even the richest kind of food, and can sleep at night and have a sweet taste in my mouth; but before using the Tabules I had a sour taste in my mouth and water brash and heartburn very badly. I mean to continue taking the Tabules and recommend them to my friends, as I have been doing in the past. I have very hard work to do, and I find that Ripans Tabules are the only things that give me relief, and I often send and buy some during working hours. You may use my testimonial if you wish, as all I am saying is the truth and I can not praise the Tabules too much."

WANTED—A case of bad health that RIPANS will not benefit. They banish pain and prolong life. One gives relief. Note the word RIPANS on the package and accept no substitute. RIPANS, 10 for 5 cents, may be had at any drug store. Ten samples and one thousand testimonials will be mailed to any address for 5 cents forwarded to the Ripans Chemical Co., 10 Spruce St., New York.

Dear Sirs—Two years ago I had very bad corns and callouses on my feet, I went to a chiropodist and paid him $5.75 for taking them off. In less than a month they were back again. I then tried your CORN CURE and used only three bottles, costing 45c, and am happy to say it has taken them off completely. They have not troubled me now for over a year. I consider your HEPBURN'S CORN CURE the best I have ever used.—Yours truly, R. O. RUNYON, 629 LaGrande Ave.

FANCY FURS.

Plain Effects Out of Style—New Fichus and Stoles.

Furs are more fancy this year than ever. Plain boas are going out of style and fancy scarfs and neckpieces, many of them fichu shaped, are all the rage. Flat stole effects are a prominent feature of every furrier's showcase, and the most stylish of these are finished at the lower edges with small tassels made out of the tips of the tails. Stoles of ermine reaching down to the knees are especially smart when banded with chevronlike settings of sable. These flat stoles are also worn knotted loosely over the breast, the ends falling to the bottom of the skirt. Sable, mink, broadtail, caracal, chinchilla and ermine are the most popular furs. In Paris the entire broadtail costume promises to be a feature of the winter months. It is usually trimmed with a touch of turquoise blue or emerald green panne, with a collar of coarse string colored lace. These broadtail costumes are usually made up with a blouse jacket and a tight fitting skirt with a flaring ruffle.

The picturesque hat and fichu wrap in the illustration are of glace silk and sable. The fichu is cut in the ordinary fashion and is banded with strips of the sable. It is lined with white silk. The large hat is of black panne trimmed with a scarf of the glace and a drooping black ostrich plume.

COLORS AND TRIMMINGS.

Reds and Browns High In Popular Favor.

Browns and reds lead the autumn colors. The browns this year are warmer and richer in tone than those used last season; the same is true of the reds.

Velvet of a deeper shade than the material and braid are both used as trimming on the tailor mades, while other welcome innovations are silk cords twisted or knotted and embroidered silk buttons of the late seventies. Hairy cloths, such as mohair and zibeline, are much seen, and these are trimmed with bands of plain cloth of the same color. Often, too, the reverse side of the cloth is used for strappings, and in a cloth of good material this is very effective.

In spite of the many objections of short women three-quarter length coats continue to increase in popularity. In some instances a short coat has its length increased by a postillon back laid in deep plaits, which are stitched down flat half way. This style, however, requires a most excellent figure.

Our illustration shows a dressy black broadcloth tailor made. The blouse jacket is trimmed with strappings of panne and a deep yoke of black broadtail. The collar and pointed revers are of ermine. The belt is of folded black panne. The skirt is made with a wide gored flounce and is trimmed with strappings of the black panne.

The hat is of pale blue panne and black tulle, with a facing of ermine.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Faraway Tremor From Big Guns.

The interesting question of the greatest distance at which cannon can be heard having been raised in Nature, Mr. J. W. Mallet writes, from personal experience, that during the bombardment of Charleston, S. C., by the Federal forces in 1863 the firing of the heavy siege guns was heard as far inland as Augusta, Ga., a distance of 122 miles, while at sixty miles the sound was accompanied by a general feeling of tremor.

More Light on Aguinaldo's Claims

Edwin Wildman's History of the Doings at Hong-Kong in 1898.

TWO things have recently given new interest to Aguinaldo and his connection with America's troubles in the Philippines. One was the statement made by himself that he had at no time received any assurances from Admiral Dewey that might be construed as meaning Filipino independence, and the other is the appearance of a new volume by Edwin Wildman, vice consul at Hong-Kong under his brother, the late Rounsevelle Wildman.

In this new volume, entitled "Aguinaldo; a Narrative of Filipino Ambitions," published by the Lothrop company, of Boston, Mr. Wildman relates much that is now history of the Filipino president's connection with our campaign against Spain, and how the connection came to be. But while it is history, it is just at this time interesting history.

Referring first to the first of the Filipinos who left Hong-Kong for the Philippines, those who accompanied Admiral Dewey on his memorable voyage that ended with the destruction of the Spanish fleet in Manila bay, Mr. Wildman says:

"The arrangement having been completed, they prepared and sent over to Cavite by an English mail steamer a manifesto which reached the hands of some of the faithful, and was distributed over the island. The junta took it for granted that our intentions toward Cuba applied also to the Philippines, and they therefore wrote to their countrymen that the Americans were fighting for the freedom of Cuba, and that they must not be behindhand in the struggle for liberty. They were assured that the Americans had no ulterior motives, and that they would not attempt to foment a revolution against the United States. His highest expressed aim was to throw off the Spanish yoke, and that, once accomplished, he would abide by the decision of the United States as to the ultimate disposition of the Philippines."

The world knows the story of the sending of Aguinaldo to Manila on the dispatch boat McCulloch. It was after his arrival at Cavite May 19, 1898, that he avowed Admiral Dewey promised the Filipinos their independence, and on this point there has long been a controversy which Aguinaldo's own statement to the effect that the admiral did not, in any way, promise the Filipinos independence, has at last cleared up. On this point the author quotes Admiral Dewey as saying:

"'When Aguinaldo came to Cavite he never thought of independence. That was an idea that crept into his head later. His one desire was to be allowed to fight that he might destroy the power of the friars. I allowed him to go ashore, but he was very uncertain as to the kind of reception he would get. He was so timid that I had to urge him to remain after he got there. The assertion that I made Aguinaldo any promises is a pure fabrication. Why, at that time, Aguinaldo never thought of asking, much less demanding, promises, or presuming to dictate terms of any kind. He is not a smart fellow in a general sense, but the shrewd half-castes in Manila made use of him to further their ambitious schemes, for Aguinaldo was supposed to bear a charmed life. * * * If we could have had 5,000 men there early enough there would not have been any trouble—we could have controlled them absolutely. The unfortunate part of the whole situation was that the importance of Aguinaldo at that time was enormously magnified, and he soon realized it. His advisers, Mabini and his associates, were also quick to understand and take advantage of it. I have seen Mabini's statement that I asked Aguinaldo if he could control the island, in which case I offered to arm his forces. I never asked him any question of the kind, nor made him offers and promises. Most of Mabini's assertions are absolutely false, and what truth he writes is misleading."

CAPITAL BUILDING OF THE PHILIPPINE REPUBLIC AT MALOLOS.

It was on June 12, 1898, that Aguinaldo organized a formal government, and after that time he visited Consul Wildman, and the author asserts, "told him all hoped the Philippines would be held as a colony of the United States of America." But six days later, on June 18, came the decree in which he assumed the role of dictator, and proclaimed the independence of the Philippine republic.

In one of the last communications passing between Aguinaldo and Consul Wildman the insurgent chieftain, according to the author, asked:

"Why should America expect me to outline my policy for the present and future and fight blindly for her interests when America will not be frank with me? Tell me this. Am I fighting for annexation or for independence? It is for America to say, not me. I can take Manila, as I have defeated the Spaniards everywhere, but to what use? If America takes it, I save my men and arms for what future has in store for me. Now, good friend, believe me, I am not both fool and rogue, but the interests of my people are as sacred as yours."

To this Consul Wildman is said to have replied:

"If you stand shoulder to shoulder with our forces, and do not allow any small differences of opinion and fancied slights to keep you from the one set purpose of freeing your island from the cruelties under which you claim it has been groaning for so many hundred years, your name in history will be a glorious one. There are greater prizes in the world than being mere chief of a revolution. Whatever the final disposition of the conquered territory may be, you can trust to the United States that justice and honor will control all her dealings with you. The first thing is to throw off the Spanish yoke. Do not let anything interfere with that."

Mr. Wildman has made an interesting story of the rise and fall of the Filipino republic into which he has put much that is new, much that is interesting, of the ambitions and personalities of the men who were behind it. Whether he has proven beyond the old doubt that the officials of this government did not promise the Filipinos independence is a question that different minds will decide in different ways, but his book comes at an opportune moment.

patriots that Divine Providence was about to place independence within their reach, and that the Americans, not from mercenary motives, but for the sake of humanity and the lamentations of so many persecuted people, would extend their protecting mantle over their country. They urged the insurgents not to be induced to fire upon the Americans, but rather to blow their own brains out than to fire a shot or treat as enemies those who are liberators."

Aguinaldo was not with the first batch of banished insurgents who returned to the Philippines. In fact, Aguinaldo, as we know, was in Singapore when the American fleet left Mirs bay for Manila, and did not reach Hong-Kong until a week later.

When Aguinaldo finally reached Hong-Kong it was under an assumed name. His presence in the city was kept a secret from practically all his countrymen, for with them he was not popular. Mr. Wildman tells the story of the squabbles among the Filipino leaders with graphic interest. He tells of the unpopularity of Aguinaldo because of his financial policy in regard to the division of the funds Spain had paid them in the settlement of their last revolution—some $400,000, deposited in the Hong-Kong bank, and to draw which Aguinaldo's signature alone was necessary. Of this Mr. Wildman says:

"Aguinaldo was unpopular with some of the chieftains because of his departure from Singapore. He was even accused of intending to desert them and go to Europe, and, with the prize money, live in luxury, his signature alone being good at the Hong-Kong bank. Furthermore, he had held the purse strings so tight that the refugee leaders had been denied the fruits of their banishment. They had been compelled to live in cheap Portuguese boarding houses, and their pocket-money had been so restricted that it was with difficulty that they were ever able to raise cigarette money."

Artachio, a chieftain of the province of Ilocos, was the most formidable contestant of Aguinaldo for insurgent leadership. The contest between the two lasted for some time until both sides finally told their troubles to Rounsevelle Wildman, the American consul general.

Finally Mr. Wildman told them he would not be a party to their squabbles. That they must retire and decide the matter among themselves, away from the consulate. This they eventually did, and Aguinaldo triumphed over Isabello Artachio."

After this decision had been reached Aguinaldo visited Consul General Wildman. Of this visit the author says:

"He related the story of the tyranny of the friars, and expressed his desire to fight until his people were free from oppression. He made no demands for independence, but said he hoped the Americans would not leave the Filipinos alone to their fate, but would annex the Philippines and protect them against the Spanish. He promised Mr. Wildman that he would fight with the
